MISTRUSTS KAISER.

British Premier on the Issues.

Insists that the Germans Must be Satisfied with Their Own Soil.

"We are Near the Summit of Our Greatest Hope," He Declares.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 4.—David Lloyd George, the British Premier, in the presence of a distinguished gathering, representative of all parties, which met this afternoon in Queen's Hall to mark the third anniversary of the declaration of war, enunciated the aims for which the Entente Allies are fighting and indicated the only conditions under which they would consent to a suspension of hostilities with the Central Powers.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the National War Aims Committee and was probably the greatest patriotic demonstration of the year. The expectation had been that the Premier's speech would be a most important one.

The Marquis of Crewe, leader of the Liberal party in the House of Lords, was chosen to preside. He was supported by the archbishop of Canterbury, twenty members of the government and 100 members of Parliament. Baron Sonnino, the Italian Foreign Minister, and Nikola Pachitch, the Serbian Premier, were invited guests.

A QUESTION.

The Premier on opening his address asked what would have happened if Great Britain had not entered the war. He answer this question by saying:

"Europe would have been at the mercy of a cruel military power. Russia would have disintegrated sooner. France would have fought bravely, but might have been overwhelmed. America's Monroe Doctrine would have been treated as a scrap of paper. The fact today is that we have checked the ambitions of Germany."

As Foreign Minister Sonnino of Italy and the other representatives of the Entente Allies reached the platform the gathering rose and cheered again and again, while the playing of the national anthems of the Allies aroused tremendous enthusiasm.

Premier Lloyd George's appearance was the signal for a remark-

FIFTY BILLIONS RUSSIA'S DEBT.

More Money Circulating than Before the War Started.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PETROGRAD, Aug. 4.—Russia's national debt, which at the beginning of the war was 9,000,000,000 rubles, is now estimated at 50,000,000,000, according to a report of the Imperial Bank. Its statement shows that the money circulation is 13,646,000,000 rubles, against 1,633,000,000 at the beginning of the war.

ALL FAITH IN RUSSIA.

Root Tells of His Mission.

"America Must Muster Manhood for War of Democracy vs. Autocracy."

Says the Slavs are Struggling with Problems Even We Have not Solved.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

A PACIFIC PORT, Aug. 4.—"I have abiding faith that Russia, through trial and tribulation, will work out, create and perpetuate a great, free, self-governing democracy," Elihu Root asserted in an impassioned speech at a luncheon in honor of the return of the American mission from Russia.

Professing a sincere admiration for the kindly character of the Russian people, "considerate of the rights and feelings of others, and with a high capacity for self-control and noble idealism, heading always in a better way toward higher things," he pleaded for deep sympathy for the nation "which is struggling with the problems that we have been studying for 140 years and have not yet solved."

MUSTER IN.

Declaring that "America must muster its manhood with democracy against the power of autocracy," he said, "there will be death, widowed homes, sacrifice and suffering, doubt, almost despair. In the end will rise a great free country, remade in the spirit of our fathers, competent to accomplish its divine mission and carry liberty and justice throughout the world.

"Don't argue about why we are in the war, but realize that the time has now come when American liberty, American justice, American independence and freedom is the stake for which we must fight."

Basil Soldatyen Koff, special envoy of the Russian government, accompanying the mission, expressed the gratitude of the new republic for the help and sympathy extended to it by America. Asserting that the two needs of the new Russia were time and friendly sympathy, he said to his hearers: "Be confident."

PEOPLE WILL RULE.

Charles Edward Russell, writer and sociologist, said: "Be of good cheer in regard to Russia. If democracy survives in the world the people of Russia will rule."

Of the task before America he said: "If a man now says 'My wages before my country,' or 'My balance sheet before my country' or 'my class or creed, or association before my country,' he is not an American. America is in peril, the flag we love is in danger. No question is worthy of consideration until we settle the question of whether democracy shall live. Democracy hangs by a thread. Its existence depends on the union and utmost determination of the United States of America."

James Duncan, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, after paying a high tribute to the behavior of the Russian people during past months, declared earnestly:

"This is no time to squabble over incidentals. The workingmen of America are back of the President and the government. The fight now is between autocracy and democracy."

Maj.-Gen. Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the United States Army, responded to calls by a declaration that the American army that is to be sent to France will go under better auspices, better equipped, better officered and better cared for than any previous American army has ever been on going into battle.

THE BALLOT BOX.

"I have seen the ballot box in the discarded palace of a grand duke," said Charles Edward Russell, publicist and sociologist, amid thunderous applause, "and men and women alike were voting. What American women have been trying for years to get, the Russian women obtained in a minute."

"Never, however, has democracy been in so great danger," he asserted vehemently, as he appealed for unity, devotion and self-sacrifice by Americans to preserve liberty. "Life without liberty is not life," he said.

WILL OUST I.W.W. FROM ARKANSAS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

FORT SMITH (Ark.) Aug. 4.—Stern measures to oust I.W.W. and Working Class Union agitators from the United Mine Workers and thereby put an end to the strike evil in the local district No. 21, have been decided upon by John P. White, international president of the union miners, according to John Wilkinson, president of the local district. Local strikes have delayed coal production seriously in some sections of the district in recent months and they are charged directly to I.W.W. and W.C.U. agitators, according to President Wilkinson.

TROOPS OF ALLIES LEAD DUCKS' LIVES.

STEADY DOWNPOUR OF RAIN HALTS ADVANCE.

Spirit of the Soldiers Continues Good and They are Now in Strong Points Along the New Front Recently Wrenched from the Germans.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, Aug. 3.—The Entente Allied troops along the new battle front today were leading a semi-aquatic existence. The rain, which began to fall late Tuesday, continued in a steady downpour.

Had the Allies delayed their attack one day more it is doubtful whether they would have been able to achieve all the objectives which they wrested from the forces of Crown Prince Rupprecht just before the rain began.

The spirit of the troops, however, continues good, and they now are in strong points along the new front, from which it will be difficult to dislodge them.

Stories continue to arrive showing the wonderful organization evidenced by the British troops in Tuesday's offensive and the fighting spirit they exhibited. One incident of the battle shows the elan and initiative of the troops sent against the Germans. Between St. Julien and Frezenberg was a section of farm land some two miles in width which presented extraordinary difficulties. The fields behind the trenches were filled with cement defenses ranging in size from those able to contain two machine guns, to larger ones which took on the characteristics of forts.

To add to the difficulties, most of the concrete structures were surrounded by ditches and the land about them was marshy and hard to traverse. The British divided into sections and stalked the German forts with bombs and rifles, surrounding each in turn and bombing it until the occupants either were killed or surrendered. The fighting here was severe, but the attacking troops did not waver and continued their work until they had swept beyond this fort-studded field, leaving nothing but ruins behind them.

An interesting fact has been learned—that at least a part of the German infantry now is wearing steel armor, which covers the chest and stomach. This armor is in the form of a sheet of steel which is attached to the shoulders and gives the wearer the appearance of having just stepped out of the Middle Ages.

Specimens of the armor found on German prisoners have been examined and found to be vulnerable to rifle fire. On the whole the armor seems a very unsatisfactory protection, and its weight renders the movements of a man fully accoutred most difficult.

BRIG.-GEN. WANKOWSKI RETIRED FROM SERVICE.

Veteran Head of the California National Guard One of Nineteen Officers in this State Who Fail to Pass the Examinations — Lieut.-Col Kreuger Another—President will Appoint Successors.

ON THE eve of the drafting of the California National Guard into the Federal service, which occurs today, nineteen officers of the guard, including Brig.-Gen. Robert Wankowski, two regimental commanders and the Assistant Adjutant-General, were yesterday notified that they had failed to pass the professional military examinations held under the direction of the Bureau of Military Affairs to determine if they should retain their ranks and be continued on duty. The nineteen officers are retired to private life, while those who passed will enter the Federal service with the remainder of the State troops, beginning today.

THOSE WHO FAILED.

The nineteen notified of their failure are: Brig.-Gen. Robert Wankowski, Los Angeles; Col. William H. White, Second Infantry, Chico; Col. Leon C. Francis, Fifth Infantry, Oakland; Lieut.-Col. Herbert R. Fay, San Diego, Assistant Adjutant-General; Lieut.-Col. Sidney H. Sayre, Second Infantry, Sacramento; Lieut.-Col. Ralph L. Kreuger, Coast Artillery, Los Angeles; Maj. F. A. Marriott, Fifth Infantry, Palo Alto; Capt. Walter A. Scott, Fifth Infantry, Oakland; Capt. Leo W. Marden, Coast Artillery, Los Angeles; Capt. Thomas J. Golding, Coast Artillery, Los Angeles; First Lieutenant Alfred W. Hazen, Coast Artillery; First Lieutenant Stanley A. Leddy, Second Infantry, Watsonville; First Lieutenant Arthur H. Drew, Second Infantry, Fresno; First Lieutenant Harry W. Holman, Second Infantry, Hanford; Second Lieutenant Charles A. Reynor, Battery C, Field Artillery, Stockton; Second Lieutenant George H. Day, Coast Artillery, Los Angeles, Second Lieutenant William V. Keltz, Second Infantry, Richmond; Second Lieutenant Norman C. Wolff, Second Infantry; Second Lieutenant Emory C. Burroughs, Second Infantry, Fresno.

TO NAME SUCCESSORS.

The President will have to appoint to fill the vacancies.

The examinations consisted of both mental and physical tests and have been conducted in the last fortnight. The physical tests were of the most rigid nature and a considerable proportion of failures among officers of the higher grades was expected among military men of Los Angeles, who were familiar with the severity of the examinations.

EXCELLENT RECORD.

Brig.-Gen. Wankowski himself could not be reached last night. His retirement was the cause or regret among local military men, for he has been both prominent and popular in National Guard circles for over a quarter of a century.

Gen. Wankowski's military record dates back to 1891, when he enlisted in the Seventh California Infantry, then under the command of Brig.-Gen. W. G. Schreiber, retired, then a colonel. He worked up until he became a captain of Co. A, when the regiment was mustered into service and sent to the Philippines.

TO EXECUTE RESISTERS AS ARMY DESERTERS.

Stern Warning from Washington to Men Who Defy Draft Law.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Registered men who resist the selective draft law face military court-martial for desertion and the possibility of execution for desertion in time of war. "The whole military and civil powers of the Federal government," States, cities or counties, will be employed to bring them to book.

This was announced in a formal statement tonight by Brig.-Gen. Enoch H. Crowder, Provost-Marshal-General, in response to reports from North Carolina, Georgia and Oklahoma of anti-draft disturbances. As yet the power of the Federal government has not been invoked by the Governors of the three States nor by the agents of the Department of Justice.

The only official notice received in Washington of the disturbances was a telegram from the Governor of North Carolina, saying the registered men of two townships in that State might refuse in a body to comply with the summons for examination.

No official word came from Oklahoma, where the most serious situation prevails. It was believed the Governor, both in his official State capacity and as the direct agent of the President in the execution of the draft law, is confident that order can be restored without military aid. There will be no hesitation, however, in employing Federal troops if they are needed.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

Gen. Crowder's statement formulated after conference with officials of the Department of Justice, follows:

"Press reports and other advices received indicate that in one or two widely separated districts individuals, misinformed as to the purposes of the law and misguided as to its result, are threatening forcible resistance to the draft.

"There is nothing to resist at this stage in the execution of the law. All male persons between the ages of 21 and 30 inclusive have been enrolled for military service. A preliminary call has gone forth to some such persons but the immediate and actual object of this call is merely to provide an opportunity for such persons, or for some one else in respect to them, to present to the government reason why they should not be finally ordered to report for military duty. If such persons do not appear and present these reasons, they have simply neglected to take advantage of an opportunity that was offered solely for their benefit. The failure of persons to take advantage of this opportunity does not interfere with the raising of the army and interests the government only as a punishable crime of omission. If they do not desire to make any such claims or, if for any other reason they fail to appear, their names are automatically posted as having been called and not exempted or discharged. Automatically also, they are inducted into the military service and made subject to military law. Failure to appear merely hastens the automatic process.

"When the time allowed for making these claims has elapsed, these persons will be enrolled as in the military service. They then will be ordered to appear as soldiers. From this point on they will be under the swift and summary procedure of court-martial. Failure to report for military duty when ordered to do so constitutes desertion. Desertion in time of war is a capital offense. Deserters may be apprehended by either civil or military authority, and after the mandate of the Federal government has gone forth the whole strength of the military arm of the government is available to apprehend deserters, if it is necessary to use such force.

"Demonstrations against local boards are simply futile strokes in the air. All records necessary to hold such persons are already on file at State headquarters and at the national capital, and since local boards have no occasion to use any force in simply offering a beneficial opportunity to registered persons, there is no field for resistance. If resistance is attempted later when the army seeks to apprehend deserters, it will instantly encounter troops of the Federal government."

IN PRACTICE.

In practice under Gen. Crowder's construction of the law registered men who do not appear for examination will be posted at the district boards as selected for military service as soon as the five-day period allowed them to put in an appearance after they have been summoned has elapsed. Two days more will elapse after their names reach the district board to await appeal action by the individual. They then will be posted to the Adjutant-General of the State as selected to fill the quotas of their district.

Orders for the mobilization of the selected men will be given some time during the present month. If the resister fails to obey that order he will be set down as absent without leave and the machinery will be set in motion to bring him in. When it is clear that he is wilfully absenting himself with no intention of reporting to the army, a charge of desertion will be placed against him. From that time on any civil officer who arrests him will earn a reward of $50.

PENALTY OF DEATH.

If found guilty by court-martial of desertion, the individual may be sentenced to death and only the President can save him from punishment.

Gen. Crowder believes that the resisters in Oklahoma and elsewhere are acting under a delusion, fostered probably by agitators, that they are conducting a political campaign against the draft, whereas the time for that passed when the registration was completed. The government takes no interest in their proceedings now unless they fail to report to their companies when called. There is no question involved of civil court or local juries. Thirteen army officers will pass on the cases of the men when they are brought to book and the armed strength of the nation is available to bring them to book.

AS TO ABETTORS.

As to those who are aiding or abetting the resisters, the situation is different. While the government will make no effort to bring in men who do not obey the summons of the local selection boards or attempt to enforce their attendance in any way until they have passed into the military status, it will use every energy to stamp out disorders designed to prevent the execution of the Federal laws. Such a step, however, would not be taken until the Governors asked for military forces to restore order.

Gen. Crowder also took action today to reduce the number of applications for exemptions, which news reports indicate are being filed. In a telegram to all Governors he directed that local boards be in-

TO FEED THE NEUTRALS UNDER A GUARANTEE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—An agreement will be shortly reached between the neutral powers and the export council regarding food shipments under guarantee of their non-export to Germany. Replies have been received from many neutrals to which the State Department sent requests for information regarding requirements and what assurance they were prepared to give that the food would not reach Germany.

The State Department's memorandum said that the United States held as its first duty the supplying of food to the Allies and that if this country undertook to supply neutrals, it must mean in many commodities, either a deprivation of the Allies, further sacrifice upon the part of the American people, or a diversion of labor and productivity from the necessities of war.

Neutral governments were asked to stimulate production of foodstuffs, secure all available supplies from other quarters abroad and eliminate wastes and excess consumption. Attention was called to the fact that if there are insufficient supplies for the American people and their Allies alone, the United States could not be expected to part with food supplies other than in such minimum amounts as would make up the deficiency in the food values arising after the most intensive endeavors by neutrals. In determining this minimum it was felt that the prewar imports are no longer a criterion of the necessities because more intense production and reduced consumption rendered such calculations inapplicable.

Neutrals were asked to calculate food resources as to value in protein, fat and carbohydrates and that the consumption be calculated upon a standard intake per capita. This would show the deficiency which must be supplied. Neutral countries were asked to give figures showing the stocks of grain, sugar, potatoes and dried legumes on hand, in transit or contracted for, and the production, consumption, importation and exportation since 1911. Similar statistics were asked concerning vegetable oils, perishable vegetables, live cattle, meats, fish, vegetable or animal fats and soap. Exports of metals, minerals, ores and their products, chemicals, textiles, clothing, timber and non-edible plant and animal products of all kinds were called for.

German Forces, Repulsed in the West, Still Slowly Advancing Against the Russians

The Great War.

MORE GAINS BY BRITISH IN FLANDERS SECTOR.

French Continue to Drive Wedge in the Lines of the Invaders.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

IN ITS review of the war dispatches for the past twenty-four hours the Associated Press says:

The Teutonic armies, still advancing although against increased resistance, on the eastern front, are slowly being forced back in the west by the pressure of the Entente masses.

Gains made by the British on the Flanders front on Friday when the village of St. Julien was re-entered were followed by an advance by the French on their front Friday night. Notwithstanding the continuing inclement weather French forces drove in beyond the Kortekeer cabaret, moving their lines forward, while their patrols pushed back German outposts and explored considerable areas in advance of the French positions.

Berlin announces an increase in the artillery fire to great violence at times on the Flanders front. Apparently the renewal of the great battle in all its fury is only awaiting the return of favorable weather.

The London War Office makes it clear that no shifting of British troops was found necessary to cope with the situation created by the German diversion of Thursday night near Monchy le Preux on the Arras battlefront through which inroads were made upon the British position on Infantry Hill. Attacks carried out the following day and night by the troops on the spot, the official statement announced, forced the Germans out and completely restored the positions.

The situation on the Russian front continues favorable to the Central Powers, but the Russians appear on the whole to be offering a stiffer defense, particularly along the eastern Galician border. At one point an energetic operation cleared the Austro-German forces from a sector of the east bank of the Zbrocz. Near Skala, the Teutonic troops were driven out of two villages.

The Russians continue to yield ground in Bukowina and in the Carpathians. They are engaged in a stiff battle with the enemy northeast of Kimpolung, however. Below Kimpolung the Russian forces are falling back on the Moldavia and have yielded the town of Watra to the Austro-German advance.

Berlin sums up the campaign of the last fourteen days in the east as having cleared all Galicia of the Russians, with the exception of a small strip of territory extending southeast from Brody.

On the Austro-Italian front, there is somewhat more activity. The Italian airmen are notably busy. They rapidly followed up their recent raid on Pola, carying out a second air attack in which great damage is reported to have been done this Austrian naval base.

GERMAN NIGHT REPORT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN, Aug. 4 (via London.)—The supplementary official statement issued this evening by German general headquarters reads:

"In Flanders there were artillery duels of variable intensity.

"In Bukowina and in the northwestern corner of Moldavia we made favorable progress."

Austro-German troops under command of Gen. Von Boehm-Ermolli yesterday crossed the Russian frontier to the northeast of Czernowitz, the Bukowina capital, says the official statement issued today by the German War Office. All of Galicia with the exception of a narrow stretch of ground from Brody to Zbaraz, northeast of Tarnopol, the statement adds, has been wrested from the Russians.

"Front of Archduke Joseph: The liberation of Bukowina is making rapid progress. Columns of our troops are pursuing the retreating enemy on the Czernowitz-Petruch-Kimpolung line in the river valley stretching toward the east.

"On the Moldavian front Rumanians attempted again without any success to put themselves in possession of Casinului by means of strong attacks.

"Front of Field Marshal Von Mackensen: On the lower Sereth the fighting activity increased.

"Macedonian front: There were no fighting actions of importance."

RUSSIAN REPORTS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PETROGRAD, Aug. 4.—North of Husiatyn, on the Russo-Galician frontier, the Austro-German rear guards yesterday were driven from their positions on the eastern bank of the river Zbrucz, says the official statement issued today by the Russian War Department. Thirty-three prisoners were taken and seven machine guns were captured.

Between the rivers Dniester and Pruth and in the Carpathians the Russian troops still are retiring to the eastward.

The Russian War Office statement says that a battle between Russians and Teutons is raging to the northeast of Kimpolung in Southern Bukowina. The Austro-Germans have occupied the town of Dona Watra.

BELGIAN FRONT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN, Aug. 4 (via London.)—In the course of last night the artillery fire on the Belgian front increased to greater violence at intervals, says the official statement issued today by the German General Staff, but no infantry attacks of great importance took place. In the Argonne German shock troops broke into the French positions southwest of Leintrey and returned with a great number of black French prisoners.

THE ITALIAN FRONT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

ROME, Aug. 4.—More important offensive actions were taken by the Austro-Hungarians on Thursday and Friday night against the Italian positions east of Vertoiba and on Monte Rombon, it was announced officially today. All the attacks failed.

Italian air squadrons last night again bombarded the Austrian arsenal and military works of Pola, the statement adds, causing great destruction and big fires.

GERMAN BARRAGE FIRE MAY MEAN NEW ATTACK.

Cannonading of Tremendous Intensity on Several Points Indicates Possibility of Attempt to Regain the Ground Wrested from Them on the First Day of Great Battle in Flanders.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, Aug. 4.—The Germans this morning were putting a barrage fire of great intensity on several points about the Ypres salient, thereby indicating the possibility of counterattacks in an attempt to regain the ground wrested from them on the first day of the battle of Flanders. As this dispatch was filed, however, no reports had been received that the enemy had launched an infantry attack.

Bellewaarde Ridge, just above Hooge, and Potijze, on the Ypres-Zonnebeke road, southeast of St. Jean, were under severe shell fire, as were positions farther north.

The rain stopped, at least temporarily, this morning and the sun was struggling valiantly to pierce the dense low-lying clouds which enshrouded the new battle front. There was a change of the wind for the better and some indications of clearing, but no weather prophet would stake his reputation on a prediction.

AT ST. JULIEN.

The reoccupation of St. Julien by the British yesterday was followed by one of the severest artillery duels developed since the first days of the drive. The British entered this place shortly after the advance begun Tuesday morning and held it throughout the day and night, but on Wednesday withdrew their lines into the form of a close salient about the village. Both combatants immediately concentrated a heavy artillery fire on the positions surrounding it, and St. Julien was turned into a "no man's land" unoccupied by troops of either side.

Yesterday forenoon the British increased the intensity of their gunfire with disastrous effect on the German batteries, and then, under cover of a heavy and effective barrage, sent the infantry forward to occupy the place and again strengthen their line. This area has been consolidated and the British this morning were established in a strong position.

GERMAN SHELLING.

The Germans have continued an intermittent shelling of the Allied forward lines and battery positions throughout the zone of the new offensive. A large number of fifteen and twenty-one-centimeter guns had been turned against the French on the left of the British, but the French positions are strongly held and the morale of the troops continues at the highest pitch.

Controls the Seas.

GERMAN NAVAL EXPERT ADMITS BRITISH POWER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 4.—Capt. Perseus, naval expert of the Berliner Tageblatt, in a review of the third naval year of the war, says the superiority of the British fleet, despite heavy losses, is great enough to justify its claim that it controls the seas. The German fleet is unequal to meet it.

The high seas fleet, in conjunction with the coast defense guns, submarines, mines, etc., will undoubtedly be able to beat off all attacks and keep the enemy from the coast, but he adds, warningly, German minds should give no room to views of an offensive activity of the fleet.

Capt. Perseus says that every intelligent German realizes that unrestricted submarining must be conducted with all energy until England realizes it is more profitable to discuss peace than to accept further losses, but, on the other hand, he warns against super-optimism for a too speedy success in the submarine war in view of the amount of world tonnage and the great shipbuilding possibilities available for the Entente.

structed to furnish to newspapers hereafter, from day to day, names of all registered men who apply for exemption, the grounds asserted to support such claim and the action taken by the boards. In cases of discharge for physical disqualifications this does not apply, as they are not cases where exemption is claimed, but are the result of rejection by a board.

EFFECT OF ORDER.

Officials believe the effect of this order will be to curb applications for exemption to a large extent. Men who do not have legitimate excuses are not expected to court the scorn of neighbors who would recognize the weakness of their pleas when published. Men whose cases are clear, however, and who are entitled to exemption, officials believe, will be glad to have their neighbors know their circumstances and that it is not lack of patriotism or fear which has prompted them to seek relief from military service. Exemption in such cases, officials declare, will be generally approved and the parents and relatives of boys who will be taken are entitled to know why the boys of their neighbors were not taken.

Far from regarding the progress of the selection process as slow, Gen. Crowder believes strides are being made. If reports were available tonight, he said, from each of the 4600 local boards, it would be shown that many thousands of men already have been passed and are now merely awaiting orders to join the colors. An accurate estimate of the number in this class is not obtainable.

CROWDER'S TELEGRAM.

Gen. Crowder's telegram to the Governors follows:

"The names of all registered men are on a list arranged in the order in which they will be called for military service. Wherever any registered person imposes upon a local board and improperly secures a certificate of exemption or discharge he advances the time of call of all other uncalled persons on the list.

"For this reason every registered person, and, to some extent, every person in the community is more or less directly interested in seeing that the true facts are brought to the attention of the government. For every local board a person has been designated who will receive information of such cases and take appeals to the district board or inform the local board.

"For this reason the public is entitled to know the grounds upon which claims for exemption or discharge are being asked by registered men.

"Local boards should therefore be instructed immediately to make available to the press from day to day the names of persons claiming exemption or discharges, the ground on which such claims are based, and, in general, the number of cases that are being disposed of by the boards from day to day. This instruction does not apply, of course, to those discharged on the ground of physical disqualifications."

REVIEW OF THE WAR FOR THE THREE YEARS.

Graphic Report of What has been Accomplished on Land and Sea.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

IN THE welter of the conflict, an Emperor of Austria-Hungary has died, full of years and of sorrow, a Czar of Russia, has stepped from his throne, and a King of Greece has lost his crown.

Not one of the Prime Ministers or Ministers of Foreign Affairs who conducted the diplomatic maneuvers preceding or immediately following the beginning of the war, in the six most important countries of Europe, is still in power. In Russia, Goremykin and Sazonoff are forgotten behind a line of successors, equally unstable. In France, Delcasse left the Foreign Office, and Viviani ceased to head the Cabinet, following the collapse of Serbia in the second autumn of the war. The tragedy of Rumania a year later contributed to the overthrow of Asquith, and his Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, in Great Britain. San Giuliano, of the Italian Foreign Office, and Salandra, the Prime Minister, have passed. Count Berchtold, Foreign Minister of Austria-Hungary in 1914 (the empire has no Prime Minister) has passed into oblivion, while Von Jagow gave up the management of Germany's Foreign Affairs last autumn. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the last of the group to lose his grip, has just gone down, despite the fact that he was not responsible to any elective body.

Ministers of war in the belligerent countries have not been more stable. Kerensky follows a long procession in Russia. France has had four War Ministers from Millerand to Painleve, inclusive, while Lord Kitchener, organizer of Great Britain's most marvelous war achievement, a volunteer army of some 4,000,000 men, sleeps below the waters of the North Sea.

History has as ruthlessly brushed aside most of the army commanders of the early days. Von Kluck, who led the Germans on Paris, is retired. Rennenkampf, with whom the Russians meanwhile swarmed into East Prussia, is a memory only. Sir John French has been recalled to England. That little group of generals who saved France and Europe at the Marne is decimated. Foch and Castelnau and Manoury are no longer in command, while Gallieni, worn out in the service of his country, was borne on his last journey through the streets of Paris on a sunny spring day in 1916. Even Joffre has been superseded in a military sense, though not as an idol of the nation. France still holds him as close to her heart as Germany possibly could hold Von Hindenburg—almost the only one of the war's early commanders to retain his military power—and Frenchmen would today drive innumerable nails to do Joffre honor, if it were customary for them to express affection for their heroes by a display of hardware.

EVENTS LEADING UP TO WAR.

Of course the assassination of the heir to the throne of Austria-Hungary, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, together with the Archduchess, in Sarajevo, Bosnia, on June 28, 1914, was not the cause of the world war. Most wars have both a cause and a pretext. The shooting of Franz Ferdinand by a Serbian fanatic belongs in the latter category. It was the immediate, definite happening upon which hinged all the events of the feverish month that followed, and as such will go down in history as the point of departure for the world war.

On July 23 Austria-Hungary sent an ultimatum to Serbia in regard to the Sarajevo tragedy. The moment this document, with its impossible demands, was made public intelligent men in Europe realized that the long-dreaded great war was at hand. Serbia made a brave attempt to satisfy her neighbor, yielding virtually everything except Austria-Hungary's demand to exercise judicial authority in Serbian territory. It was not enough, and on July 28 Austria-Hungary declared war on Serbia.

Russia had already given notice that she would not see a Slavic kingdom destroyed, and now began a partial mobilization. Thereupon Germany sent her an ultimatum, insisting that she rescind the mobilization order. Russia's answer was a general mobilization. Germany herself started to mobilize under an order proclaiming martial law and on August 1 she declared war upon the Czar.

France, as Russia's ally, began to mobilize on the day following, and without waiting for their country to declare war, German troops at once crossed the French frontier. Italy, coming to a swift decision, declared that the Triple Alliance did not obligate her to follow Austria-Hungary into a war of conquest, and proclaimed her neutrality.

On the same day (August 2) the Kaiser demanded passage through Belgium for his armies, hoping to buy the neutrality of Great Britain by promising her part of the spoils of France. Belgium refused the Kaiser's demand, and on August 4 he marched an army across her borders. That afternoon Great Britain, having failed to secure from Germany a promise to respect the international treaty guaranteeing the independence and integrity of Belgium, declared war on the Kaiser, while Montenegro, smallest of kingdoms, cast in her fortunes with her Slavic brothers in Serbia.

The general war, on the brink of which Europe had long trembled, had begun at last.

GERMANY'S MARCH ON PARIS.

Germany's plan was simple, and except for the unexpectedly sudden decision of England, and an unlooked-for power of resistance in Belgium, would not improbably, have been realized. The war lords of Germany planned to capture Paris by a swift, sharp attack from the north, before France could fairly gather her forces to resist it, and before Russia had got her army in movement, and then to turn and smite the Bear on the eastern frontier.

But the march through Belgium dragged. The natives, fighting the invader tooth and nail, held him at Liege until the middle of August. Meanwhile, Great Britain landed a small professional army on the continent, and France, which had risen as one man in response to the danger call from La Patrie, was mobilizing and equipping her forces. Even so, the German army ploughed its way steadily forward. Years of scientific war preparation now came to fruition. Germany had learned from Napoleon that artillery wins modern battles, and in number and size of guns, as well as in generosity of ammunition, she outmatched all the forces that were trying to stay her.

Swiftly, terribly swiftly, the German war machine cut its way southward from the Belgian frontier. It traveled 125 miles in twelve days, until finally it was within fifteen miles of the French capital. Paris by then had lost a third of its normal population, but it had not lost its banter or its smile. Though its streets were filled with dazed refugees from the north, there rested over it a spirit of serenity which it had never known in time of peace. Along the quays of the Seine quiet figures angled as little disturbed by either worry—or fish—as always.

But the German army did not enter Paris. Von Kluck decided, apparently, that safety lay in first defeating the forces in the field, and on September 4, when just north of the capital, he swung his army to the east and prepared for the final and crushing blow.

There, near the green, grassy waters of the River Marne, a stocky Frenchman was waiting, who looked out at the world from placid blue eyes with the air of an honest shopkeeper of the Quartier Saint-Antoine. With him he had the citizen army of France, which had just been told that the time had come at last for every man to stand—and if need be to fall—in his tracks, if the idea of civilization which France had evolved was to remain in the world.

Of the fight which began on September 5, and which lasted for a week, there is not room for even an outline here, but its importance cannot be overstated. As the war proceeds, the Battle of the Marne gains rather than loses by comparison with all that has followed. Germany's dream of dominating Europe ended at the Marne. All that has happened since is merely her reluctant awakening from that dream.

The battle of the Marne has so far been jotted down only in the rough day-book of the world. Many of its details must remain obscure until the war is over, but eventually it will take a place in the records beside those two other mementous battles on French soil—that at Chalons, in 451, when Attila and his barbarian horde from the east was turned back; and that on the plain of Tours, in 732, when Charles Martel met the Mohammedan invasion in its victorious march from Africa, and saved Europe to Christendom.

The end of the battle of the Marne found the army of Von Kluck driven back to the north bank of the Aisne, where it was able to intrench itself. In the next few weeks, both the Franco-British-Belgian forces and the Germans began digging themselves into the ground in a fashion so formidable that the line then established from Belgium to Alsace has since remained essentially unaltered.

The winter saw furious fighting at Ypres and on the Yser, in an attempt by Germany to win Calais, but the effort was vain.

INVASION OF EAST PRUSSIA.

While Germany was striking at France in the summer of 1914, the Russians got in motion more quickly and energetically than Berlin had foreseen. One column entered Galicia, taking Tarnapol in August and Lemberg in September, and then invested the great fortress of Przemysl. As this was in Austrian territory, Germany was able to view the advance without undue emotion, but when Rennenkampf began to invade Prussia the situation became acute. There was nothing to stop the steady onrush of the Russians. They swept eastward until almost within striking distance of Konigsburg and Allenstein. In the countries of the Entente Allies, the people began to count the days to Berlin.

Then five German army corps were detached from the western front, and Von Hindenburg was sent against the Russians. He met them at Tannenberg, and in a three-day battle demoralized the forces of the Czar. The Russians are said to have lost a quarter of a million men, and had to fall back all the way to their frontier.

It was Hindenburg's first step toward military pre-eminence.

He followed it with a thrust on Warsaw, designed as a counter-attack to draw the Russians back in Galicia. In this the plan was successful. The Russians had to abandon the investment of Przemysl, and Von Hindenburg's cavalry was within a few miles of Warsaw, when 100,000 horsemen rode upon them, and the German advance was checked.

The Polish capital was not to fall that year.

CAMPAIGN OF 1915 IN FRANCE.

The spring of 1915 opened with a great hope among the Entente Allies of driving the Germans out of France before summer was over. The French armies had passed through a winter of untold suffering. Mobilized as they had been in midsummer, and never properly equipped with clothing for cold and wet, they had nevertheless held most of that long stretch of trenches from the North Sea to the Vosges—trenches, many of which were almost continually filled with water and mud. No finer spirit of courage and endurance was ever shown by an army in the field than by these grime-covered poilus, and when the spring sun shone down over Northern France again, drying the ground so as to make extended military operations once more possible, these soldiers asked only to

CHECKERBOARD OF WAR ON PEACE GUARANTEE

Conviction Grows that Negotiations for Settlement are Under Way.

BY HARRY CARR.

IF THERE were less loose conversation about the war, we could get a better idea what it was all about.

During the early part of the war, the German uhlans, according to the dispatches, were "annihilated" every morning for breakfast. In these latter days, the Hindenburg line is "crumpled up" with equal regularity.

Of course the writers who said the uhlans were annihilated did not really mean it. They do not really mean that the Hindenburg line is "crumpled up," but just exactly what do they mean? It is difficult to get an accurate idea.

One of the great battles of the war has happened, or is happening, in the general vicinity of Ypres. The bearing that it will have on the war is not yet clear.

No doubt the general purpose of this offensive is to extend the Allied left along the Belgian coast.

Ever since America came into the war it has been the general supposition that an attempt would be made to effect the landing of a large Allied army on the Belgian coast in the vicinity of Ostend: to attack the German submarine bases near Zeebrugge and to establish a position in the rear of the German right flank.

Were such a landing effected, it goes without saying that a general retirement of the Germans from Belgium must take place. Certainly, no army can maintain a position with the enemy at its rear.

Driving the Germans out of Belgium would not necessarily bring the war to a close, nor would it signify that the Germans were finally defeated, but it would have a bearing on the future of the world.

This war will probably be followed by some kind of permanent peace pact among the nations. But it is desirable that this peace pact be insured by some force more potent than mere written treaties.

Treaties have been literally scrapped. They will be regarded with some uneasiness for some time to come, especially where they affect Germany.

GUARANTEES.

The best guarantee for future world peace is to have the war end with the Allies in possession of certain strategic centers of the world.

There will be no danger, for instance, of Germany ever realizing her dream of world power if some other great power retains possession of Mesopotamia, thus cutting Germany off from the Persian Gulf.

One of these important strategic centers is Belgium. If the Kaiser is in the Persian Gulf after the war, he will dominate the world: if his flag is on the coast of Belgium, he will dominate Western Europe.

No doubt with the present discouraging outlook, the Kaiser has no such hope; he has no chance to permanently retain Belgium and thereby to dominate Western Europe. But if the war were to end with the Kaiser in temporary possession of Belgium, it would bring him to the peace council with what the politicians call "trading strength."

If, as now seems probable, the war should end in more or less of a draw, and the German Empire should come to the peace council with all of Serbia, Montenegro, Asia Minor, Poland, Rumania, Belgium and a large part of France, the Kaiser could make great concessions to the Allies and still come out a big winner. Among other things, he could get back his lost colonies.

On the other hand, if Belgium and all of France are in possession of the Allies at the close of hostilities, the Kaiser will not be in a position to make very heavy or extensive demands.

The British have already driven a wedge far into Mesopotamia. If they drive the Germans out of Belgium, they will already have assured the future safety of the British Empire from the threat of German aggression. The wings of the German eagle will have been pretty effectually clipped.

DANGER.

Of course, both Great Britain and the United States face the terrible danger of an alliance between Germany, Japan and Russia after the war. But this is for the diplomats to work out.

As far as it can be done by armies, the cover will have been closed down over the Kaiser's world ambitions if his pathway is blocked to the Persian Gulf and the English Channel.

There is another reason why it would be a wonderful benefit to the Allies to capture Belgium.

Even when I left Germany in the autumn of 1915, the feeling throughout Germany was one of hopelessness. They did not believe that Germany could win the war. The general German idea was that the war would be a draw and that times would be very hard throughout the empire for generations to come if the war closed without Germany being able to collect an indemnity from any other nation.

The rank and file of the German business men cling, or were clinging stoutly at that time, to the hope that Germany would at least be able to hold Belgium and get back the colonies by trading Belgium off at the peace council.

The loss of Belgium would therefore have a most depressing effect upon the body of German citizenry.

With the tremendous resources of the United States thrown into the balance against them, they can see that they have no chance in a contest of attrition. With Belgium gone, the black curtain of despair would go down very quickly.

As a plain contest of opposing soldiers, Germany could fight on for a long time even if driven out of Belgium. The hope of the Allies is not so much in actually beating the German soldiers as in creating a peremptory demand for peace in the breasts of the German people.

There is still another reason why the British offensive in Flanders is a move of sweeping importance.

RUSSIA.

Russia, in spite of all the tommyrot about female soldiers, etc., is in a very bad way and is getting worse hourly. It is now

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Although there were indications that the Senate does not propose to adopt the conference report on the administration food-control bill without further debate, leaders were hopeful tonight, after it had been discussed for several hours, that the measure may be in the President's hands before the end of next week.

TETANUS GERMS IN COURT PLASTER.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Court plaster forwarded to the public health service by the Ohio State Board of Health has been found by analysis by the hygienic laboratory to contain tetanus germs.

Surgeon-General Blue has bought other samples in the open market for analysis to determine if the contamination exists generally.

This is the second batch of court plaster found to contain the germs of lockjaw. Some officials suspect German sympathizers. It is pathologically possible, however that court plaster sold by peddlers might take tetanus germs from street dust.

CONFIRMS REPORT OF GERMAN PLOT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 4. — Louis Einstein, former special agent of the American Embassy at Constantinople, writes the Times supporting the story of the German conference July 5, 1914, preceding the declaration of war. He says that Marquis Garroni, the Italian Ambassador at Constantinople, told him that on July 15 the German Ambassador, Wangenheim, who had returned to Constantinople from Berlin the previous day, informed him of the conference at which Herr Wangenheim himself was present and that the war was decided upon at the conference. The Austrian archduke's murder was to be the pretext and the plan was to present an ultimatum to Serbia which she could not accept and from which war would ensue in forty-eight hours.

Mistrust Kaiser.

VICTORY.

In the course of his speech, Premier Lloyd George said:

"Victory must be so complete that our national liberty never again shall be challenged.

"Russia learned that an army without discipline is a rabble.

"There are some here who want to set up committees for the British army and direct the conduct of the war. We can not allow a sectional organization to direct the war or dictate the terms of peace. The nation as a whole made war, and the nation as a whole must make peace."

PEACE TALK.

The British Prime Minister said he did not trust the German peace talk.

"Neither the Kaiser nor the Chancellor," he declared, "has yet said he would be satisfied with German soil. They talk glibly about peace, but stammer over the word restoration. Before we have a peace conference they must learn to use the word restoration. So far, they have not learned even the first letter of the alphabet.

"War is a ghastly business, but it is not so bad as their peace. While they know their plot has miscarried this time, the Prussian war lords have determined to succeed the next time. There must be no next time. This generation must eliminate war from the tragedies of human life."

Continuing, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"If we sow seeds of discontent and disunion in the nation we shall reap defeat. A nation which falters before it reaches its purpose will never become a great people.

"No one in Great Britain, Italy, France and Russia, or even in Germany and Austria, has any idea how near we are today to the summit of our hope."

ITALY.

The Premier paid a tribute to Italy, whose greatness, he said, was in itself additional security for peace and liberty throughout the world.

"What are the Allies fighting for?" asked the Premier. "They are fighting to defeat the most dangerous conspiracy ever plotted against the liberty of nations. The meeting of the representatives of the Central Powers on July 5, 1914, when the train for war was fired, was one of the most sinister episodes in the story of human brigandage.

"What would have happened if Great Britain had not entered the war? What would have happened if our great navy had not been there to keep the seas? What would have happened if we had not been there to keep the ring and see a certain measure of fair play? What would have happened if we had not raised huge armies to confront the German legions?

"If you follow these questions out you will find that Russia's democratization and disintegration would have taken place before it did. The gallant armies of France might have been overwhelmed.

"What kind of peace would they have had then? It would not have been a peace; it would have been a conquest, a subjugation of Europe. Europe would have been placed in servitude to a great dominating power; there would have been many nations, but one great power. The indemnity might have taken the form of the surrender of navies and Europe would have been at the mercy of the worst elements of that dominating power.

THE MENACE.

"The Allied Powers at the first moment felt instinctively that a great menace to human liberty had appeared on the horizon, and they accepted the challenge. America saw it and joined us. That is what the Germans have been striving against for three years, and not without success.

"We have checked the ambitions of Germany. The nations of the world have been climbing painfully the steps that led to national independence and self-respect. France and Great Britain reached the platform long ago and then came a great power to thrust the nations back to the old dark servitude. That is what we have been fighting three years.

"The Kaiser now adopts different language—fighting to protect German soil. Even now neither he nor his new Chancellor has said they would be satisfied with German soil. They talked glibly of peace, but stammered when they came to the word 'restoration.' Before we enter a peace conference they must learn to utter that word to begin with. Our gallant fellows are gradually going to cure the Kaiser of his stutter—'restoration' is the first letter; then we will talk.

"War is a ghastly business, but it is not as grim as bad peace. There is an end to a horrible war, but a bad peace will go on and on, staggering from one war to another. The Prussian war lords have not yet abandoned their ambitions; they are only destroying the postponement of the realization of their ambitions.

NO NEXT TIME.

"The next time the Prussian war lords meant to make sure. There must be no next time. Let us have done with it. Do not let us repeat this horror. Let us make victory such that national liberty, whether for small or great nations, can never be challenged.

"On all the roads ever confronted there are ups and downs, and no doubt the Russian collapse is rather a deep glen, and I am not sure that we have reached its darkest level. But across the valley I can see the ascent.

"We of this country cannot allow sectional organizations to make war or make peace. The nation as a whole has made war sacrifices, pretty evenly divided among all classes, and the nation as a whole must make peace.

"The Germans claim to be satisfied with the last battle. All I can say is that Field Marshal Haig has obtained all his objectives. He had enough guns to smash lines upon which for three years the Germans had expended willing and forced labor, and if the Germans are pleased with the battle, so we will let it continue thus, to our mutual satisfaction.

"The course the advance is taking is the British method of saving life, and it is the duty of the nation to stand behind the army, patient, strong and united. In this way we will win."

GERMANY LOSING POPE'S FRIENDSHIP.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

ROME, Aug. 4.—It is stated in Vatican circles that the Pope's impartial attitude toward official Germany is undergoing a change. The Pope is reported to regret greatly the action of Germany in connection with the deported Belgians.

The new attitude appears to have been adopted after the fall of Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the imperial Chancellor, who just before his resignation wrote what it is now apparent was a farewell letter to the holy father thanking him for his forbearance and also calling attention to the fact that he had always tried his best to grant the people's demands regarding prisoners.

Although an absolute break with Germany is not expected at this time it is certain that the Belgian deportations are daily making more difficult the maintenance of relations. The Pope's personal position is also uncomfortable as the result of the fight made by Anglo-French and Belgian Catholis, who long have claimed that the Pope was surrounded by Central Empire influences.

Need Them for Army.

NEGOTIATE WITH ALLIES TO USE THEIR CITIZENS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Negotiations with the Allies for drafting their citizens in the new national army will be entered into immediately by the State Department, in accordance with the resolution recently passed by the Senate. This will require revision of treaties in the case of Italy and Japan and a common understanding with the other nations involved.

If the United States asserts the right to draft aliens here the Allied governments may insist on military service for Americans residing among them. To avoid having Americans enrolled compulsorily into foreign armies, some sort of exchange system may be evolved similar to that now in operation between England, France and Russia. Under this plan Americans abroad liable to military service would be returned to this country, while aliens here would be sent to their home armies.

FAILED TO REGISTER, SENT TO PRISON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 4.—Harold Gallandt, Ed Bringard and Earl Bolan, all of Chico, were sentenced today by Federal Judge Van Fleet to serve nine months in the County Jail at Oroville, Butte county, for failure to register under the selective draft law. They will be required to register and at the expiration of their sentences will be drafted into the army. The three men were indicted by the Federal grand jury and haled into court immediately.

Bringard, who recently had written a letter in which he boasted of failing to register and damned the government, declared it was against his religion to fight. He said he did not believe in "murdering men."

CONSCRIPTION ACT SURE IN CANADA.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

OTTAWA (Ont.) Aug. 4.—The Canadian Senate late last night advanced to second reading the conscription act, thereby insuring its passage through Parliament and making certain that it will become law.

A motion by the opposition that the act should not take effect until after a general election was defeated, 44 to 34. Three Senators who are classed as government followers voted for the motion.

Nine Liberals, including the leader of the Senate, voted for the second reading of the bill. The measure will become a law next week.

General Business Activities.

REPORT CONSERVATISM IN RESERVE DISTRICTS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—General business activities reflecting in many localities the government's military preparations coupled with some signs of conservatism because of certain uncertainties are reported from all twelve Federal reserve districts. A summary of the reports to the Federal Reserve Board published today follows:

San Francisco—Bank clearings up and deposits down because of Liberty Loan. High temperatures affecting some crops unfavorably, but large increase over last year assured.

New York — Cautious commitments and conservatism in many lines because of uncertainty of course of business and prices during next few months.

Atlanta — Textile manufacturing and industrial lines feeling the effect of the government's military preparations.

Chicago—Resumption of activity in many lines; banks finding good demand for funds at firm rates; little decrease in deposits through floating the Liberty Loan.

Minneapolis—Crop situation rather unfavorable, but is not expected to show immediate effect on business. Outlook for remainder of year satisfactory.

Kansas City—Crops good, general reports scarcity of materials and high prices, shortage farm labor, wholesalers report business full normal.

Dallas—Outlook encouraging; labor scare, wages high, bank clearings increasing. Much depends on cotton crop.

PROTEST ELECTION IN PORTO RICO.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

SAN JUAN (Porto Rico) Aug. 4.—The Executive Council today issued certificates of election to three unionist and two republican Senators at large, against the protest of Santiago Iglesias, the Socialist candidate for one of the senatorships. Mr. Iglesias announced that he would protest the decision in the new Senate which meets August 14.

MISSOURI'S CORN CROP EXCESSIVE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

COLUMBIA (Mo.) Aug. 4.—Missouri's corn crop, estimated at 230,000,000 bushels, will be about 90,000,000 bushels in excess of that of last year, according to the monthly crop report issued today by the State Board of Agriculture. The condition was placed at 86, two points less than a month ago and compared with 57.2 a year ago. The forecast was for 28.9 bushels to the acre.

BIG STEAMER RUNS ON MINE.

Noordam Still Afloat Despite Blow Off the Texel.

Two Explosions Reported; All Passengers Saved.

Tug Stands by the Vessel About Seven Hours.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 4.—The Holland-America Line steamship Noordam struck a mine while bound for Holland and, although badly damaged, reached port under her own steam. Owing to the low water, however, she was not able to enter, and salvage vessels are standing by. The cargo will be unloaded and officials of the line declared that the Noordam might have to be run aground.

The Noordam carried 237 passengers and a crew of 270, all of whom were saved.

The explosion occurred at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, in stormy weather, with a boisterous sea running. The passengers were transferred to the tug Thames, which accompanied the steamer at the time.

Astonishment was expressed that Dutch warships did not come to the rescue, but it is explained that this was due to their strict orders to avoid the mine zone.

This is the second time the Noordam has struck a mine. Her cargo's value is estimated at $2,000,000.

Describing the occurrence, Dr. Henry Van Loon, one of the passengers, said:

"On August 3, during a very severe storm, the Noordam was hit on the starboard side by a mine, probably two mines, as there were two explosions, completely demolishing the two boats in the second-class and causing a dangerous list, but no casualties. Although a heavy sea was running, under the most praiseworthy discipline all the passengers were saved, after the women and children were first helped.

PICKS UP SURVIVORS.

"The tugboat Thames picked up all the survivors in about three hours. Again the heavy, dangerous squalls threatened the complete destruction of the small and overloaded craft, and floating mines added to the horror of the eighteen-hour trip to land. Meanwhile the Noordam, although apparently hopelessly crippled, continued her voyage. All the stokers and other members of the crew returned to their ship, where the captain and officers had been using all their efforts to save food supplies for those aboard the tug."

There were only two Americans among the passengers. Charles Drost, a business man in Boston, was one of the Americans. There was no panic, although the lowering of a couple of sick passengers into the lifeboats caused some difficulty and anxious moments.

The tug Thames stood by the Noordam for about seven hours, during which the retransfer of the crew was made, and then set a course for land. The passengers, in the meantime, were provided with meals and blankets and, huddled together, thus spent the night, which fortunately became calmer. All the baggage remained aboard the Noordam.

CARGO FOR DUTCH.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Aug. 4.—The Holland-America Line steamship Noordam sailed for Holland July 11 with 180 passengers, among whom were two Americans. She carried cargo for the Dutch government. Presumably she stopped at Halifax for examination in acordance with the British Admiralty regulations. The Noordam is commanded by Capt. B. C. Van Walraven.

The Noordam is a vessel of 12,531 tons gross and was built at Belfast in 1902. She is 550 feet long. This is the second time that the Noordam has struck a mine. In October of the first year of the war the steamship ran into a mine while passing through the English Channel. Seven persons on board were injured by the explosion. On that occasion the vessel managed to reach port.

Texel Island is the largest and southwesternmost of the Frisian Islands, which form a part of the Dutch province of North Holland.

STEAMER MOTANO SINKS QUICKLY.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

The saved of the naval guard were: Garrison, Beckwith, Hanley, Halcomb and Hammer.

The rescued members of the crew are: Stratton, Tewling, Hansen, Post, McHeron, Carson, Quinn, Tanner, De Force, Davison, Christiansen, Flynn, Magi, Linderman, Berg, Spenspand and Ramm.

I.W.W.'S TO BURY LYNCHING VICTIM.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

BUTTE (Mont.) Aug. 4.—A telegram from W. D. Haywood, national secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World, reading "bury the body on the fighting ground," has changed the plans to send the body of Frank H. Little to Oklahoma for interment, and arrangements were completed today for the burial of Little tomorrow afternoon in a Butte cemetery. Death masks and photographs were made today of Little, an executive officer of the I.W.W., who was lynched Wednesday morning.

Funeral services will be in charge of I.W.W. members and Metal Mine Workers' Union members. No minister will take part in the services, it was said. The body will be interred in Mountain View Cemetery.

Talks by union and I.W.W. leaders and the reading of letters and telegrams from I.W.W. throughout the country will mark the funeral programme at the undertaking parlors. A procession of union men and I.W.W. will follow the body to the cemetery, the casket to be borne upon the sholders of twenty of the man's former acquaintances and friends.

Retired.

mustered out upon its return from the Islands, Capt. Wankowski was made a major; and in 1903, brigadier-general, which post he has since held. He was the commanding officer of the brigade at the border and was also in command of the guard at San Francisco at the time of the fire.

He had been working hard to make a success of the present mobilization of the guard.

OTHERS RETIRED.

Col. White of the Second Infantry had held the grade but a few years, the regiment being for years commanded by Col. Lon Bond, an attorney, also of Chico. Lieut.-Col. Sayre, who was Col. White's second in command, is a Sacramento man who held a captaincy in the Ohio National Guard, had a fine record and rose rapidly in rank after being commissioned a first lieutenant in the California National Guard in 1912. He succeeded to the majorship of the Second Battalion, Second Regiment, when Charles W. Thomas, Jr., became the Adjutant-General of this State, before going into the Federal service. Lieut. Drew, another of the Second's officers, who failed to qualify, is an atorney of Fresno and a son of former Assemblyman A. M. Drew.

Capt. Marden of this city is a police officer in charge of the juvenile department.

ARE NOTIFIED.

An Associated Press dispatch, dated yesterday at San Francisco, says:

Maj.-Gen. Hunter Liggett, commanding the Western Department, today sent formal notice to each of the officers dropped that they had failed to pass the prescribed tests and that they were no longer recognized as officers of the National Guard. He also notified them that, by order of the President, they would be excused from the draft.

The officers who took the examinations have had since last summer to prepare for them. Under the act of June 3, 1916, reorganizing the National Guard, all officers held their positions provisionally, subject to examinations.

Col. White of the Second Infantry turned his command over to Maj. Will L. Kelly. Col. Francis relinquished command to Lieut.-Col. L. M. Farrell.

STRIKING LOGGERS TO HARVEST GRAIN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Aug. 4.—Immigration Commissioner Henry M. The shortage of harvesters has been entirely relieved since the lumber strike began, Mr. White reports.

CALLS THE I.W.W.'S A MENACE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BUTTE (Mont.) Aug. 4.—United States District Attorney B. K. Wheeler reported to Washington today that the I.W.W. are a direct and serious menace in the northwest and that in Butte, alone, there are more than 500 members of the order. The report was made after a request from Washington for a full report on labor troubles and I.W.W. activities in the northwest.

Mr. Wheeler reported that conditions in the lumber camps of the western part of Montana are at present the most serious aspect to the situation. Reports that certain men in Missoula have been making seditious speeches were investigated and reported back to the government as without foundation by the District Attorney.

WOMAN SWINDLER GOES TO PRISON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Described by Assistant District Attorney Weil as the most notorious swindler of women that had ever been brought into court, Mrs. Marion la Touche, 66 years old, was sent to the Tombs Prison today in default of $35,000 bail, after she had been indicted for grand larceny.

Mrs. La Touche was arrested for conducting a get-rich-quick system for women in Wall street.

RUSSIAN MORALE NOT SUBSTANTIAL.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 4.—A dispatch to the Times from Russian southwestern headquarters, dated Tuesday, says the improvement in the morale of the armies is not substantial and warns against optimism unless the political situation changes completely. The authority of the officers is still unrecognized. While the so-called revolutionary armies have opened a front for the enemy to enter, the railway men have struck at a critical moment when everything depends on the prompt removal of property.

SAYS FRANCE IS STRONGER.

Has More War Material than at Any Time in War.

Believe United States will Strike the Last Blow.

Cheering Message Brought by High Commissioner.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—France is stronger today in fighting men and war materials than at any time during the war, despite three years of terrific combat of which the greatest share among the Allies has fallen to the French armies.

This is the cheering message to the American people given tonight by Andre Tardieu, high commissioner of France in the United States, in a formal communication to Secretary Baker setting forth a detailed statement of what the devotion of the French people has made possible. It contains stunning figures of the men, guns and money they have contributed to the war. It breathes the spirit of confidence and high courage that still animates the nation.

It asserts without hesitation that the United States is to aid in striking the last blow at the foe.

"Such is the situation," says M. Tardieu in conclusion, "severe was the ideal, stronger is the national energy.

"Now it is a question of striking the last blow to the adversary. You will help us.

WORD TO AMERICANS.

"But at the moment when American soldiers arrive in France, it is proper to let them know what they will find, to receive them, in a country which, today, as well as during the past three years bears the principal exertion of our dreadful foe; a country which maintains to the maximum of her power, without hesitation and without weakness, her strength, her means and her will."

Secretary Baker pays high compliment to the spirit of France in his brief reply. American officers are unanimous, he says, in their praise of the splendid courage and military efficiency of the French people.

"Now that America has begun to contribute soldiers and materials to this war," says the Secretary, "it will be well for our people to have the story you have told in order that we may realize that your army is going to share the imperishable glory which belongs to the soldiers of France and her allies who have fought so long and with such increasing spirit and determination in the cause of liberty."

THREE MILLION TROOPS.

M. Tardieu says in his statement that there are today nearly 3,000,000 French troops in the zone of the armies alone, exclusive of those in the zone of the interior and the colonies. That is a million more men than were used to stem the German flood tide at the Marne and the greatest number France has ever mustered in the fighting zone. The commissioner adds that the force can be maintained "for a long time to come."

He shows that French "definitive casualties" in killed and prisoners have dropped from 5.41 per cent. of all mobilized forces at the battle of Marne, to 1.28 per cent. during the last six months of 1916; that France is holding 574 kilometers of the 739 kilometers on the western front, and that her troops in June of this year were facing eighty-one of the 123 German divisions concentrated on that line.

PLENTY OF GUNS.

As to guns, the commissioner shows that French armies have had an ample supply of the famous "75's" from the first and that her 300 heavy guns in August, 1914, had increased to 6000 in June, 1917, giving one heavy gun for every twenty-six meters of the French offensive fronts this year. Including all field and trench guns, he says, there is a gun for every eight meters in the sector of attack.

To feed the "75's" the daily output of shells has risen from 13,000 in 1914 to a quarter of a million today and 100,000 projectiles for the heavy guns are supplied each day in addition. During the last offensives a total weight of projectiles averaging 1442 kilograms (about one and one-half tons) was hurled into every lineal meter of the German trenches assaulted and 12,000,000 shells of all calibers were expended by French guns.

In addition to all this, France completely re-equipped and rearmed the Belgian, Servian and Greek armies and furnished 800 heavy guns to her allies. On the financial side, the tables show that France has expended 82,647,000,000 francs (nearly $16,000,000,000) since the war began. During the war she received from foreign countries 6,000,000,000 francs and loaned to several of her allies 4,000,000,000 francs.

DEMANDS HER SON FROM THE GRIZZLIES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4.—Mrs. Amelia Armstrong today invoked the aid of the Federal courts here to obtain the discharge of her son, James D. Armstrong, from the new California field artillery regiment known as the "Grizzlies." On her allegations that her son was "physically unfit and suffers great pain in drills," Federal Judge Frank H Rudkin of Spokane issued a writ of habeas corpus directing Capt. R. L. Dinely of the regiment to appear August 13 with young Armstrong and show cause why he should not be released.

STEPHENS'S AIDE MARRIES A WIDOW.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 4.—Martin C. Madsen, private secretary to Gov. W. D. Stephens, and Mrs. Nita Campbell of Riverside were married at noon today at the home of H. L. Carnahan, State Corporation Commissioner, in this city. Mrs. Campbell is a niece of Mrs. Carnahan.

Madsen's marriage, which was the result of a friendship of several years with Mrs. Campbell, who was a widow, came as a surprise to most of his friends, as no announcement had been made. Madsen is from Fresno and was executive secretary to United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson when he was Governor.

CHILDREN PARADE FOR MRS. MOONEY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4.—"We want Mrs. Mooney free" and "We love our music teacher; set her free," were inscriptions on banners carried by approximately 150 boys and girls who marched today to the Hall of Justice, where Mrs. Rena Mooney, a music teacher, was acquitted recently on one of nine indictments charging her with murder resulting from a bomb explosion here last summer which killed ten persons. Mrs. Mooney is in jail under the remaining indictments.

The parade was led by Mrs. Mary Mooney, mother of Thomas J. Mooney, under sentence of death for one of the bomb murders. He waved to the children, many of whom were former pupils of Mrs. Mooney, from his cell in the County Jail, adjoining the Hall of Justice. The paraders wore red bands on their arms and all joined in a demonstration under the jail windows.

LIVELY RECRUITING FOR THE GRIZZLIES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4.—Recruiting for the California Field Artillery to be known as the "Grizzlies" gained impetus today, according to the officers in charge, who said that among other new men they had sworn in fifty or more men dropped from the reserve training camp. These were dropped from the reserve camp, in nearly every instance, it was stated, because of lack of actual preliminary experience. They expect to gain that experience through the Grizzlies and believe their training will qualify them for early promotion.

Recruiting is now restricted to men over or under the draft ages, as the government has directed that enlistment of drafted men in any unit should cease for the present.

The quota of athletes in the organization was increased today by the enrollment of Julius R. Pappa, formerly major league player, and later in the Coast League.

Young Sullivan was in Germany when war was declared. He was interned for a short time, later going to Paris. His draft number was not among the first quota called for service and he decided not to wait to be called for the second national army to see duty at the front.

The cases are being heard in this city by N. W. Bolster, commissioner of the Court of Claims of Seattle. Five test cases are being heard in behalf of the 125 land owners. The claim of Richard R. Smith, prominent San Joaquin county farmer, is being taken up this afternoon.

The date on which the alleged plotters will enter their pleas was not set.

Radli Prasiad Vasma, Los Angeles Hindu, was liberated when he proved to Judge Rudkin that he was a victim of mistaken identity and that he was not the man of his name indicted. He said there were two other Hindus in California bearing his name.

get at the invader and hurl him from their soil.

The fiercest of the fighting that followed was in the neighborhood of Arras. In that confused and intricate network of trenches near Neuville Saint Vaast, where there was a tangle of two square miles which the Germans thought to be impregnable, known as the "Labyrinth," the French threw themselves on their enemy with incredible elan, sustaining losses that recalled the slaughter at the Marne. Better pay any price and get through with it, was the French idea. It was a heroic resolve, but it was not to be realized. Neither the French nor the British, farther west, had yet evolved an offensive which could consistently win ground against the enemy, except at a prohibitive cost in human life.

Lord Kitchener had been building up a British volunteer army since the summer before, which was now represented in France by a brave but inexperienced force. Its weakness was only too obvious in the disastrous offensive at Neuve Chapelle in March, when men were rushed against the enemy over ground where the barbed wire had not been destroyed, and when, through miscalculation, shells from the British guns fell among their own infantry.

Nevertheless, on the defensive, the British forces held their part of the line with characteristic doggedness, and in April repulsed a second desperate attempt by the Germans to break a road through to Calais at Ypres. In this encounter, where the enemy made use of asphyxiating gas for the first time, the famous "Princess Pat" Canadian light infantry, in the course of a heroic fight, was almost decimated.

The summer was not far advanced before both French and British realized that before they could strike successfully at the intrenchments of the Germans they must have more and bigger guns, and ammunition in an amount never before dreamed of. Reluctantly, therefore, the great offensive was tacitly abandoned for that year, and both in Great Britain and in France a campaign was begun behind the lines for what Senator Charles Humbert picturesquely and incessantly called for in Le Journal as "Des canons! Des munitions!"

How successfully this campaign developed may be judged by the fact that between the spring of 1915 and the spring of 1917 Great Britain increased her supply of high-explosive shells twenty-eight times.

The last formidable effort of the year was made in Champagne in September by the French. Political pressure rather than military expediency led the army to undertake the attack and, although the Germans were driven back three miles, the French lost 100,000 men.

GERMANY'S OCCUPATION OF POLAND.

Since the beginning of the war the Russian and Austrian forces have swung forward and back in Galicia like a pendulum. Without attempting to trace all of these movements, it is enough to say that the spring of 1915 found the pendulum again swing westward, and on March 22 the Russians took Przemysl. Austria called on the Kaiser and Von Mackensen was sent to save her. He took a large supply of the invincible German heavy artillery, against which the Russians, with nothing to match it, and now running short of ammunition besides, could not stand. On June 3 the Teutonic armies recaptured Przemysl and soon after retook Lemberg and other lost positions.

Meanwhile Von Hindenburg was again moving on Warsaw and was joined presently by Von Buelow, who had landed troops in Russia by way of the Baltic and marched south. Von Mackensen now employed his forces so as to aid in this campaign and the German battering ram began to pound its way across Poland. The Russians were powerless to stop it, but their retreat was accomplished in a masterly way, restricting their losses to a minimum. The evacuation of Warsaw was begun late in July, and on August 6, the last of the Russians having slipped out, the Bavarians, under Prince Leopold, entered the capital of Poland. Ivangorod fell soon after and on August 19 the great stronghold of Kovno was occupied. The conquest of Poland was completed by the surrender of Brest-Litovsk on August 27.

THE COLLAPSE OF SERBIA.

One of the tragedies of 1915 was the overrunning of Serbia by Austro-German forces. The campaign was partly a bait to draw Bulgaria in on Germany's side through the prospect of participation in the territorial loot, and partly an object lesson to keep the other Balkan states from joining in the war on the side of the Entente Powers. For Germany, too, the success of the move had the deeper significance of constituting under her tutelage the long-dreamed-of Mittel Europa block from the Baltic to the Bosphorus.

An Austro-German army of 400,000 men crossed the northern frontier and advanced rapidly against the Serbians, inferior in numbers and equipment. Meanwhile the Bulgarians crossed their frontier and began another attack from that quarter. The Entente Allies made a tardy attempt to save the little kingdom by landing troops at Saloniki, and small French forces joined with the Serbians in the final fighting. It was too late, however, to save the situation, and toward the end of October the Austro-German and Bulgarian forces met, completing the conquest of the country.

Montenegro was overrun soon after.

ATTEMPT ON DARDANELLES.

One of the early efforts of the Entente Powers was a campaign for the capture of Constantinople, with a view to crushing the Turk and opening communication with Russia by way of the Black Sea. It was an attractive programme to lay minds and found a strong champion in Winston Spencer Churchill, then First Lord of the British Admiralty. Lord Fisher, First Sea Lord, and various French officers opposed it.

A fleet was sent out early in the winter if 1915 to bombard its way through the Dardanelles. It was unsuccessful and a land force, largely Australians and New Zealanders, was then landed on the peninsula of Gallipoli to strike at Constantinople from behind. Eighty thousand men were landed on April 25 under a withering fire and tremendous difficulties. The expedition maintained a desperate and tantalizing foothold through the summer that followed, but hope of eventual success was finally abandoned and at the close of the year the forces were withdrawn. More than 100,000 men were lost in the campaign.

VERDUN AND THE SOMME.

It had been generally predicted that the spring of 1916 would see a huge offensive in France and there was wide speculation as to where the Entente Allies would strike. But when, toward the end of February, the French approaches to Verdun were subjected to unprecedented bombardment, it was plain that the offensive had begun earlier than expected and that it was the Germans and not the Entente Powers who were pressing it.

The fortress of Verdun, on the River Meuse, guards the eastern frontiers of France and is strategically the most important in the republic. The fight for its possession was waged with a fury and a destructiveness for which even the preceding year and a half of the war had hardly prepared the world. Unknown to the French, Germany had succeeded in installing just beyond the French lines her heaviest artillery, and when she got this into action she seemed to move forward irresistibly, leveling all before her. In four days she pushed ahead almost as many miles, and on the fifth day the Brandenburgers stormed Fort Douaumont, the highest hill in the region.

Meanwhile the French were rallying their resources for this fresh demand upon their blood and their determination. Two men, hitherto comparatively obscure, were singled out for the great responsibilities of the occasion. Gen. Nivelle took general charge of the operations in the region, while to Gen. Petain was intrusted specifically the defense of Verdun. Men were massed there from other fronts and a continuous procession of automobile trucks rushed out guns and munitions.

In March the Germans shifted their attack to the left bank of the Meuse, and pushed the French back nearly to the point gained on the other side. Thiaumont work was taken and retaken some five times in four days.

But as the days passed, the Germans made gains more slowly, and with heavier and heavier losses to their ranks. The world breathed easier in the hope that France had withstood another crisis, a hope which became certainty when on July 1 French and British forces began an attack on the Somme which compelled their foe to drop the Verdun offensive and rush troops from there to Picardy.

The "big push" on the Somme marks a dividing line in the great war. For two years both sides had been developing defensive possibilities in such a way as to change the entire aspect of fighting. Like Nebuchadnezzar, men now went on their bellies, and like animals they lived in deep caves. But though both sides had been developing defensive tactics, the Entente Allies had not stopped there. Great Britain had finally raised, equipped and trained a great volunteer army, and the product of the vast munitions campaign there and in France was finally ready.

The amazing advance that had been made, both in munitions supply and in tactics, was evident from the first of the fighting on the Somme. At last the democratic nations of Europe had caught up with the scientific war machine of Germany. Their artillery and their ammunition supply not only equalled but generally outmatched that of the enemy, and they had finally evolved an offensive with which they could advance against the most powerful German intrenchments—slowly, it is true, but inevitably.

This was the true importance of the Somme campaign of 1916. The total ground gained by the British and French armies was only about 180 square miles, but the discovery that they had an offensive which the Germans could not withstand changed the entire morale of civilians as well as soldiers. Incidentally, the summer saw a great revival in the use of an ancient weapon, long practically discarded, and for carrying trenches and various other purposes, the hand grenade virtually superseded the rifle.

The Somme campaign of 1916 cost the Franco-British armies 750,000 men, the Germans say. The Entente Allies estimate that the enemy lost as many, which is illuminating, since it shows as heavy a loss on the part of the defensive as on the part of the offensive army, a result until then impossible.

At Verdun the German loss was estimated at about 500,000 men, and the French wastage at half that.

The year 1916 closed propitiously for the French at Verdun. By attacks on October 25 and December 15 they recovered four miles of territory on a seven-mile front, including Forts Douaumont and Vaux.

BRUSSILOFF'S THRUST IN THE EAST.

In June of 1916, the Russians, under Gen. Brussiloff, went back to the attack in Galicia and Bukowina, and for two months met with almost unbroken success. In Volhynia the Russians captured important railway lines from which the campaign of their enemies depended, and at one moment threatened to compel the Austrians to evacuate Lemberg. Just at the moment that Rumania entered the war, however, when aggressive tactics by Russia were most needed, the army of Brussiloff slowed down its effort.

In the Caucasus the Russian forces under the Grand Duke Nicholas made important gains in 1916. Erzerum, one of the chief fortresses of the Turks in Armenia, was taken on February 17. The important Black Sea port of Trebizond then fell into his hands, while with the capture of Erzingan most of Armenia became Russian.

The tragic side of the campaign was the unspeakable cruelties visited upon the Armenians by the Turks as the latter were obliged to fall back. It amounted almost to the extermination of the race.

RUMANIA'S ENTRY AND EXIT.

The Balkan tragedy of 1915 was Servia. In 1916 it was Rumania. The Rumanian collapse was even more unexplainable and seemingly inexcusable than the fall of Serbia, because Rumania, on August 27, entered the war of her own volition and apparently with the approval of the Entente diplomats. She had an army of half a million men, and had had two years to prepare herself since the beginning of the war.

The Rumanians at once entered Transylvania, the country they hoped to win as a result of the war. By many strategists it was thought they would have done better to strike against Bulgaria. In any event they were soon compelled to turn their attention to that quarter. Von Mackensen, following the well-developed German strategy of a counter-offensive, began an attack in Dobrudja. This compelled a considerable withdrawal of forces from Transylvania, whereupon Von Falkenhayn marched an army against the remainder, drove them across their frontier and then swung his own forces through the mountain passes into Rumania. The two German armies converged upon Bucharest, and the Rumanian capital was occupied on December 6.

TERGIVERSATIONS OF GREECE.

Conditions in Greece have taxed to the utmost the diplomacy of the Entente Powers since Bulgaria made war upon Serbia in 1915. Greece had a treaty with Serbia whereby the former was to aid the latter in case of attack, but Greece refused her aid in this crisis, and since then has been the seat of intrigue, dissensions, evasions and upsets which have nearly ruined her economically, and all but discredited her politically. From the outset of the war the sympathies of the Greek people appear to have been on the side of the Entente Allies, but the fact that King Constantine was married to a sister of the Emperor William made the court strongly pro-German, and there was undeniably a substantial sentiment in the kingdom for keeping Greece out of the conflict altogether.

Venizelos, who was Prime Minister when Bulgaria attacked Servia, was for standing by the treaty with the latter country, and it was at his invitation that the Entente Powers landed forces at Saloniki in the autumn of 1915. King Constantine

FAMILIES OF THE I.W.W. REPORTED DESTITUTE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Aug. 4.—Capt. M. A. Palen, judge advocate of the Arizona military district, was sent to Bisbee today by Brig.-Gen. H. A. Green to investigate the reported destitution in families of some of the 1100 men deported from there as members of the I.W.W. July 12. He was instructed to report his findings to Gen. H. A. Green, district commander, Sunday.

Capt. Palen was sent to Bisbee following receipt of telegraphic orders from headquarters of the Southern Department, saying W. D. Haywood, secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World, had telegraphed Washington that many families were destitute.

Prominent Bisbee men deny the report of destitution, saying that the families are being provided for liberally. However, a few cases have been reported where the women, resenting the deportation of their men folk, have refused to accept the aid offered them.

DEPORTED MINERS RETURN TO GALLUP.

SANTA FE (N. M.) Aug. 4.—Gov. W. E. Lindsey today wired leaders of the miners at Belen deported from Gallup, granting the party permission to return to Gallup and suggesting that they do not return in a body. At the same time he also wired Sheriff Roberts at Gallup, directing him that the refugees were returning under protection of the State and he must protect them so long as they act within the law.

Advices from Gallup say the armed guards employed by the coal companies have been forbidden to carry weapons while off company property. Everything is orderly. The deported miners are expected to reach Gallup tonight.

Meanwhile the miners at Madrid, this county, have taken no further action toward a sympathetic strike, and settlement of the Gallup difficulties is expected to automatically call it off.

COLORADO'S MOVE FOR A CONSTABULARY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER (Colo.) Aug. 4.—Senate and House today concurred in conference amendments to the bill creating a State constabulary force and it now goes to the Governor. The emergency clause was attached, so it will go into effect as soon as signed. The bill provides for a force of 200 constables, subject directly to the Governor's orders, to receive $60 a month and expenses. It was declared in the House that no time for terminating the existence of the force was included in the bill. The force originally was intended to be a temporary one.

British Naval Chief Admits U-Boat Menace Serious.

Germans Were Confident of a Fatal Stroke.

Must Discover Antidote to Master Submarine.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe, First Sea Lord and chief of the naval staff, in an interview with the Associated Press today discussed the submarine menace and the naval situation at the end of the third year of the war.

"You ask me to say something of the submarine menace," he began. "It is serious, because all the Allied armies and civil population are, in varying degrees, dependent on sea transport. But, viewed broadly, the recourse by the Germans to this form of piracy is encouraging. They did not adopt it until they had lost hope in the victory of their armies. They did not risk drawing the United States into the war and concentrating on themselves the loathing of all other neutral states until they were convinced that they could not float a keel on the world's seas and by legitimate means interfere with the growth of the military strength of the Allies.

"For three years naval power has been in process of transition into military power. The Germans in desperation decided to embark upon ruthless submarine warfare in the confident belief that it would prove a fatal stroke. In February, according to their own confession, it was 'the best and only means of a speedy and victorious ending of the war.'

"March, April, May, June and July have passed and their early hopes are still unrealized.

"The Germans have not mastered us, but, on the other hand, we have not mastered the submarine. We have not yet discovered the effective antidote. But we have reduced the losses of merchant shipping.

PREVENTION.

"There is no reason to doubt that the Germans have at sea a far larger number of submarines than in February and March, but, nevertheless, with the invaluable assistance which America has rendered, we have prevented them from reaping the harvest which they anticipated.

"How long the German population will live on hopes deferred I cannot profess to say, but they must realize that the prophecy of February, resting on official authority that the submarine was 'the best and only means of a speedy and victorious ending of the war,' has not been fulfilled.

"Combatting the submarine demands the utmost effort on the part of all the countries which have joined forces to defeat Germany. She has staked her all on the submarine, and if we defeat it her last hope will have gone.

"The two urgent needs of the moment are more patrol ships for hunting down submarines and an increased output of merchant shipping, so that the losses suffered at sea may be made good. The war has become one of economic endurance. With the powerful aid which the United States is rendering in making the naval blockade effective, Germany's condition must become worse week by week. She will hold out so long as there is the faintest hope of the success of the submarine warfare. Once its failure is demonstrated the German people, whatever may be the case with the German government, will recognize that defeat stares them in the face.

"It is therefore vitally important that every effort be concentrated on destroying what the Prime Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, calls 'the bacilli of the seas.' We must and shall defeat it, but in order to do so, the inventive and constructive energy of all the nations fighting Germany must be devoted to the work and to the rapid building of patrol ships and merchantmen. If that is done I have no doubt of the issue."

NAVAL WAR.

Turning to the general naval situation at the end of the third year of the great war, Admiral Jellicoe said:

"The fourth year of the naval war opens this week and only those who are familiar with German naval literature, which preached the doctrine of the offensive, can appreciate the significance of national events during the past three years. The German high seas fleet was not created that it might remain inactive month after month. It is a great war engine. No greater mistake can be made than to underestimate its strength. It is far stronger, for instance, than the British fleet was ten years ago, and in years before the opening of the war it was submitted to a very thorough, intensive system of training.

"The British grand fleet has offered it a challenge to action which has not been accepted, for on the occasion of the battle of Jutland the Germans had no thought of a fight to a finish. For the whole year now the high seas fleet has ventured only beyond its protected mine fields on one occasion—August 21, last year, and then it speedily sought shelter once more.

"Owing to the attention which the novel and barbarous submarine warfare has attracted there is, perhaps, a tendency to forget that success of our grand fleet in "containing" the main German force on which the success or failure of the Allied cause is mainly dependent. Very little can be said as long as the war lasts of the work of the grand fleet, but it is the foundation upon which all the efforts of the allies rests.

PRAISES THE FLEETS.

"What has it done? For a period of three years it has robbed the Germans of all advantages which they expected to reap from the possession of a strong battle fleet. That force was to have sallied forth from time to time. The Germans calculated that they would strike at their selected moment, when their fleet would be at a maximum strength an dthat they would catch our grand fleet at a moment when, owing to the absence of ships undergoing refits and repairs, the odds were little, if anything, against them. They have not been permitted to carry out that scheme, but we have always to be on our guard.

"We cannot permit them, for instance, to emulate the example of Villeneuve, when he eluded Nelson at Toulon and cruised to the West Indies and then got back to port again, having suffered little injury

"We cannot permit them, for instance, to emulate the example of Villeneuve, when he eluded Nelson off Toulon and cruised to the West Indies and then got back to port again, having suffered little injury as the result of the Calder's action. No, we must not contemplate such a break on the part of the Germans, particularly now that the American people in the war require peace and security in order to mobilize their enormous fighting power.

"The carrying out of that purpose imposes a heavy responsibility on the grand fleet. It is sometmies suggested that we ought to adopt a more offensive policy against the German high seas fleet. We are face to face with the old problem—how to face a fleet which hides in a harbor to come out and fight. It is a very old problem. Our forefathers were familiar with it. For twenty-one years it confronted them at the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth centuries.

"A superior fleet can force an enemy fleet into port, but if it is to be compelled to come out against its will, history suggests that compulsion must be applied by the army acting against its base or bases. I need not say any more on that issue except to suggest that naval power and military power are complementary one to the other. The navy alone cannot win a war, as history has always shown, and the army alone cannot triumph, as the Germans have learned."

SERBIAN REGICIDES MUST PAY PENALTY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

CORFU (Island of Corfu) July 10.—Fate has at last fallen on that band of military regicides who some fifteen years ago broke into the royal palace at Belgrade at night and assassinated King Alexander and the Serbian Queen Draga.

Three high officers have recently been shot after military court-martial. Three more are awaiting the death sentence, seven officers, including a general, have received life sentences, and some thirty officers have received lesser sentences of from one to five years.

While the outside world was shocked, the band of assassins enjoyed at home a certain immunity and even glory for having rid the country of a dissolute ruler and his plebeian gypsy queen, for the name of Draga had been well known in the concert halls of Emolu before she had the luck to win a king and crown.

The murder clique remained in control of the army until after the present war, when Prince Alexander became regent owing to the age of King Peter. One of his first acts was to restore to active service a great number of officers retired by the murder clique. This resulted in the clique plotting his death, but the conspiracy was discovered.

More than forty high officers were tried as a result of the conspiracy. Those condemned to death include Colonels Dimitrivitch, Milanovitch, Toutzovitch, Lazitch, Lieut.-Col. Vesnitch and Commander Vulovitch. Gen. Popvitch heads the list of those condemned to life imprisonment. In the list are most of the band who carried out the murder of King Alexander and Queen Draga.

After deciding not to accept M. Kerensky's resignation, the provisional government called a meeting of representatives of all the political parties as well as the representatives of the Duma, of the Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates and of the Council of Peasants' Delegates.

Always Speaks A Good Word For Peruna. A Splendid Medicine.

Mrs. O. F. McHargue, No. 147 W. Ninth St., Jacksonville, Florida, writes: "After I received your advice in regard to the supposed polypus, as I then could not afford to have it removed, I began to take Peruna, thinking I might at least get some temporary relief. By the time I had taken one bottle the polypus had disappeared, and three bottles cured the catarrh and throat trouble. I have recommended the medicine to several friends. As a minister's wife I come in contact with all classes of people, and shall always speak a good word for Peruna. I have given trial bottles to a few friends."

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

WOMAN SLAYER MAY BE INSANE.

Counsel for Mrs. De Saulles Expresses His Fear.

Motive for Shooting Still Mystifies the Police.

Four-year-old Child Witness to Deplorable Crime.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Belief that Mrs. Bianca de Saulles was temporarily insane when she shot and killed her former husband, John Longer de Saulles, famous Yale football player, at his Long Island home last night, was expressed today by Henry A. Uterhart, counsel for Mrs. De Saulles. Fear that Mr. de Saulles would insist upon keeping their 4-year-old son longer than he is said to have agreed, was assigned by Mr. Uterhart as the cause of the mother's dementia.

Mr. and Mrs. De Saulles had an agreement under which custody of the child alternated each month. Mr. Uterhart said Mr. de Saulles kept his son from June 1 to July 6, six days over the agreed period and on that account he agreed that the boy should remain with Mrs. De Saulles from July 6 until August 8.

Desiring, however, to have the child at his home during a visit of his parents and other relatives yesterday, Mr. De Saulles sent for the boy with the request that he be permitted to spend the afternoon at his home, the attorney said.

BROODS OVER REQUEST.

The mother granted the request with the understanding that the child was to be returned in the evening, Mr. Uterhart said Mrs. de Saulles told him. When 8 o'clock came and the boy had not been returned, Mr. Uterhart believes, the mother brooded over this fact until she became "temporarily demented."

The funeral of Mr. de Saulles will be held Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Susanna Monteau, Mrs. de Saulles's maid, who accompanied her mistress to the De Saulles home last night, was released from custody late today as a material witness, on bail of $1000.

Plans for the defense of Mrs. de Saulles were today being made by attorneys summoned to confer with the young woman, now a prisoner in the Mineola jail on a charge of first-degree murder.

Mrs. de Saulles, according to the prison officials, remained remarkably cool and self-possessed today and showed no indications of remorse.

From the jail last night she called up somebody in New York on the telephone, acording to Sheriff Seaman, and held a conversation which he said on her part was in a light vein. After she had said that she had shot De Saulles "because he would not give me back my baby" the voice at the other end of the wire exclaimed "My God! My God!"

"Oh, people make me tired saying 'My God,'" the Sheriff quoted her as saying.

BOY SEES SHOOTING.

The 4½-year-old boy, John Longer de Saulles, Jr., possession of whom led to the tragedy, saw his mother fire the bullets into his father's body, according to Mrs. Caroline Degener, sister of De Saulles, who was present at the shooting, and told of the circumstances of the event.

Mrs. Degener said that the killing took place in the living-room and not on the piazza of the De Saulles home and that when the child's mother entered, his father was reading to him. Mrs. de Saulles demanded her boy and when her husband denied her request she brought her right hand from behind her back, holding a revolver. De Saulles was shot down as he turned to flee.

The shooting came as a climax to a romance of two continents which led to the wedding of De Saulles, a former Yale football star, and Bianca Errazuriz, heiress to one of the greatest estates in Chile and known as one of the "most beautiful girls in the world." Mrs. de Saulles obtained a divorce last year, naming a popular Broadway dancer.

A deposition filed by Deputy Sheriff Leonard Thorn states that he found and arrested Mrs. de Saulles with her maid near the De Saulles house on Long Island and that Mrs. de Saulles said:

"Yes, I did the shooting and I hope he will die."

Later it was stated Calles had been ordered by Carranza to obtain at any cost the return of the companies.

LONDON PAPERS REVIEW THREE YEARS OF WAR.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The morning newspapers today commemorate the conclusion of three years of war by long reviews of past events, taking stock of the present position and speculations of the future. They also print conspicuously a message from the King to sovereigns and Presidents, including one to Woodrow Wilson, expressing the determination to pursue the war until the joint efforts are crowned with success.

They publish others from members of the government and various leaders, proclaiming the determination to fight to the end for the destruction of militarism and for the vindication of justice and freedom at all costs. Some are epigrammatic, for instance, that from Robert Cecil, which says: "The path to freedom lies through the German lines." Sir Edward Carson, Minister without portfolio, says: "The Germans unsheathed the sword; they must not be allowed to put it back until broken."

The editorials and reviews, although firmly maintaining victory for the Allied democracies, is absolutely assured that their strength is growing while that of the German allies is waning recognize, nevertheless, Germany remains militarily, economically and politically strong and formidable, and her downfall is hindered by the results of the Russian revolution. Against the unquestioned disastrous effect of the destruction of Russia's offensive power, with all its damaging consequences for her allies, is hopefully set the entrance of America into the war, which is welcomed, not only from a material point of view, but as an immense moral indorsement of the aims all are fighting for.

KING OUTLINES BRITISH PURPOSES.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 4.—King George, on the third anniversary of the war, has sent identical cablegrams to the presidents and sovereigns of the United States, France, Portugal, Italy, Japan, Serbia and Rumania, expressing "the unwavering determination of the British empire to pursue the contest until our joint efforts are crowned with success and our common aims attained."

His Majesty also expressed confidence in the unwavering will of the Entente Allied peoples and the heroism of their forces in achieving a final victory, securing the possibility of peaceful progress for humanity. Similar telegrams have been sent to the King of the Belgians and to the President of Cuba.

Review of War.

repudiated the action, and suspended constitutional government in Greece, while Venizelos resigned, and for a time new Cabinets were the daily diversion in Athens. Venizelos and his followers subsequently set up a provisional government at Saloniki to fight the Bulgarians, who were encroaching upon Greek territory in Macedonia.

In order to block the designs of the King and court, who were doing their best to deliver Greece to the Germans, the Entente Powers were obliged to make a succession of demands upon the Greek government, including the demobilization of most of the army, the surrender of the fleet and the withdrawal of Greek troops from Thessaly. In an effort to enforce their demands the Entente Allies landed marines in Athens—who were fired upon—and finally declared an embargo on imports into Greece. Turmoil and intrigue continued, and in the present year pressure was brought to bear upon Constantine, which compelled him to abdicate the throne in favor of his second son. Venizelos returned as Premier, and Greece was announced as a belligerent on the side of the Entente.

ITALY'S CAMPAIGN.

Italy's great service to the other Entente Powers, as pointed out by Guglielmo Marconi when the recent Italian mission visited New York, was in declaring her neutrality at the very outset of the European conflagration. By so doing she left France assured as to her southeastern frontier, and enabled that nation to concentrate all her soldiers in the north at the hour when they were most supremely needed there. At the same time Italy gave notice to Austria-Hungary that the alliance between them was at an end, and compelled her neighbor to hold an adequate force along the Italian frontiers, ever ready against possible attack.

The subsequent entry of Italy into the war, which took place on May 23, 1915, has not materially changed the situation, except that it has increased the size of the army which Austria-Hungary has had to detach for the Italian frontiers. So far as the Italian campaign goes, it has been an independent one, limited to the nation's spheres of interest.

It has been perhaps the most scientific of all the campaigns, involving tremendous technical difficulties, which have been solved with amazing ingenuity and skill, while the precision and minimum human loss with which it has been conducted are illustrative of the highly-practical mind of the modern Italian.

The Italian campaign has been largely an engineers' and an artilleryman's war, waged in the mountains, much of it in regions of perpetual snow—highly picturesque and spectacular. Finally, it has been as little destructive as war well can be, because the Italians are fighting in territories which they hope to hold after the conflict, and they have spared the towns and villages to the greatest extent possible.

Italy's campaign has divided itself into two parts—in the Trentino, to the north, and in the Isonzo region, to the east. It has been waged on enemy territory, with the Austro-Hungarian forces on the defensive, except in the spring of 1916, when the foe concentrated in the Trentino, and, backed by a moving arsenal of heavy artillery, attempted to drive a wedge into Northern Italy. At first the effort succeeded, but a new Russian offensive compelled the enemy to draw off its forces, and Italy subsequently reconquered the invaded district.

In the Isonzo region Gorizia was the first great objective. Bit by bit the Italians reduced its defenses, but the city offered a long, stubborn resistance, intensified by the Italian determination not to destroy the place, and it was not finally taken until August 9, 1916. Since then the Italians have been fighting their way slowly on over the Carso plateau, with Trieste as their goal.

On January 2 of the present year Italy officially announced that since the beginning of the war she had won 500 square miles of territory and captured 85,000 prisoners, while she had shortened her front from 500 to 375 miles.

In the summer of 1915 a British force was sent from India by way of the Persian Gulf to push up the Tigris River to Bagdad. The force was insufficient, while medical and transport facilities were inadequate. Nevertheless, Gen. Townshend, commander of the expedition, reached Ctesiphon, eighteen miles from Bagdad, late in November. Here he was worsted in battle by a superior Turkish force and compelled to fall back to Kut-el-Amara, where he was starved out before relief could reach him, and compelled to surrender on April 26, 1916.

A later expedition met with a happier fate, and on March 11 of the present year Bagdad was captured by Gen. Maude.

Turkish power in Asia Minor was weakened in 1916 by a revolt on the part of the Grand Sherif of Mecca, who declared his independence and established the kingdom of Arabia.

A Turkish army, officered by Germans, tried in the winter of 1915 to take the Suez Canal and invade Egypt, but it was beaten back, many of the soldiers perishing in the desert.

DENUDED OF COLONIES.

Germany was denuded of most of her colonial empire, consisting of territory equal to about a third of the area of the United States and with a population of some 15,000,000 persons, in the course of the first year of the war. Australia and Japan, which latter country entered the war against Germany on August 16, 1914, seized the Pacific island possessions, while the Japanese, assisted by a detachment of the British army from India, took the province of Kiao-Chow, which Germany had compelled China to cede to her on a ninety-nine-year lease in 1897 as indemnity for the murder of two missionaries.

Soon after the war began the Union of South Africa organized an expedition against the important neighboring colony of German Southwest Africa. The old resentment of the Boers was played upon by German agents to render this abortive, and a rebellion in the Union of South Africa was organized. Gen. Botha, the Premier, took personal command of the British forces, put down the revolt, and in less than a year's time forced the surrender of German Southwest Africa. Kamerun and Togoland also fell, and at this time there remains to the Kaiser only part of German East Africa, the complete conquest of which is believed to be near.

NAVAL ENGAGEMENTS OF WAR.

Undeniably the one most important fact of the war is the British navy. Through this the German fleet has been corked up in its home ports and the German merchant marine chased from the seas, while communication has been maintained among the Entente powers, and the economic resources of the entire neutral world have been open to them in organizing and maintaining their war status.

But this, and the defensive warfare against the submarine, is all there is to the story of the Entente naval forces in so far as concerns the strategy or the outcome of the war. Sea fights there have been at intervals, and these have possessed a variety of incident and a freedom of action in refreshing contrast to the stereotyped character of so much of the land warfare. At the same time they have been quite without effect on the progress or outcome of the conflict.

In the initial year of the conflict there were only two naval engagements that can fairly be dignified by the name of battles. In the first Admiral Cradock, commanding the British squadron in the Pacific, was surprised off the coast of Chili on November 1, by a superior German force, and lost two vessels outright, while a third was seriously damaged. The second battle occurred when the victorious German fleet, under Admiral Von Spee, was met at the Falkland Islands on the other side of South America, on December 8, by another British squadron, under Sir Frederick Sturdee. Four of the German vessels were sunk, while the fifth, the Dresden, escaped, but was destroyed a few months later.

Easily the most important naval encounter of the war to date is the Battle of Jutland on May 31, 1916. Admiral Beatty met a considerable German fleet, which had made a dash out from the Kiel Canal, and engaged with them off the coast of Denmark. Both sides claimed victory, the British declaring that the Germans lost eighteen ships, and the Germans saying that the British lost fifteen ships. Admiral Jellicoe reported twenty-one German vessels as probably lost.

Berlin admitted a loss of 60,720 tons and 3966 men, while London conceded 114,100 tons and 5613 men as lost. A total of 333 British officers perished.

OCCURRENCES OF 1917.

The events of the present year are still fairly fresh in the minds of most newspaper readers, and so need be sketched only in barest outline here. They include four great happenings: the movements toward peace, the beginning of an unrestricted submarine campaign by Germany, the downfall of Czarism in Russia, and the entry of the United States into the world war.

Movements toward peace actually began late in 1916, but as they culminated in the present year, they belong logically to its chronology. On December 12 Germany addressed a note, through the United States, Spain, and Switzerland, to the countries fighting against her, suggesting a conference to discuss peace terms, but making no disclosures as to what her own demands would be. On the 20th of the same month President Wilson, acting on a determination reached prior to Germany's peace note, sent a communication to all the belligerents suggesting that they publicly define their war aims. Germany's answer reiterated her proposal for a peace conference, but again shed no light on her probable demands at such a meeting. The Entente Allies, on the contrary, formulated in considerable detail the objects for which they were fighting, mentioning the evacuation and restoration of all land invaded by Germany, reparation and indemnities, the liberation of Italians, Slavs, Rumanians and Bohemians from Austro-Hungarian rule, and the expulsion of the Turk from Europe.

Germany's reply was to declare unrestricted warfare on belligerent merchant ships, and under a "blockade" order virtually to prohibit neutral commerce with Great Britain. The first decree was a repudiation of the promise made to the United States, after the sinking of the Sussex, to safeguard the lives of passengers on all vessels attacked, and in view of this the German Ambassador was, on February 3, handed his passports. The interference with American commerce on the high seas was a more difficult question to resolve. The "blockade" at once proved to be an impossibility. The one supreme essential to maintaining a blockade, according to long international usage, is that it be effective. From February 1 to February 14 German submarines succeeded in stopping only about 1 per cent. of the ships arriving at or leaving ports of the United Kingdom.

On February 26 President Wilson asked Congress for authority to arm American merchant ships, and on April 2 he went before Congress and asked it to recognize officially that a state of war existed between the United States and the German Empire. On the 6th, Congress passed a resolution declaring that a state of war had been thrust upon America by Germany. The President signed it the same day, thus formally constituting this country a belligerent in the world war.

Meanwhile amazing events had been taking place in Russia, where on March 15 the Czar Nicholas II was compelled to abdicate, and a provisional government was set up with a view to establishing the country later as a democracy. For a time the revolutionary movement completely disorganized the army, and it looked as if Russia were going to be lost to the Entente Powers as a fighting unit. More recently the army has renewed its offensive, but the nation has declared expressly for a peace "without indemnities or annexations."

On the fighting front in France important events have also taken place. Toward the middle of March a retiring movement was begun by the Germans. On March 17 the British announced the occupation of Bapaume and territory on a sixty-mile front from the northeast to the River Oise. On the 19th it was announced that in three days the Kaiser's forces had evacuated 1300 square miles of territory along a 100-mile front from Arras to Soissons.

Vimy Ridge was taken by the British on April 9, while on the 26th announcement was made that in eighteen days the British forces in the region of Arras had taken 18,000 prisoners and 250 cannons. From April 16 to 28 France took 20,780 prisoners and 175 cannons.

In America significant events have trod on the heels of each other since the country entered the war. A bill for compulsory military service was signed by President Wilson on May 18. Toward the latter part of June a detachment of the regular army, under Gen. Pershing, was landed in France.

As the third year of the war draws to a close, it is widely asserted that its future progress, an the decisions of the peace conference which terminate it, lie largely in the hands of two countries—America and Russia. It is easy to exaggerate the truth that underlies this statement. What Russia will do depends upon a capacity of some governing group to hold her together and unite her people in a policy. What America will do depends upon the growth of a war mind, and the capacity that a decentralized system of government develops for military effort.

Russia speaks in the conditional mood and America in the future tense.

The one most continuous, most effective, and most inspiring factor in the war for the last three years has been France, and it is with France that leadership is likely to rest to the end. It is to French ideas and ideals that the synthetically made German materialism is most directly opposed. It is a war between the ame francaise, the soul of France, and the Prussian "scientific mind."

The dignity, the courage, the devotion with which France has borne the brunt of the human and material losses of the war has given her the intellectual and spiritual leadership of it. Much has been said lately—and much that is exaggerated—about the failing power of France. Of course her army has passed its maximum strength and is now on the decline. But so are the armies of Germany and Austria. And the falling off in France is not so great as is often imagined. Perhaps the French army of today is within half a million men of the highest strength it has had in the war.

Moreover, the moral ascendency of France may be said to increase rather than diminish with her losses. In the evolution of the war or the making of peace Russia may raise her voice with the strength of vast resources and untold man power. America may be heard by reason of her matchless industrial possibilities and her disinterested idealism. But France will have the silent testimony of all her children who sleep along that tragic line from the dunes of Belgium to the peaks of Alsace—in the words of Victor Hugo, "Ceux qui pieusement sont mort pour la Patrie."

France speaks with the voice of a million dead.

WOMEN! IT'S CHEAP! USE LEMON JUICE TO MAKE BEAUTY LOTION

In all weathers the skin and complexion can be kept wonderfully clear, soft and white by the use of this inexpensive lemon lotion which any girl or woman can easily prepare.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan, and is the ideal skin softener, smoother and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and hidden beauty of any skin. Those who will make it a habit to gently massage this lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands once or twice daily may be repaid with a skin that is flexible and young looking and a peach-like complexion.

Statistical.

PLEAS FOR EXEMPTION SHOW A FALLING-OFF.

Drop to Fifty Per Cent. as Number of Men Examined Increases.

As THE number of men examined daily for the army draft here increases, a diminution in the relative number seeking exemption becomes apparent. For the first two days, when 100 or less were examined daily, the number seeking to be exempted was 60 per cent. of the total. Yesterday 270 men were examined by the local boards—three sitting—and the number seeking to escape military service was 131, roughly 50 per cent. Sixty-nine of the total were physically disqualified (roughly 25 per cent.) and sixty-eight (roughly 25 per cent.) did not ask to be exempted.

Lee A. Phillips, chairman of Exemption Board No. 9, at No. 3 [illegible] Square, yesterday mailed an additional 100 notices to men ordered in his district to appear for examination next Wednesday. This makes 440 men called for this district. The original quota was [illegible], which meant that 210 names would have been called, but owing to the fact that many of the young men in the district have already enlisted Mr. Phillips decided to call additional names.

Twenty-two of the men called yesterday failed to appear. If these men have not enlisted, and do not show up for examination, they will be automatically listed for service. Failure on their part to answer the call sent them later to appear will cause them to be charged with desertion from the service, and they will be punished accordingly. Mr. Phillips, however, does not believe that this is the case. He thinks they have already enlisted and are counting on this as an exemption.

District No. 17 yesterday morning examined twelve men. The board members, however, according to [illegible] Gail B. Johnson, have decided not to make public the names of those examined at present. Mr. Johnson stated that examinations had not as yet begun and that the examinations yesterday were merely for the purpose of testing the [illegible] elaborate system. All other boards have taken the opposite view and are giving out the names as fast as they are examined.

AT NO. 14.

City District No. 14, of which Hollywood forms the greatest part, had sixty-nine men up for examination. Seventy-eight were called for examination, but three of this number were exempt as aliens and eight as already having enlisted. Four had previously asked for transfers to other boards. Five did not appear for examination. They have ten days in which to do so. A few were given examinations who had not been called till next week. They said that it was more convenient for them to be examined yesterday.

Board members in District No. 14 are of the opinion that another call would be necessary if all asking exemption are granted it. They were informed, however, that this latter should not be the case. And to this end they have gone a step farther than most of the other boards in preparing blanks upon which the men claiming exemption because of dependents must state the net income not only of his own parents, but of his wife's parents. In case either of the two sets of parents are able to support the dependents of the draftee, his claim for exemption will probably be refused.

Wallace Reid, the motion-picture actor, appeared for examination in District No. 14 and passed the physical test with flying colors. However, he asked for exemption blanks. He has a wife and child.

Victor Schenrich of No. 861 North Western avenue, a camera-man, was exempted as an alien, but stated that he had enlisted, nevertheless. He is a German, but has taken his first papers.

IN LITTLE RUSSIA.

The alleged activity of a local attorney in the Russian settlement, in draft section No. 16, located in Boyle Heights at Chicago and First streets, was yesterday reported to Gordon Lawson, Assistant United States District Attorney.

In that district there are 450 registrants, and of that number 400 in round numbers, are subjects of the former Czar, and aliens, who are technically free from the selective draft. It is claimed that the lawyer called on the exemption board to obtain 400 exemption blanks, and that he was refused. The allegation is that he had arranged to collect a fee of $5 from each Russian that he could successfully cause to evade the draft. The attorney denies any attempt to oppose the enforcement of the law, but admitted that he was to be paid for "legal advice."

Mr. Lawson said that Russian aliens, as well as all others, were immune from the draft, but that there might be a number of the men whose names were on the registration lists, who had become naturalized American citizens. The matter will be investigated fully tomorrow, and in order to assist in the clearing up of the situation, the lawyer will be summoned to appear before Mr. Lawson and given an opportunity to explain.

RULES FOR APPEAL.

The following appeal rules were announced by the district board yesterday:

(1.) All appeals to the district board must come through the local board.

(2.) The district board will not entertain any appeal not made on the proper form in the proper way provided for in the regulations by the President.

(3.) In deciding upon appeals where the district board has original jurisdiction the question that must be answered is: Can any other person fill your place in the industry you are engaged in? Unless it can be clearly shown by affidavit that in the event of your entering the service no person other than yourself can fill your place, you will not be exempted.

(4.) No exemptions as a class will be entertained. Each individual case must be passed upon.

(5.) Local boards will facilitate their work and the work of the district board by strictly and promptly conforming to the rule laid down in the Rules and Regulations in Sec. 24, Page 52.

(6.) Persons called, claiming exemption account of industrial occupation, must comply with instructions on Page 6 of "Bulletin of Information for Persons Registered." Appeal to the district board can be made in no other way. The local board must furnish the blanks designated.

HOW TO MAKE APPEALS.

Claims of appeal may be made by a person within ten days after the day when notice has been posted and mailed that such person's name has been certified to the district as one who has been called for service and not exempted or discharged.

Therefore if you desire to appeal:

(1.) Go to the local board and get or copy Form 153 or 154 for filing your claims of appeal.

(2.) Get or copy also Form 151 or 152 for notifying the district board of appeal.

(3.) Send your notice of appeal (Form 151 or 152) to the district board.

(5.) Do this within ten days from the day when notice that your name was certified to the district board was posted and mailed.

Remember:

(1.) You can only appeal the final order of the board exempting or discharging or refusing to exempt or discharge you. You can not appeal other orders or action of the local board.

[Signed]

W. H. HOLABIRD,
Chairman.
SETH R. BROWN,
Secretary.

SEEKING EXEMPTION.

Len Livernash, noted athlete of the University of Southern California, and former captain of the football team there in 1915, asked exemption yesterday. He is now teaching athletics at Lincoln High School.

R. E. Leonard and his brother, Louie L. Leonard, of No. 125 North Avenue 24, both claimed to be the sole support of their mother and little 8-year-old sister. After passing the physical examination they went home to decide which would go. It was finally decided that Louie would go, because his older brother has the best job of the two and is better able to care for the mother and sister.

One of the strangest requests was that of a young fellow who asked for exemption because his father can't hear very well and is getting along in years. He said if his father should die that his mother doesn't know much about the business. His father, he said, has much real estate.

Horace Clay Coe asked exemption because he is a medical student.

Willis O. Bailey and Arthur Duke Love asked exemption on the grounds that they are members of a well-recognized religious sect whose convictions are against war.

WILL CALL MORE.

Thomas Spalding, a member of the Exemption Board, stated that district No. 18 will issue another call, probably of 1000 men. This district will examine men all day today and on Monday. On Tuesday the board will sit and pass on all exemptions filed.

OUTSIDE THE CITY.

Imperial district No. 1 held its first examinations yesterday. Two of the four exxamined were rejected and James R. Ford, manager of a title company, and William Stencil, deputy sheriff, were accepted. The regular examinations will begin tomorrow morning.

Pomona district examinations will begin tomorrow morning and continue Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The board plans on handling ninety the first and second days and eighty-four on the third. Examinations began at Alhambra yesterday.

It was announced that postoffice employees will not be exempt as a class. There are approximately 1000 men employed in the local postoffice. Twenty-two clerks and twenty-five carriers have already been examined for service.

City district No. 2, Palms-Westgate, the first board in Southern California to complete examining the full number of men called, will meet tomorrow and pass on exemptions. This board is planning on calling out forty more names to be sure and make up its quota of twenty.

DRAFTERS ARE ANTI-HYMEN.

Youths Seek Marriage Licenses of Exemption Board to Escape.

A number of Pomona swains yesterday appeared at the exemption board headquarters asking for marriage licenses, on the theory that by entering a state of matrimony they might escape service in the army. The board enlightened the young men and sent them away with instructions to appear Monday for physical examination.

One member of this board yesterday stated that they were receiving so many requests for exemption blanks that he believed practically every man on the lists would ask to be excused.

MEN ACCEPTED IN LOCAL ARMY DRAFT

In the accompanying lists of men examined and accepted yesterday as physically fit for military services under the draft law the stars indicate those who have not asked for exemption:

Another Personal Word To Parents:

In the preceding advertisements, mention has been made of the numerous forms of recognition which my school in San Diego has received from Colleges and from the Government; the individual attention has been mentioned; the happy and healthful surroundings of the school have been spoken of; the unusually fine personnel of the faculty has been emphasized; and it has been made clear that none but desirable boys are knowingly admitted, if a boy wears our uniform through a whole year, it is a good indication that he has been gentlemanly in his conduct and has been making an honest effort in his studies. We have emphasized that Christian character training is a great feature of our work. But these facts have been given by the school itself. Now read some extracts from letters received and know what the parents think. I desire to talk to you about your boy's schooling before my return to San Diego.

These same high standards I promise for the new Pasadena Army and Navy Academy, which will begin its first session, October 8th, in the buildings formerly owned by the Annandale Golf Club.

Very Truly Yours, THOS. A. DAVIS

READ CAREFULLY EVERY ONE OF THESE EXTRACTS

Myron Westover, Attorney, State Corporation Commission, San Francisco: "I consider the instruction which Wychoff has received at your school excellent and your faculty very able, and high-minded, and devoted to the best interests of the boys entrusted to their care. Our boy gained thirty-five pounds in weight between September and the following April and has been very greatly improved in carriage and physique."

James Frantz, Roanoke, Virgina: "Randolph arrived safely Monday and seems to be thoroughly pleased with the school and enthusiastic about Southern California. He has improved beyond our expectations. The whole spirit of the boy seems changed and he has developed so much physically. We are thoroughly pleased with what you accomplished with him and wish to thank you again for the interest shown him and for the good care taken of him."

C. H. Algert, House of Representatives, New Mexico: "We have not seen our boy since we placed him at your school on January first, but our opinion formed from reading his letters and your reports is, that he has made fine progress mentally and physically."

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Curtis, Omaha, Nebraska: "We want you to know how much we appreciate what you have done for our son. His health required a milder climate than our own State, and the matter of choosing a school for him was a hard one to decide, but the results both in his physical and mental development are sufficient proof that we made no mistake in our choice."

F. T. Emmons, Pasadena, Cal.: "I cannot help but notice the marked progress which our son has made both as a student and as a man. Having had the wonderful privilege of visiting the various classes in your school a few days last winter, the three qualities which appeared to me to establish the high standard of the San Diego Army and Navy Academy were absolute thoroughness, efficiency and discipline. It gives me great pleasure to express my appreciation of the influence of yourself, the faculty, the school spirit, and the splendid associates which comprise the student body."

Mrs. T. A. Pearce, U. S. Army: "I am delighted to say that I am very well pleased with the influence and good training the boys evidently receive."

J. Irving Crowell, Los Angeles, Cal.: "Anything I can do in way of reference or otherwise to assist you for next year's work, do not hesitate to call on me."

Mrs. Wentworth Irving, Edmonton, Canada (temporarily in San Diego:) "The boys are well fed and happy, two things seldom found in a boarding school. The surroundings, discipline, and associates have all been gratifying to me. The faculty is all that can be desired and, from my point of view, the place is ideal and I trust for some years to come that my son will be under the supervision of Capt. Davis."

Mrs. A. J. Leonard, Los Angeles: "It has been such a wonderfully refreshing thought to know that Lionel was so happy in his work."

Mrs. L. H. Harrod, Los Angeles: "I simply love that school of yours, and if I'm ever in a position to do anything for it and you, I surely will."

Mrs. Ella H. Scott, Los Angeles, Cal.: "The discipline cannot be excelled and I believe that they are receiving all in your school that helps to make them honest men."

Arthur W. Savage, Savage Tire Co., San Diego: "The end of my son's fourth year of attendance at the San Diego Army and Navy Academy now approaches. Every moment of those four school years has been happy, profitable moments; every day has developed his character, both body and brain acquiring harmonious normal growth. I heartily recommend your Academy to parents seeking a first-class education for their sons."

Mrs. Av. Grosetta, Tucson, Arizona: "I gladly add my very sincere testimony to the ever-ready expression of my appreciation of the good progress my son has made physically and mentally, in one short year at the Army and Navy Academy, due to the regularity and efficiency of your school.

Mrs. T. D. Baer, Salt Lake City, Utah: "My long acquaintance with you and my close observation of your school decided me to choose the Academy for my boy this year, and I am convinced that I have chosen wisely. I anticipate with genuine satisfaction my son's continued attendance at the Academy."

Harold Bell Wright, Tucson, Arizona: "Permit me to express my sincere appreciation of the splendid work your school is doing; the thoroughness shown in every department, the splendid discipline, so sane, practical and upbuilding, and the most excellent general influence of faculty and student body, to my thinking, place the San Diego Army and Navy Academy in the very front ranks of like institutions. This has been by far the most satisfactory school year that my son, Gilbert, has ever passed, and with all my heart I thank you and your loyal assistants. Gilbert will surely finish the full course with you, and his two brothers will follow in due time."

Mrs. A. L. McGue, Hollywood, Cal.: "Best wishes for the success and welfare of the Army and Navy Academy, and that many years may be permitted you to help other boys as you have ours."

Chas. W. Rebmann, San Francisco, Cal: "The growing influences attending your management seems to be just the thing for a growing youngster."

Mrs. Ella H. Jones, Los Angeles, Cal.: "I want to express to you and your faculty my gratitude for the splendid results Emmett has attained last year. The best proof I have is that the boy himself wishes to return next year."

Mrs. W. M. Bonner, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma: "The discipline which you and your able faculty instill into your boys is of far-reaching moral benefit to them. I can certainly say that I expect to have Folsom continue in the Academy until he finishes his course."

NITRO-GLYCERIN CACHE NEAR RAILWAY CULVERT.

WHILE running a property line yesterday on ground owned by the Salt Lake Railway, near the Los Angeles River and about 800 feet south of Ninth street, Civil Engineer Walter E. Jessup, of the railway company, uncovered enough nitro-glycerin to wreck any one of the Broadway skyscrapers. The deadly fluid was contained in a common medicine bottle. Near-by, was found a second bottle containing five six-inch fuses with detonators attached.

The explosive was found within thirty feet of the big culvert, on what is known among railway employees of the city, as "Smelter Curve." Thirty feet from the spot where the two bottles were uncovered is the big "smelter" culvert, which has, since it was constructed, been a favorite hiding place for hoboes and I.W.W.

The dangerous liquid was given into the care of Special Agent C. S. Gilbert, of the Salt Lake Railway, who scattered it over the ground, that no damage might result. The caps and fuses were also destroyed.

According to police theories, the nitro-glycerin had been cached by either an I.W.W., or a man who had evil designs upon the railway bridges of the city. It is thought possible that it may have been the property of the man known as "Bill" Jones, who was shot by an army sentry recently in a gun battle near Sixteenth street and Santa Fe avenue.

An investigation has been started by the police in an effort to determine who is responsible for the burial of the deadly chemical. Fingerprint Expert Sanders will today take prints of the finger impressions on the bottle which contained the fluid.

How long the bottles had lain in the earth is unknown. From evidences around the post which marks the Salt Lake property line, a few feet from where the bottles were found, the cache was made less than three weeks ago.

During the past five months, since the declaration of war with Germany by President Wilson, all police officers and the special policemen of the Salt Lake Railway have been ordered to keep the huge culvert clear of I.W.W. and hoboes. On numerous occasions in the past, men seen around this culvert, which is ten feet in diameter and fifty feet long, have been connected with criminal activities in the city.

A further investigation of the ownership of the nitro will be made by police detectives today.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BUTTE, Aug. 3.—No minister of the gospel will perform the last sacred rights over the remains of Frank H. Little, the I.W.W. chieftain, who was lynched here Wednesday morning, but leaders of the Metal Mine Workers' Union will read messages from labor organizations in various parts of the State, at the funeral of the deceased tomorrow.

Following the receipt of a telegram from W. D. Haywood, secretary-treasurer of the I.W.W., to "bury Little on his battlegrounds," changes in the funeral arrangements have been made and interment will take place in Mountain View Cemetery.

Twenty men picked by the leaders of the Metal Mine Workers' Union will carry the casket to the grave, followed by several thousand miners.

Mayor Maloney has prohibited speechmaking, demonstrations and carrying of banners, and to insure the enforcement of his orders, the Chief of Police has ordered every man under his control to report for duty tomorrow afternoon. The Sheriff's office has strengthened its force and is ready to act promptly in any emergency.

The inquest, which started yesterday, was postponed until Monday. No new clews have developed as to the identity of the members of the lynching party.

MEN IN CAMP SURE OF COMMISSIONS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4.—Barring unforeseen contingencies, every man remaining tonight in the reserve officers' training camp here may consider that he has been recommended for a commission. Those who failed of recommendation have departed by hundreds in the last few days, bolstered by the War Department's suggestion that they enlist with prospects for a noncommissioned officer's post immediately and a chance at a commission later on. A few will be held over for the second training camp.

No official list of commissions and those who get them will be given out at any time, in the opinion of army authorities here. Each successful man will be advised by telegraph from the War Department. It also was announced that a list of the men now in camp would not be available, for military reasons.

Failure to be recommended for a commission carried, in a large number of instances, no reflection on the candidate's physical or mental ability, it was pointed out. Many young men were passed over because others more mature and seasoned were available. The process was that of selecting the best from a consistently high class of men and experience in handling men was deemed an important factor. Many young men lacked this altogether.

MANY ARE ENTOMBED BY AN EXPLOSION.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

CLAY (Ky.) Aug. 4.—Between 140 and 150 men were entombed by an explosion early today in the south entry of No. 7 mine of the West Kentucky Coal Company here, according to Charles S. Richardson, vice-president and general manager.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon 100 of those caught behind the debris which had blocked the entrance to the mine had been brought to the surface. Nine were dead and fifteen severely injured.

A mine rescue car ordered from Evansville arrived at 12:30 o'clock and its rescue crews began at once the effort to penetrate the inner workings in search of the forty or fifty men believed to be still in the mine.

No cause for the explosion, which in other quarters was attributed to gas, is known, according to Mr. Richardson, who does not connect it with the strike of union miners, which has been in progress since July 3.

DOWNEY FAIR ATTRACTS TEN THOUSAND PLEASED VISITORS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

DOWNEY, Aug. 4.—Downey was decorated in the gayest fashion today for its big occasion of the year, the community fair. It is estimated that 10,000 visitors enjoyed the hospitality of the local people. Two thousand pounds of beef was barbecued, which, with thousands of pounds of buns and many pounds of beans, was served under the direction of Joe Romiro, the famous barbecue chef.

The fair is the fruit of a civic awakening started last year by the younger element of the town. It was nearly double the size and showing of last year.

A patriotic motif characterized the entire activities of the day, the local chapter of the Red Cross holding the position of honor. The chapter received as a benefit from the sale of tags about $200, which it will forward to the war fund of the national society.

The fair was held under a large circus tent and was composed of local exhibits of fruit, flowers, vegetables, poultry, needlework and cooking. Opening from the tent a midway furnished amusements for the crowds.

The activities of the day began with a parade of about fifty beautifully decorated floats, ending at the fair grounds, where band and instrumental music filled the programme during the hours set apart for viewing the exhibits. In the afternoon a rodeo was given, in which many fancy riders of Southern California competed for cash purses. The affair was continued in the evening with music and dancing.

LARGE TRACT OF BEAN LAND CHANGES HANDS.

One-hundred-year-old Adobe at Casitas is Razed to Make Way for Modern Home—Girls of the State School Conduct One of Most Efficient Apricot Camps.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENTURA, Aug. 4.—The purchase of 1200 acres of bean land on the San Lorenzo ranch by Fred L. Hogue, president of the Hogue-Kellogg Company of this city, has just been completed. This land is situated near King City and was formerly owned by the Spreckels Sugar Company. The consideration is said to be $180,000. It is understood that other large deals are pending in this district.

The Casitas home of Gerald Waterhouse, at one time included in the vast acreage of the Spanish grant and including the original adobe ranch-house which has been given much notoriety in history, is being razed. The house was more than 100 years old. A $7000 dwelling will be erected on the sightly spot at once.

LARGE APRICOT CROP.

The largest apricot crop in the history of the Ventura-avenue district is now drying. With the winding up of the season, ripe fruit is still coming on with a rush, so that fruit pitters and assistants are working long hours. At the Edward Canet ranch a great quantity of small apricots, which would otherwise be lost, will be saved by drying the fruit as a whole, pit and all. Lute Ramsaur was obliged to get 8500 poles to support his trees, so heavy were they with fruit, Mr. Ramsaur's being one of the banner crops of the county.

The entire crop of George Willet was successfully completed in twenty-three days. Handled by the girls of the California State School, under the direction of efficient teachers, this camp was one of the cleanest and best maintained in this section. One hundred and twenty tons of green fruit were washed, cut and placed upon trays to dry.

Many of the camps have already broken up. The fruit workers, who came from all parts of the State to assist in saving the fruit, were feted at several places.

FATHER OF WALNUT INDUSTRY IS DEAD.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA BARBARA, Aug. 4.—Joseph Sexton, 75 years old, father of the walnut industry in California, is dead at his home in Goleta. In 1867 he secured 120 pounds of walnuts from San Francisco, they having been imported from Chile. These he planted in his nursery and developed sixty young trees, maturing a crop of soft-shell nuts. These he crossed, securing the present commercial walnut of California.

He also introduced pampas grass into the State, large fortunes formerly being made in the pampas business. For several years he had been experimenting to secure a commercial avocado and his nurseries contained over 100 varieties gathered from all over the world.

The funeral service was held today at Goleta Hall. He leaves a widow and nine children, Harry Eugene, Goleta; Mrs. Lottie McDonald, Orange; Miss Marietta Sexton, Goleta; Mrs. Rose Dearborn, Orland, Cal.; Mrs. Edna Beatty, Covina; Joseph F., Santa Barbara; Ernest C., Goleta; Horace A., Santa Barbara; Mrs. Lucy Griffin, Salt Lake.

FIRES ARE CAUSED BY ELECTRIC STORMS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 4.—Thunderstorms of unprecedented violence in the high Sierras east of here this season have not only kept camping parties from visiting the various meadow resorts, but have set numerous brush and timber fires. The number of small fires has been without parallel and the forest rangers are worked to the limit to keep these fires from spreading to the heavy timber.

Fires in the brush of Grouse Valley and along the banks of Trout Meadows, both set by lightning, called out every available man this week. The damage done was inconsiderable, but the fire was subdued only after a long, hard fight.

Temperature averages in the mountains this year have been much higher than usual and the humidity has made the weather at times in the lower levels of the hills rather uncomfortable.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, Aug. 4.—The deciduous fruit industry of this county has at last overcome the lead so long maintained by citrus fruits, according to the annual report of Horticultural Commissioner Sharp, just completed.

The total acreage in deciduous fruits is now 28,076, as compared with 25,726 for citrus fruits. The gain has been made in new plantings this year, the deciduous acreage having increased 2519 as against 450 for citrus. Corns Lift Off

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift any corn or callus off with fingers.

No humbug! You truly can lift off every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses on bottom of feet without one bit of pain.

A genius in Cincinnati discovered freezone. It is an ether compound and tiny bottles of this magic fluid can now be had at any drug store for a few cents.

Apply several drops of this freezone upon a tender, aching corn or a callus. Instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you lift it off with the fingers. You feel no pain while applying freezone or afterwards.

Just think! No more corns or calluses to torture you and they go without causing one twinge of pain or soreness.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle of freezone on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WHITTIER, Aug. 4.—Falling sixty feet from the top of a silo to the solid concrete floor, three men were killed near Norwalk at the Walter Greening ranch this forenoon. The dead are Eugene Wilkinson, Lloyd Carmel and E. B. Schaffer. Two were killed instantly and the third died soon after. Ropes which held the staging on the inside of the high tube broke, precipitating the three workmen to the bottom. All three victims were residents of Artesia. The silo was being built by W. L. Jencks of Artesia and was almost completed.

DESTROYED BY FIRE.

The large barn of Sargent Bros. of East Whittier was totally destroyed by fire this afternoon. Not only the barn, but some forty tons of hay, a horse, and considerable machinery were burned. No one was at home when the fire broke out, and when neighbors rushed to the scene it was too late to do anything to stop the flames. Only a strong wind in a favorable direction prevented the residence from catching fire.

AGED MAN'S DEATH CALLED ACCIDENT.

JURY FINDS NO EVIDENCE OF FOUL PLAY.

Inquest Into the Cremation of Azusa Apiarist at His Shack Fails to Support Theory of Murder and Robbery Advanced by His Relatives.

After a short deliberation, the Coroner's jury called for an inquest into the cause of the death of J. C. Ebert, the aged apiarist of Auzsa who was incinerated in his home last Wednesday night, found death to be accidental.

Ebert's charred body was found in the ruins of his shack when the last flames had died away, and from a cursory examination made by sons of the dead man it was thought that foul play had entered into the case. The mystery of the lost notes is not yet cleared, but the lonely old man may have placed them elsewhere for safekeeping. He had kept his money in a can at home, and the finding of $800 in gold in a molten mass in a can is said to explode any robbery theory.

The death probably will go down in the records as another mystery in Azusa, being the second this year in which lonely aged persons have been victims. Six months ago an unknown assailant murdered Mrs. Adeline R. Russell, an aged woman, in a lonely cabin. No reason ever was discovered for this crime.

GUARD ENTERS ARMY TODAY.

Two Thousand Angelenos are Included in Muster.

Battery F will Mobilize at Nine this Morning.

Last Unit to be Called Out; Full War Strength.

What is left of the National Guard of California will become a part of the United States Army today. This includes about 2000 Los Angeles soldiers. The Seventh California Infantry, engineers and naval militia have been in the Federal service for some time.

The units to be federalized today in Los Angeles are eight companies of Coast Artillery, Troop D, First Squadron of Cavalry; Field Hospital No. 1; Battery F of the First Regiment of Field Artillery; Ambulance Company No. 2, and the headquarters staff of the First California Brigade.

Battery F, Field Artillery, received telegraphic orders last night from Adjt.-Gen. Boree at Sacramento, to assemble at its rendezvous at 9 o'clock this morning. It is probable the men will be on their way to a mobilization camp a few hours later. They will assemble at the Grand-avenue school, Eighth street and Grand avenue at promptly 9 o'clock.

The battery is at full war strength, 190 men. Its officers follow: Captain, H. L. Powell, Jr.; first lieutenants, Everett Shipley and C. E. McDowell; second lieutenants, Frank Rouse and Joseph Weston.

The Coast Artillery companies are to be mobilized at Normal Hill Center by Col. Harry B. Light. All eight companies of this branch will encamp at Fort MacArthur within the next few days.

Co. C of the California Engineers will be mobilized at the Armory in Exposition Park. The company has 164 men and officers, twenty-four of whom are mounted. It is under the command of Capt. Edward Blaine Hayden.

The 100 men of Troop D will also mobilize at the Armory under Capt. Gunn. The First California Squadron has only four troops, of which Troop D is the Los Angeles organization. The mobilization at the Armory will also include Maj. C. W. Decker of the Field Hospital with his six officers and seventy-three men.

In California, the call will affect about 6500 men. Indiana, Kentucky, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and California Guardsmen, going into the Federal service today, are the last of the State troops to be incorporated in the regular army. The militia of the other States was federalized during July.

Fifteen men from Universal City will leave with the Seventeenth Coast Artillery for Ft. McArthur today. The list embraces those from picture stars to property men including Leonard Clapman, W. B. Paquette, Stanley Fitz, Dwight Robinson, Stanley McCullough, F. Quincy, Fred Burnworth, H. Godwin, Herbert Kirkpatrick, Henry Hathaway, Hugh Meisel, Mack Wright, Bert Howell, Robert Klein and Alfred Conners. The nucleus of Co. 17, C.A.C. originally was formed last year among the boys of the motion picture city.

FIRE AN OBJECT LESSON.

Modern Machinery to Replace Damaged Plant at Colton Mill.

The greater part of the machinery damaged by the fire of a couple of weeks ago, which so seriously crippled the Colton mill of the Globe Grain and Milling Company that it was necessary to shut down operations entirely, will be replaced with new and up-to-date models. The new equipment will cost more than $15,000 and orders will be placed within a short time, as the machinery must all come from the East. It is hoped the mill again may be running within two months.

It is a common saying, "I never had a good picture." Mr. Steckel caters to difficult subjects, and it is not an experiment you undertake when having pictures of your children or a portrait of yourself made at the Steckel studio, but a certainty that the charm and beautiful expressions of childhood and individuality in portraits will be faithfully portrayed, and it is well said that when you once have had a portrait or beautiful child study from this justly-famous studio, none other will please. All Over Body and Face. Burned and Itched. Scratched and Became So Irritated Had to Remove Clothing.
"I suffered terribly for years from a breaking out and an awful burning and itching sensation all over my body and face. The itching was so intense that I scratched until my body became so irritated that I would have to remove my clothing three or four times a day. I could not work when the weather was warm and I could not rest at night. If I became heated I seemed to be worse.
"A friend advised me to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment, as they had healed her of a skin irritation. I immediately purchased the Soap and Ointment and now I am completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. R. A. Lasater, 1112-11th St., Denver, Colo.
While Cuticura works wonders in most cases of skin troubles its properties are so mild and so delicately combined that it is also ideal for every-day use in the toilet, bath and nursery.

Discolored or Spotty Skin Easily Peeled Off
The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which most skins are subject at this season, may readily be gotten rid of. Mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any druggist's. There's no more effective way of banishing tan, freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process itself doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.
Wrinkles caused by weather, worry or illness, are best treated by a simple solution of powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in this produces a truly marvelous transformation.

NEW SHIPYARD SHATTERS ALL BUILDING RECORDS.

Submerged Tidelands Turned into Vast Industrial Plant in Fifty Days.

IN CONFORMANCE to certain rules and regulations relating to the dissemination of information concerning Federal war activities, The Times, which, with other newspapers of the country, has subscribed to the principles of voluntary censorship outlined and laid down by the government, refrains from the publication of a number of important details in connection with the accompanying account of the operations of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company in the carrying out of important government contracts. This is also in compliance with the request of representatives of the company, who, in turn, have their instructions from the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation.

With more than thirty acres of submerged tidelands reclaimed as solid ground, with a dozen buildings finished or nearing completion, with the keel of one of the great steel ships which it has contracted to build for the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation already laid and the keel blocks for another set in place, all in a period of fifty days, the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Drydock Company of this city has eclipsed all local construction records in the creation of the huge shipbuilding plant which it is establishing in the outer harbor district of Los Angeles. This is one big Los Angeles corporation doing "its bit."

When Uncle Sam accepted the bold challenge of the German autocracy he did so not only with full knowledge of the tremendous preparation and formidable efficiency of the self-constituted enemy whose aggressions and insults he had determined to resist, but with complete realization of his own inexcusable unpreparedness and the inadequacy of his military equipment. Nevertheless he did not falter. Unprepared himself to turn out the vast armament for his troops and the mighty armadas needed to carry the battle to the enemy and succor to his allies, he turned to the captains of industry throughout the land and bade them bring their genius for organization to bear upon the military problems confronting their country.

The result of this appeal has exceeded all expectations, and, there is reason for believing, has dumfounded the enemy. Private initiative personified in the manufacturers and financiers who, in times of peace, have made the United States supreme in the fields of production is more than proving a match for the governmental war machine of the German empire, with all its enormous equipment and its trained precision of operation. In no way is this being shown more conclusively than in the records being made by private concerns under government direction in the construction of the gigantic merchant marine with which this country proposes to set at naught the murderous work of the Teuton undersea commerce destroyers. And Los Angeles may well be proud of the fact that, although the shipbuilding industry is comparatively new in Southern California, the private shipbuilders of this section are more than holding their own in the race to give Uncle Sam his needed ships.

AMAZING PROGRESS.

To realize the accomplishment of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Drydock Company one must have seen the site of its plant a few weeks ago, before its operations were actually started. The whole [illegible] acres of tidelands leased by the company from the city, with the exception of a mound of about two acres, was under water when the dredgers were set up for use on June [illegible]. On the one dry spot the company built its offices.

More than 400,000 cubic yards of mud and sand have been dredged from the open water of the west basin in front of the site and pumped upon the former tidelands until approximately thirty-two acres of solid dry ground has been created. This work has all been done by the company itself. Eight hundred thousand cubic yards more are to be sucked out of the basin floor in the deepening of the water area required for the launching of vessels and for the filling in of the rest of the company's land. Upon the expiration of the company's lease all the built-up ground and improvements will revert to the city.

In order to save time and be ready to lay the keels for the first of the vessels ordered by the government with the least possible delay, the company resorted to the expedient of sinking piling and laying the foundations for all its buildings in water-covered tidelands and then filling in around them. Railway tracks were then laid to the site on a specially filled-in roadbed, and lumber and other building materials hauled in. These materials were deposited on the site as fast as ground could be built up to hold them and work was started on a building as soon as an island had been made for it in the shallows. In this way it has been possible for the company to construct its plant while the very ground under it was being made.

Even more remarkable has been the achievement of the company in getting the ships ordered by the Federal shipping board actually under way. The board in awarding contracts for steel and wooden ships to the shipbuilders of the country has emphasized the fact that no delays would be tolerated in any quarter. Where old concerns were employed it was made plain that all work for private interests must be put aside. In the case of brand new corporations, such as the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, which have responded to the general demand for the mobilization of industrial enterprise and capital, requirements have been set forth which have seemingly been impossible of realization. The big local shipbuilding company, however, is now well ahead of its schedule.

SHIPS, SHIPS, SHIPS!

The Federal board's one unrelenting cry is for ships. To get keels actually laid and hulls under way is the object of all the constant urgings of the military authorities. The new Los Angeles corporation, at least, among the concerns of the country that are starting from the ground up, has already made good in this respect.

The keel plate for one of the vessels to be built for government service by the company was laid on the keel blocks on July 23. Riveted and in place, it forms a long ribbon of steel an inch thick and four feet wide. On the blocks set up for a second keel the plate will be laid down tomorrow. Within two weeks two more keels will have been laid. Each vessel will be of the steel freighter type known as the Robert Dollar, after the specifications of vessels already well known in the world's commerce, and will be of 8800 tons dead weight. Each will be 429 feet in length, with 54-foot beam.

Besides the fact that the starting of these boats will mark only the beginning of the operations at the plant, the details of the company's contracts with the government come under the classification of information which must be withheld from publication until officially released by the government. The company, since setting up the equipment with which the first keel was made and laid down, has been putting in machinery to handle others as fast as the building slips can be made ready for them. Everything points to the carrying on of operations the full scope of which has as yet been only surmised.

SLIPS COMPLETED.

Two building slips, each 460 feet long by 96 feet wide, have already been completed. Piling is being driven for a third and ground is being prepared for a fourth. Each slip extends for a distance of about 100 feet of its length under water, narrowing at the end where it goes between the heavy cluster of piling forming the launching ways. At the point where it terminates 60 feet beyond the launching ways it is 15 feet below the high tide line. The vessel launched down this sloping ways slips at the end into water that has a depth of 20 feet at extreme low tide to a distance out from the ways of 600 feet.

The building and launching of steel ships is a science in itself. The hull must be set up plate by plate and rib by rib on a trestle that grows with the ship itself and which is composed of blocks of wood piled one on top of another and only lightly nailed together. It must be a structure that will do the double duty of standing as firm as a ledge of rock while the hull is being riveted together and of falling readily apart like a house of cards when ways built at the last moment have been greased and a last prop of almost hair-trigger adjustment has been knocked away to allow the vessel to coast down into the water. There are no more skilled workmen in the world than those to whom the builders of ships entrust this last

DECK OFFICERS TO BE TRAINED HERE.

FREE SHIPPING BOARD SCHOOL IS ORGANIZED.

Institution to Open Next Week will be One of Three in California to Fit Men in Few Months for Good Berths in Merchant Marine.

Organization of the twenty-fifth of the United States Shipping Board's free training schools for merchant marine deck officers was begun here yesterday. The school will open the 13th inst. at the harbor, will accommodate a class of thirty and will be one of six institutions on this Coast through which the Shipping Board will help meet the demand for 10,000 new officers—5000 navigators and 5000 engineers—to fill the complements of the great merchant fleet that will soon bear the American flag overseas.

It is proposed to find and train these 10,000 officers in the next eighteen months. For that purpose the country has been districted and California has been designated Section Five. Under the leadership of Henry Howard, a business man of Boston who originated the idea, the Shipping Board has organized a recruiting service and is now engaged in establishing thirty navigation schools and has organized seven schools for marine engineers.

Last Friday Farnham P. Griffiths of No. 465 California street, San Francisco, was by telegraph appointed the chief of Section Five and started at once for this city to meet Winfield M. Thompson of Boston, representative of the Shipping Board's recruiting service, who was en route from Galveston. They met here yesterday and immediately began the work of organizing the local school. They will be in San Diego to organize school number twenty-six about the middle of the week, and will then go to San Francisco, where the third California school is to be located. Other schools will be organized at Portland, Or., and Astoria and Seattle, Wash.

No tuition will be charged at any of these navigation schools, but the students must arrange for their own support during the six weeks they must study. An expert in navigation assigned by the Shipping Board's bureau of education will be the instructor in each. For six weeks the student will be put through a "forcing process" of instruction in the practical methods of determining a vessel's position at sea, laying a course, reading a chart, etc. If he passes the necessary examinations he will then be shipped on an ocean-going vessel for two months of special sea training. During this time he will be an extra junior officer and be paid $75 a month. Then he will go before a representative of the Steamship Inspection Service for examination for a license as an officer on an ocean-going vessel. If he passes, he will be licensed without delay and will probably be asked to proceed at once to New York to enter the trans-Atlantic service.

His obligation to serve, after finishing the training, will be moral only. However, at the prevailing rates of pay the inducements for a qualified officer in the trans-Atlantic service are large. Wages are highly attractive, mates receiving, with their war bonuses, from $225 to $350 a month, and the pay in the engine-room is on a similar scale.

Applications for admission to the school here will be received, beginning tomorrow, at the office of the inspector of hulls, Steamboat Inspection Service, at the harbor, and also at the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, where Mr. Thompson yesterday arranged for practical cooperation.

Tomorrow there will be organized here a local advisory committee of representative men to look after the civic interests of the school.

"The opportunities now offered American seamen qualified to serve as officers," said Mr. Thompson yesterday, "are expected to lead to permanent positions, as the entire programme of the Shipping Board looks to the permanency of the merchant marine now being built up. There are 1000 vessels to be built and 750 to be commandeered, while 88 German ships have been seized. These 1838 vessels must have about 14,400 officers and the Shipping Board estimates that probably 5000 are now available in the country."

On and On.

WHAT THE COURSE OF "THE TIMES" SHALL BE.

Letter of Gen. Otis to Mr. and Mrs. Chandler—Their Statement.

NEARLY three years ago Gen. Harrison Gray Otis addressed to his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Chandler, to whom his controlling interest in The Times was transferred, a remarkable letter or declaration. It was in the form of carefully-wrought instructions and suggestions as to the lines on which The Times should be conducted after his demise. While expressing confidence in the purposes of Mr. and Mrs. Chandler, it laid down in an affectionate, fatherly and confident way his parting injunctions to his successors in interest, control and management.

This document is a classic in the annals of journalism and will be read with world-wide interest. It is the ultimate wisdom of the venerable editor and manager, whose sagacity and able generalship made The Times a wonderful institution. To comment on this telling document would be superfluous. Mr. and Mrs. Chandler are now the controlling owners and managers of The Times. The General's letter to them is here reproduced and, following that, their statement as to the future course of this journal:

DECLARATORY.

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) Nov. 12, 1914.

To Harry Chandler and Marian Otis-Chandler, his wife:

Dear Harry and Dear Marian: After mature deliberation I write you as follows:

I. In placing in your joint and trusted hands the high trust and valuable property conveyed or to be conveyed by me, I explain at the outset that my matured purpose in thus acting will be to concentrate the future ownership and control, and also the destiny, of the most precious of all my material possessions, the Los Angeles Times, in the hands (before my death) of members of my own family, whom I specially trust in this connection and who have had long, practical experience with me in the building up, care, control and training of this stalwart child of our mutual efforts and affections, and of my own almost lifelong professional skill, labor and devotion. In doing this, I lay upon you only these fundamental injunctions as to its future course and conduct in your hands, and (as far as I may properly enjoin you personally) as to your own course as its future responsible conductors, viz.:

(1.) Using the legal and other legitimate powers and prerogatives that will be yours as the sole owners of more than two-thirds of the capital stock of the corporation, take and exercise at all proper times complete control and authority in all departments, including especially the editorial and business, as well as the news-gathering branches, which impart tone, temper, character and stability to a journal, and make it respected and influential. Make sure of your board of directors and of the loyalty, zeal, competency and faithfulness of your lieutenants and the entire working force at all times.

(2.) Preserve and protect with steadfastness and determination the record, traditions and achievements of The Times, and continue its fixed and leading policies and methods; uphold its aims, purposes and aspirations in all large and essential particulars, and throughout the varying mutations of present-day journalism, perpetuate unimpaired its independent and unfettered course.

(3.) Constantly, consistently and loyally uphold and defend the Constitution and the Flag, the Congress and the courts, the executive power within its prescribed and lawful limitations, and cherish the Army and the Navy, those bulwarks and strong arms of the government.

(4.) Stand undeviatingly for Liberty under Law, for industrial and all other forms of republican freedom, and for sound government as the surest safeguard of the nation, the State, the city and the home. Bravely face in their defense, whenever the need comes, the frenzied mob and the proscriptive madness of the hour.

(5.) Stand for honor, honesty and order in the State, the nation and the home, and for that private and public morality which are essential to the perpetuity of sound, human government. While courageously supporting these virtuous principles, at the same time oppose with all your might their opposites and whatever tends to the demoralization of human society or jeopardizes the safety of the land or the rights and liberties of its citizens. Antagonize unceasingly all allied private or semi-private industrial combines which would unlawfully wrest from the free-born American citizen his guaranteed constitutional right to industrial, personal or political freedom and make him the slave of an arrogant and monopolistic trades despotism. While striking hard and deserved blows against these and other intolerable evils, keep in mind that better state when there shall be "peace upon earth and good will among men." Scourge as with a whip of scorpions dishonesty, pretense, hypocrisy, scoundrelism, treason to Truth and the country and every form of evil that threatens with destruction the home, the community or the country, and at the same time encouraging every sound tendency and condition in human society that makes for its preservation, stability and endurance on high and right lines.

(6.) Stand for sound, rational and tested business methods and policies in the management of The Times newspaper, as well as in the conduct of commercial and public business, in order that this journal and all honest people may "live long and prosper," grow in grace and be happy. Hold up the hands and cheer the hearts of the lowly and deserving, no matter how humble they may be; quail not before the aggressions of unjust power, and live and die game and true. Fear God and do right.

(7.) Encourage all free, independent and honest labor, no matter how humble, so it be honestly conducted; at the same time not hesitating to support and defend powerful financial, commercial and industrial alliances, provided that they, too, operate honestly and legitimately, when organized to accomplish mighty and worthy tasks too formidable to be undertaken by single individuals; for true it is that it is not the size of the operation, but the integrity with which it is conducted, that determines its legitimacy. Always bear in mind the demonstrated truth that it is, after all, the sane, brave, level-headed, self-restrained, right-hearted, honest men and women of the land upon whom rests, and will always rest, the responsibility for holding the family, society, business, government and the country together.

(8.) Continue the upstanding and long-pursued policy of this journal in working, day in and day out, for the upbuilding on sound lines of the favored and favorite city and section wherein The Times and its makers have their homes; and continue also to aid and abet the unhalting advance of all California, the entire Pacific Coast and the "ultimate West."

(9.) Ever place patriotism, duty and honor, public and private morality and the true interests of the State and country before mere commercialism or material success in the conduct of The Times. Thus may this journal of ours be caused to grow in strength, usefulness and power, able to plough through the turbulent sea of journalism like a full-rigged man-of-war.

(10.) Concerning the all-important subject of the matter and scope of the general contents of the paper after it shall have come under your ownership, control and management, it is, of course, neither practicable nor proper for me to speak here, except in a very general way. You know, and will always bear in mind, the paramount fact that this journal is, and must continue to be, first of all a newspaper—a vehicle for the dissemination of current news reports and information; a faithful recorder of contemporaneous history and affairs, of new knowledge and of the tremendous daily happenings of the mighty Present around all the globe, no matter of what nature or complexion the occurrences may be, provided they possess human interest. Moreover, The Times, being a proper medium for thinkers, they will be given, as always in the past, impartial hearings in its broad columns whenever they are able to enlighten the world, or contribute to those transcendent problems of human life, human living and human government which, if they are to be wisely solved, will always require the best thought and effort of the best men and women upon earth. In the columns of The Times will be found, I doubt not, in the future as in the past, graphic accounts of the doings of the far-flung human race; absorbing narratives of adventure and achievement; of research and investigation; of travel and discovery; of progress in the arts, sciences and invention; of toil and triumph; of hardship, endurance and ultimate success; of everything, indeed, that is new to men and of living interest. The press is a colossal surveyor of the world-wide news field, scanning the entire civilized globe and faithfully purveying to an ever-waiting public the luminous record of daily and mighty happenings among men and nations. I am convinced that you will continue to make The Times do its full share in the strenuous work of the press in general, making it what it has long aimed to be—but even more so—a powerful, far-reaching daily news-field-glass, exposing to the public view the world's foremost events and occurrences, and proclaiming them widely to the sons of men at Sol's diurnal revolution; to make this newspaper, in brief,

"A map of the busy world,
Its fluctuations and its vast concerns."

So may we confidently hope for The Times an honorable, a foremost and a permanent place in the large field of American journalism, and that always those men and women who serve it faithfully may feel high and genuine pride in their personal alliances with "Ours."

Accurate news-gathering, correct reporting, skillful editing, graphic illustrating and good printing all go to make up a finished modern newspaper, which should, of course, be written in pure, forceful, unstilted and luminous English.

II. Finally: Bearing in mind that Truth is the greatest thing in all the world, and Duty the first concern of good men and women, I enjoin the foregoing precepts, principles and practices upon you in the future conduct of the Los Angeles Times, because of my affections for you and for it. I enjoin you both to guard well your precious health, as well as the sacred trust now by me committed to your trusted and trustful hands and hearts.

With good aims and generous purposes toward all concerned in this pregnant transaction, with unfeigned regards and my living blessing, to be followed, let us hope, by a blissful reunion in the mysterious Beyond, coupled with undying associations and imperishable recollections of our mutual campaigns upon earth,

I subscribe myself your steadfast and affectionate father,

[Signed]

HARRISON GRAY OTIS.
"The Bivouac," Westlake.

STATEMENT BY MR. AND MRS. CHANDLER.

In assuming the sacred trust and grave responsibilities conveyed to us, the faithful carrying out of which is dearer than life itself, it is fitting for the undersigned to say:

(1.) That in so far as human power and limitations will permit, The Times will be conducted in harmony with the indomitable spirit, high ideals and well-considered injunctions of its great architect and builder, Harrison Gray Otis. The Times will continue to be THE TIMES—The Times of Gen. Otis, The Times that he made.

(2.) That every man and woman concerned in the issuing of The Times from day to day is so thoroughly imbued with the convictions, aims and policies for which it has so long stood, and so heartily in sympathy with the causes for which it has so long battled, that it would be impossible for them to disregard the last instructions of the great chief or to produce a newspaper out of tune with the principles he has laid down.

(3.) That not only duty and affection and devotion, but inherent conviction, will co-operate in the hearts and hands of the makers of The Times in carrying on the work so efficiently directed by Gen. Otis for more than a third of a century, and this shall and must be the sound, brave newspaper that he would have it be. Men may die, but influences do not; and the spirit of its great achieving editor shall still dominate The Times.

(4.) There could be no loyalty finer than that of the co-owners and fellow-workers who have helped Gen. Otis raise up this great newspaper and to whom it owes so much; and shoulder to shoulder they will keep up the warfare for truth, for freedom, for the protection of honest labor, for the decent treatment of honestly-acquired wealth, for the encouragement of noble enterprise and for the development of the Southland and the State.

(5.) It was often said by Gen. Otis, and may be now reiterated, that The Times could not have won its victories and registered its achievements for truth and right, but for the loyal and steadfast support of the great body of men and women, made up of Southern California's best citizenship, who have been its friends and patrons in every stress and circumstance. In its third of a century and more of toil and struggle and success, The Times has been heartened and nourished by the wonderful faith and support of the truest, most devoted and most sympathetic clientele that it was ever the good fortune of any newspaper to be blessed with. It shall be the highest endeavor of The Times to merit and secure a continuance of this friendship and cooperation.

(6.) The years have vindicated the rightfulness of Gen. Otis's stand in the long and arduous campaigns against tyranny and injustice and for liberty and fairness which he waged.

With an inspiration and a loyal force like ours, there can be no faltering, no wavering, no shadow of turning. The Los Angeles Times will go on, and on, and on, never surrendering one inch of its ground, never yielding one hair's breadth of the vantage it has gained for liberty and right.

[Signed]

HARRY CHANDLER,
MARIAN OTIS-CHANDLER.

WHITTIER PUT ON ROAD'S MAP.

Salt Lake Route Opens Second Ticket Office when Depot is Finished.

Whittier is now on the Salt Lake map.

The Salt Lake Route has had an uptown ticket office with a special agent there for the past two years, but now that the new depot is finished on the Whittier branch, the road has established another office at the depot.

A. J. Seeber has arrived from Black Rock, Utah, to become depot agent for the Salt Lake. Some time must elapse before the Salt Lake will have regular passenger service to Whittier, but the freight business already is of considerable consequence, hence the establishment of the office at the depot in addition to the uptown office, which will be continued under the management of the present agent, "Salt Lake" Jones.

SONG ON FLAG THEME.

The honor accorded the American flag in every land and clime is the theme of a patriotic song, with words by Henry M. Hopewell and music by Mrs. Abbie Norton Jamison, recently published in this city. Simplicity of expression marks the music; the tempo is that of the march, with good impulse.

The letter was written while he was seated on the floor of a third-class railway carriage, speeding across from the Atlantic seaboard to a French Mediterranean port, en route with his section to join a French battalion in the Balkans.

"To give an idea of our experiences so far," he said, "I'll go back to our trip across the Atlantic. The big event of the trip was our submarine 'treat' when we saw a battle with a U-boat, and really enjoyed it, especialy after our gunners convinced the enemy that it was dangerous work sticking around.

"It was much like a big game, or a ninth-inning, two-down-two-out pinch hit, the way the crowd cheered after each shot at the periscope, sticking out of the water a half-mile away. I watched the crowd carefully and saw little excitement that could be called frenzy. One young chap from some eastern college came on board with a valise in which he had carefully stowed his silk nightie, and I saw a couple of soldiers comforting two women who were weeping, but otherwise everything was just plain sport."

He pays a tribute to French spirit, with some side observations on Gallic vices, making "these people hard to understand.'

"The French," he writes, "frankly admit they were caught unawares by the Germans, and acknowledged that they have been outfought so far, and that they have been discouraged. However, now that America has entered the war, they have the greatest of hopes, for they have the the Americans to do everything. This is a characteristic of the French that surprised me, but it shows how desperate they were when America plunged. However, it is assumed that the French are no worse off than the Germans, and I believe these people would send the women to the trenches rather than stand for German conquest."

Again, however, qualifying his remarks with the statement he has been in the country but a fortnight, he observes: "It goes without saying that the French are holding up wonderfully well, though I think Americans could do even better, for in the United States we do not have such vice problems to contend with."

SANTA MONICA RIDDLED BY POLITICAL BOMBING.

Annexation Campaign Outdoes Itself in Bitterness as End Nears.

THE most important, most hard-fought and bitterest annexation campaign in the history of Los Angeles county will end on the 22nd inst., when the voters of Santa Monica will decide by ballot whether they wish to consolidate their city with Los Angeles. As the end of the fight approaches the acrimony which has characterized it from the start has steadily increased until Los Angeles city officials have themselves been drawn into the storm of political shot and shell and the vicious gas attacks now figuratively decimating the bay district.

The history of the movement for consolidation is interesting and the peculiar tactics and outright misrepresentations that have been employed by some of the persons opposing this consolidation have been of such offensive character—especially the attacks upon the Los Angeles Aqueduct—that they have attracted the attention and castigation of municipal officials in positions such that they speak with authority.

Registered voters of Santa Monica to the number of 2156 signed a petition to the City Trustees, asking that an annexation election be called. The technical point was raised that many of the signers had simply placed ditto marks on the petition in describing their residences, instead of writing the full words "Santa Monica," and the petition was thrown out. Thereupon a new petition was started and within three weeks the names of 2200 registered voters, with residences fully set forth, were secured. Then followed the call for an election on the question at issue, and the 22nd inst. was named as the election date.

Since that time the attacks upon the Los Angeles Aqueduct and other so-called arguments against the proposed consolidation have been put forth by the objectors to the plan.

The arguments, pro and con, in regard to annexation, or consolidation, cover the subjects of taxation, water, light, gas, police and fire protection, insurance, sewage and the petty political strifes of the seaside city.

QUESTION OF TAXATION.

As to taxation: The Santa Monica city and Los Angeles county tax rate for last year was $3.39 per $100 of assessed valuation. Los Angeles city and county rate for the same period was $2.92 on each $100 of assessed valuation, or a difference of 47 cents on the $100 in favor of Los Angeles.

In this connection it is noted that Santa Monica has the highest tax rate of all but three of the thirty-five cities of Los Angeles county, these three exceptions being Azusa, Manhattan and Whittier. Santa Monica has an excessive assessed valuation, which has been increased since 1912 more than 50 per cent. This has increased the taxes of Santa Monica largely. If that territory becomes a part of the city of Los Angeles the valuations will be equalized on the basis prevailing in this city.

NOT ENOUGH WATER.

As to water: It is an established fact that when there are two or three dry years in succession Santa Monica has insufficient water. But were there no need to provide for an adequate water supply, such as is available through the Los Angeles aqueduct, the difference in the water rates now paid by residents of Santa Monica and those that would prevail were the aqueduct service in use, is an item of itself sufficient to receive the gravest consideration. Santa Monica's water rate is 15 cents per 100 cubic feet, with a minimum charge of $1 a month. The Los Angeles water rate is 7 cents per 100 cubic feet, with 50 cents as the minimum charge.

As to light: Santa Monica's light rate is 7 cents per kilowatt hour, with a minimum charge of 75 cents. Los Angeles is now furnishing electrical energy at 5 cents per kilowatt hour, with a 50-cent minimum.

As to gas: The gas rate in Santa Monica is $1 per 1000 cubic feet, with a minimum charge of 50 cents, while Los Angeles gas consumers pay only 68 cents per 1000 cubic feet, with no minimum charge.

Regarding police and fire protection, investigation will clearly show that Los Angeles has provided all her annexed territory with better police and fire protection than they had before annexation.

The insurance situation is also of interest. Before annexation Hollywood and Santa Monica had the same insurance rate—a base rate of 50 cents, with 20 cents for each twenty feet of exposure. By annexation Hollywood had its rate reduced to 28 cents as the base, with 5 cents for each twenty-foot exposure, thus saving by annexation 43 per cent. of the insurance cost.

Through annexation Santa Monica can provide for the connection of its sewage system with the Los Angeles outfall sewer at Hyperion.

WON'T BE ISOLATED.

As to public convenience, much has been made of the argument that residents of Santa Monica would have to come to the City Hall at Los Angeles whenever they should want to transact business with the city should a consolidation be effected. It is an established rule adopted by Los Angeles that distant territory shall have sufficient offices and deputies to transact required municipal business, so that the people of such districts are not inconvenienced. This policy is shown in the harbor, Wilmington, Hollywood and the San Fernando Valley, and it has met with the approval of the citizens of those districts.

Through annexation, or consolidation, the control of the public morals of the beach city would be the same as that of the morals of Los Angeles. Petty, small-city troubles on this score, from which Santa Monica has not been free, would be eliminated. Dancing in drinking cafes is not permitted in Los Angeles, nor are its barrooms permitted to keep open on Sundays. Infringements of the liquor laws in Santa Monica would be treated exactly as are infringements of the liquor laws in the city proper, and the same would apply to other violations of ordinances designed to prevent vice and crimes.

With Santa Monica a part of Los Angeles, its beautiful beach would become, in effect, the municipal beach for a city of 600,000 population, and by annexation Santa Monica would thus materially benefit.

PROPONENTS ACTIVE.

Santa Monica citizens favoring annexation to Los Angeles are carrying forward a vigorous campaign. At a meeting under their auspices held in the Woman's Club House in that city Thursday night, a large assemblage manifested deep interest.

P. J. Dudley, president of the Ocean Park Bank, presided. He declared Santa Monica has suffered from sectional jealousies and factional fights; that the progress of the place for the past twelve years has not been satisfactory, and that a new start all around should be made. He declared his conviction that annexation to Los Angeles would decidedly help Santa Monica to outgrow the evils which have beset her.

W. J. Stadleman, manager of the North Beach bath-house, brought out the fact that taxes in Santa Monica are higher than in Los Angeles, despite the bond issues of Los Angeles, about which the anti-annexationists talk so much. He declared it would be a mistake for Santa Monica citizens to deny themselves the benefits of cheap aqueduct power and water, in view of the fact that, with all its bond issue, Los Angeles has a lower tax rate than Santa Monica.

TALKS OF AQUEDUCT.

John W. Kemp, member of the Public Service Commission of Los Angeles, spoke of the aqueduct and power enterprises, showing that the aqueduct water is wholesome, as set forth in the testimony of scientists, by the official findings of the Superior Court, and, above all, by the fact that for more than three years aqueduct water has been used exclusively in the western section of the ctiy, and the public health records how a low rate of water-born diseases—a record unequaled by any large city in the country.

Mr. Kemp also stated that the electric power plant of the city is already more than self-sustaining, and that this year no taxes will have to be levied for interest and sinking fund for power bonds, as the net profits from the plant will more than take care of these expenses.

George H. Dunlop, member of the City and County Consolidation Commission, explained the reasons why Los Angeles requires annexation of territory as a condition precedent to such territory receiving aqueduct water.

Mr. Dunlop stated that the assertion of certain anti-annexationists that Santa Monica could become a part of Los Angeles without assuming its share of the harbor, power and aqueduct bonds is true in law, but untrue in fact, as Los Angeles would refuse to approve such annexation. Since 1913 Los Angeles has had a consistent annexation policy, one feature of which is that annexed territory must bear its share of the bond issues.

BURDEN VANISHING.

He showed, however, that the power bonds are already being paid off out of earnings, and that the harbor and aqueduct bonds are also on their way toward being self-supporting. He declared the effect of annexation upon Hollywood was highly beneficial and that since it became a part of Los Angeles is has more than trebled its population, while all utility rates have been reduced. He declared the combined annual savings from these sources is sufficient to meet the entire city tax on the average home; a satisfactory sewer system has been made possible; the streets are in good condition; the local fire department has grown from two men to more than twenty men; a like condition prevails in the police force, and the public library has been much enlarged.

Mr. Dunlop called attention to the fact that the larger part of the territory surrounding Santa Monica—Westgate on the north and Sawtelle and Palms on the east, have already annexed to Los Angeles and that by joining with its own back country, unifying their common interests in a common government, Santa Monica could greatly advance its prosperity.

JUDGE WORKS'S DECISION.

In the cases of Hart and Frost against the city of Los Angeles, heard in Department Four of the Superior Court before Judge Works, a written decision was rendered. The text of this decision is as follows:

This litigation was instituted for the purpose of enjoining the further delivery of a water supply from Owens Valley to the people of Los Angeles. It proceeds mainly upon the claim that the water is polluted and infected, is likely to continue so, and therefore is unfit for human consumption. This claim has been urged strenuously throughout the trial, and the defense waged against it has been equally vigorous. Counsel on both sides have been vigilant, aggressive and untiring throughout the controversy. One hundred and fifty photographs and maps have been introduced in evidence, and about 300 samples of water, taken at various points from the headwaters of Owens River to kitchen taps in Los Angeles, have been analyzed for the information of the court. Men and women of a high degree of learning in hydraulics, in bacteriology and in analytical chemistry have testified, the respective counsel have been allowed the widest possible range in the introduction of the evidence, and the subject has been exhausted. The hearing has consumed forty actual trial days.

Owens River and its tributary creeks flow through a country given to cattle raising and other rural pursuits, and it is not denied by the defendants that these streams are contaminated to the extent that is necessarily characteristic of all waters flowing through such a country, and having a similar population. In this connection it is to be noted, however, that the water shed of the Owens River is peopled by an average of but about one and one-half persons to the square mile, while many of the cities of the world take their water supply from surface streams the drainage area of which is populated to the extent of several hundred persons to the same area.

The scientific principles governing the selection of a water supply intended to furnish a domestic supply, require a treatment of the water in order to rid it of the contamination which is inevitably incident to such a source of supply. This treatment consists of the use of chemicals, the installation of filtration plans, or in the storage of the water in reservoirs for a period of time requisite to its purification.

If it be granted that waters of Owens Valley are contaminated like all surface waters, the density of population of its drainage area being the true index of contamination, and if it be granted that, for that reason, those waters would not be proper for domestic use at the intake of the Los Angeles aqueduct, in the valley, does it follow that the water has not been purified when it reaches the point of delivery in Los Angeles, 286 miles from the intake? In other words, is the water, during its transmission from the intake to the city, subjected to either of the methods of treatment above mentioned as requisite to the purification of a surface water supply?

Ninety miles from the aqueduct intake is located Haiwee Reservoir. From the outlet of that reservoir to Los Angeles is 190 miles. During its progress over that distance, the water supply is halted, even if briefly, in Fairmont, Dry Canyon and Franklin reservoirs, three other basins having some value for storage purposes.

A large portion of the testimony during the trial has been directed to the question of the efficiency of the entire system mentioned, and especially of Haiwee reservoir, as a purifying agency, and many experiments have been conducted in the waters of the reservoir in order to determine the problem. It is not necessary now to state the nature of these experiments, nor to analyze the theories and arguments advanced by the various expert witnesses who have testified concerning them. It is sufficient to say that the great weight of the evidence demonstrates that Haiwee reservoir is remarkably efficient as a great purifying unit in the aqueduct system. This immense basin is over seven miles in length, with that distance between its inlet and outlet, and impounds, for a long period of time, certainly not less than thirty days, all waters which enter it. The reservoir is peculiarly adapted to the use for which it was principally designed. One of the leading expert witnesses in the case characterizes it as unique among the storage reservoirs of the world. Being in a region in which there is a rainfall of not to exceed five inches per annum, a region of porous, sandy soil, and entirely uninhabited, it is the recipient of no runoff from its own watershed, and it is therefore free from the contamination of such a runoff. The only influent of the reservoir is the Los Angeles Aqueduct, containing waters brought from the Owens River. The intake gates on the river may be closed at will, and there are frequent waste gates along the course of the aqueduct, from the river to the reservoir, through which the waters of the great ditch may be entirely cast away. These instrumentalities conduce to a perfect control of the Haiwee influent, and the waters may be diverted and wasted in periods of flood or at any other time of possible undue contamination from whatever cause.

This peculiarly advantageous location of Haiwee is mentioned in passing only, as the period of storage which is allowed by its size and shape is alone sufficient to guarantee to the people of Los Angeles a positive immunity from dangers residing in the waters before they leave Owens Valley, conceding that such dangers are there present, and without regard to the use of the waste gates mentioned, which furnish but an added factor of safety to a system safe enough without them.

The Los Angeles Aqueduct is so planned as to secure to the residents of Los Angeles, a palatable, wholesome and entirely sanitary water supply, and Haiwee reservoir is the prime element of safety.

The conclusions reached in this opinion do not come from a mere preponderance of the evidence, but from an overwhelming weight of proof which leaves possible no other termination of the litigation. On the whole, the record in this trial furnishes a splendid vindication of the judgment of the people of the city in acquiring and developing a water supply from the Owens River region.

The application of the plaintiffs for an injunction is denied, and the defendants will have judgment for their costs.

TEXAS SUFFRAGISTS TO GARNER POINTERS HERE.

MRS. TEX ERWIN ARMSTRONG of Dallas, Tex., national executive committeeman from Texas of the Equal Suffrage Association, is in Los Angeles for the summer. While here she hopes to learn from the Los Angeles women just how they secured the equal franchise for California.

For three years Mrs. Armstrong was president of the Dallas Equal Suffrage Association, being one of the first of the modern or active suffrage workers in the Lone Star State. It is only since equal rights was obtained in California that Texas women began to agitate the same movement. Mrs. Armstrong says Texas will have equal suffrage within two years, and that once the question is submitted before the voters there will be no trouble in carrying it. The majority of the voters in Texas are said to be in favor of votes for women, but it has been impossible heretofore to submit the question to the people.

While in Los Angeles, Mrs. Armstrong, who is accompanied by her two young children, Margaret and Tom, is living in apartments at No. 621 South Union avenue. Before returning to Texas she and the children will visit in San Diego and San Francisco, stopping en route home in Salt Lake.

AGE RECORD IN WOMEN'S SUNDAY-SCHOOL CLASS.

IN THE First Methodist Church at Pomona there is a Sunday-school class of women having what is believed to be the record age average in Sunday-school circles. The teacher is Mrs. C. A. Lorbeer, who is 83 years of age. There are thirteen women in the class. All of them except two are widows, and one of the two exceptions has been a widow: The other is unmarried. All of them except two are grandmothers. Because so many of them are widows, possibly of marriageable age, they decline to give their individual ages, but they admit the average age of the class membership runs beyond the three-score-years-and-ten mark.

This remarkable class has been held together many years. Changes in the membership have been necessitated from time to time by moves, but ten members still attend church and Sunday-school regularly. Mrs. Lorbeer has taught class No. 3 in the First Methodist Church since 1893. During that time the congregation has had ten pastors.

Mrs. Lorbeer, who was born at Humboldt, Iowa, began teaching a Sunday-school class when she was sweet 16. She enjoys the distinction of having taught her class in Pomona almost every Sunday for twenty-four years.

The members of this remarkable Sunday-school class are Mrs. Mary Stoddard, Mrs. A. B. Norcross, Miss Jennie Wright, Mrs. L. L. Dittus, Mrs. Mary Eads, Mrs. Corrington, Mrs. S. C. Wilcox, Mrs. C. A. Lorbeer, Mrs. M. A. Cypherd, Mrs. Emma Heath, Mrs. J. M. Mitchell, Mrs. J. E. McComas and Mrs. M. J. Cline. Mrs. Dittus resides in Los Angeles, Mrs. Eads lives in San Bernardino and Mrs. Cline is at Huntington Beach. Mrs. Norcross is married and Miss Jennie Wright is the only member of the class who has never married. She is also the youngest member by a good many years.

Mrs. Lorbeer is a remarkable woman for her years. She reads three daily papers regularly and keeps posted on international affairs up to the last minute. She resides alone at Center and Rebecca streets, Pomona, but has raised a family of six children. The children are Mrs. D. S. Parker of Pomona, Harry and Melvin Parker and Mrs. Fannie Pellig of Los Angeles, Mrs. Carrie Tremain of Minneapolis and A. G. Lorbeer of Fairmont, in Antelope Valley.

ANOTHER VIEW.
If the crowds that gather about the newspaper bulletin boards every morning to read the war news would enlist, there would be no occasion for a draft.

THE FIRST SPUD.
A neighbor who put in a garden and planted a row of potatoes, has eaten the first spud of the crop. He says that he feels as if he was winning the war.

"WE POINT WITH PRIDE."
Within the last six months the people of Los Angeles county have filed 78,143 automobile license registrations, paying into the State treasury $811,925.35 as against San Francisco county's 25,917 registrations, totaling receipts of $286,561.56. "Merrily we roll along, roll along, roll along."—let everybody sing, please.

THE KEY TO SUCCESS.
Representatives of five milk producers' organizations of California combined, at a meeting in San Francisco, and filed articles of incorporation for the Associated Dairymen of California. The sooner the potato growers of Southern California come to see the need for organization the better it will be for them and for the thousands of consumers that it is their privilege and business to supply with food.

UNCLE SAM WINS.
A carpenter of Huntington Lake tossed pennies with his wife to decide whether or not he should join the army. She chose tails, but heads won and her husband joined the field artillery. Loving his wife and yet burning with patriotism, hesitating between love and honor, the only thing left for this man was to take a chance and his better half proved a good sport and a good loser. Men of that stamp are as courageous as they are honorable and this man will doubtless make as good a soldier as he is a husband

WATCH AND SEE.
It will be interesting to see if the South will be able to escape a tax on its cotton, when it becomes necessary to comb the business of the country for another opportunity to tax its products, under the budget proposed by Secretary McAdoo. When Congress was preparing the recent tax bill, it was proposed to compel cotton to pay $1.50 a bale. Immediately a roar went up, the Southern Democrats voted solid against the proposition, and aided by a few dough-faces from the North the item was defeated in the committee.

A CHANCE TO ACT.
Short work should be made of the use of the patent on salvarsan to extort incredible prices from those afflicted with disease. Great Britain and Canada have already abrogated the Ehrlich patents and are making the stuff. The medical profession strongly favors the same course by the United States. Let the government act. A German firm ought not to be permitted to pile up millions out of the sick and suffering in the United States, and in its greed fix prices that are certain to deprive those needing the remedy of the use of it on account of the unheard-of price.

THE WAR AND PROSPERITY.
With less friction than characterizes a Presidential election campaign, the government is carrying through a programme of universal compulsory military service, and drafting the largest army ever sent overseas for national service.

The money borrowed in this enormous volume, in turn disbursed for the equipping, housing, feeding and transportation of the immense army and those of our Allies, is beginning to flow through all of the channels of trade and commerce and its accelerating effect upon the wheels of productive industry is already being felt.

"THE WILL TO BELIEVE."
A Southern California minister considers the great war, the recent earthquakes and the hoarding of wealth by a few rich men as indications that the world will soon come to an end and that peace will reign forevermore, though in some far off Heaven. The preacher may or may not be right in his predictions but it would seem that the world could not much longer continue the conflict that for three long years has been gnawing at the very heart of humanity, [illegible] at the vitals of civilization and weakening the faith of the strongest and best. Perhaps it would be more reasonable to predict the end of the world-tragedy through the suppression of tyranny and to believe that the end of Prussian arrogance and oppression will mark the beginning of the reign of peace on earth.

LOOK OUT FOR SUB-LAXATION.
If you would avoid dystocia of the subglenoid fossa (pain in the armpit,) be careful how you pick a baby up from the floor or a glass of liquid damnation up from the table, and be especially wary in reaching suddenly for money, lest by sudden impulsive gesture you produce a "sub-laxation of the acromion process" with more "dystocia" and a great possibility of not getting the money at all.

Then there is the painful "pie arm," the result of the boarding-house reach for pie, butter or another ear of green corn. Aside from operations and medicinal treatments there are three ways of avoiding dystocia of the subglenoid fossa. One is to always keep your hands in your pockets; another is amputation of both arms at the shoulders, and the third is to be born without arms.

FLANDERS—THE KAISER—JOSEPHUS.

I.

FROM Caesar to Kaiser, Belgium has been a battle ground; and disaster, though long delayed, has ultimately fallen like a curse on every monarch that hurled a conquering army on to that Armageddon of Europe. Three times in her early history England tried to crush the sturdy burghers of Flanders, and was beaten back; for nearly three centuries, French kings tenaciously clung to a dream of conquest and that soil became the burial ground for her knightly dead. Charles V, anticipating Wilhelm by more than 300 years, believed himself chosen of God to plant inquisitions—the medieval form of kultur—throughout the world; and for his royal master, the Duke of Alva triumphantly overran The Netherlands (comprising the modern states of Holland and Belgium) and exhausted every cruelty to hold them vassals. But free men are not conquerable—and the Spanish armies, amazed then—as are the Germans now—that the thrice vanquished burghers should rise again and again and again and yet again, drew off in helpless rage and nursed their wounds beyond the Pyrenees. All the world knows of Waterloo—a Belgian battlefield.

Now once again the ancient war ground of Flanders shakes beneath a mighty assault; and the sons of the old burghers, and the sons of the French and English whose fathers were painfully taught that Belgium was and should be free, no matter what the price in blood and bones—all of them, backed and reinforced by the armies of America, now have gathered for a heroic drive that will harass the German lines from Ostend to the Swiss border.

Obviously, we know no more of the impending assault than war maps show and the dispatches tell. But look at the map. The Germans hold some thirty miles of Belgian coast to Ostend; from there the trenches cut through Belgium into France, past Rheims, and then—bending back to exclude valorous Verdun, where it is written above tens of thousands of graves: "They shall not pass!"—bellies out again and sweeps on to Mulhausen. Roughly speaking, the German line is a crescent with the upper tip at Ostend. Turn that tip, or extreme flank, and the German communications to their trenches are threatened for 400 miles and more.

II.

AMERICA having entered the war, enormous numbers of troops have been made available for a concentrated smash on the forty-mile front that is absolutely the key to the German occupation of Belgium and most of France. But until America drew her sword and presented it point forward to Germany, the Allies of the western front needed every man and gun simply to meet and hold the pressure of the German war frontiers menacing Calais and Paris. It is significant that simultaneously with the arrival in Europe of the first American armies, quiescent Flanders booms again with the heaviest artillery firing of the war; and heavy artillery firing always presages the tidal rush of infantry tipped with steel. And if that flank is turned, Germany must fall back—how far, depends chiefly on the vigor with which the Allies press their advantage. But fall clear of Belgium she must, or risk a Teutonic Sedan at Brussels or at Rheims.

Hope we have and great expectations; but America must remember that there is the other side to this assault. German strategists know all that we have said and infinitely more. They have known the dangers at Ostend ever since their armies were shattered at the gates of Paris and fell back beyond the Marne. All that human ingenuity can do they have done to meet the battle crisis at this heel of Achilles in their line; and as their Prussian hosts have broken on Verdun like waves at Gibraltar's base, so may America and her Allies fail—at first. But if they fail, then must Americans remember what the burghers taught the Duke of Alva, what the Swiss mountaineers taught the House of Hapsburg, what our Colonial fathers taught the House of Hanover: the only battles that count with free men are victories: and until they come, fight on, fight on, fight on and on.

III.

IT WOULD seem that those honorable gentlemen more experienced in battles where victories are won by the mouth and registered at the polls than in the grim work of death-dealing, cannot escape their campaign training which, in our President's eyes at least, has fitted them for the Secretaryship of the Navy and the Secretaryship of War. Indeed, it appears that they feel the country must be reassured from time to time by the eloquence and their mellifluous voices; and a few days ago they summoned the Washington correspondents to their sanctums and expressed regret that their sensitive secretarial ears had detected an alarming note of pessimism, of dejection, of hopelessness, throughout the nation. Magnificent ears Mr. Daniels and Mr. Baker must have, if above the acclaim of the Liberty Loan, above the tramp of 10,000,000 men marching to the registrars, above the roar of furnaces and clangor of mills, above all the rattle and whir of this mighty nation bending every effort to the needs of war, they can detect the alarming overtone of despair. Anyway, they said they heard it, and that they felt themselves called upon to reassure the country. As they have no doubt done many a time and oft in those campaigns which are supposed to have fitted them for the martial and maritime conflicts, they gathered the correspondents at their feet and solemnly asked them to tell the country that victory was certain. Never yet has a politician failed on the eve of election to declare that very thing. But more than a mere victory, this is to be a great and decisive victory, delivered with one smashing blow that will crumble Germany and leave her face downward in the dust.

With the wise air becoming to gentlemen who are intimate with the Fates and privy to the future, Mr. Baker nodded to Mr. Daniels, and Mr. Daniels to Mr. Baker, each affirming to the other that it was true. But they promptly closed the sibylline book of victory. They could say nothing more. The Germans were not expecting this great battle, and to speak of it further might lay the honorable secretaries open to treason for conveying valuable information to the enemy. But would the correspondents please reassure the country and put a quietus on the overtone that troubled the hypersensitive ears?

Mr. Daniels has been at this sort of thing before. As though the country did not have enough to celebrate on July 4th, he took the bald statement of an admiral that two submarines had been beaten off, and one was thought to have been sunk, and magnified it into a victory scarcely less lustrous than the Battle of Santiago, which a favoring fortune did give our country most appropriately on the eve of an anniversary of Independence.

Our troops have not yet, so far as the public knows, been under fire; yet the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of War brag of a victory—not a mere victory—but a decisive, overwhelming, crushing victory as though it were accomplished. If so sure of that victory, why should they care how pessimistic the country may be?

It is mockery—as though America's hope must be fattened with false and oracular news. Do these men think the fiber of America is less to be trusted in dark days than that of the French or English? From the tall buildings of Paris the dust of the invading army could be seen. Night came; the invaders were thrown back, and the next morning an official communication informed Paris merely that during the night there had been some fighting and the enemy had changed direction. When the naval battle of Jutland was fought, Germany—employing the theory of Mr. Daniels—claimed an overwhelming victory, and clamorously averred that Britannia's power on the sea was broken. The British Admiralty was silent for days. Not a word could anybody get out of it. Then it published the admiral's blunt reports—and nothing more. The German victory dwindled somewhat—considerably, in fact—and for a fleet that had wrenched the trident from Britannia, it has seemed ever since to be singularly attached to the sheltered and fortified base of Helgoland, and very reluctant to go out and finish up the few odd hulls that remain of Britain's navy.

IV.

OH, YES, if words won victories, Germany would long ago have ruled the world—excepting America, for so long as our defense was in the mouths of Mr. Baker and Mr. Daniels no guttural noun nor bloodthirsty adjective could set its wretched foot upon our shore. Every country has its noise-makers and pretenders. It looks at this distance as if Germany has several specimens of Josephus in her seats of authority.

Has a Kick Coming.

NATIONAL NECESSITY.
The usual rules by which standards of government are measured in times of peace fail utterly when applied to the necessities of a nation in the tumult of war. Just as an athlete, to win a hundred yard dash, must strain nerves and muscles that in pre-training days were unused to such exertions, so a country in war must put to severe discipline the powers it allowed to run comparatively free and unrestricted under less severe tests.

A certain amount of state socialism, in the form of government control of utilities and industries; an acquiescence in state interference with privileges of its citizens, recognized as their individual rights; a closer espionage of cables and sources of public information; tighter trade regulations and the issue of government licenses; the substitution of force for persuasion, where persuasion alone proves insufficient; these are part of the price all sorts and conditions of people are called upon to pay when the national defense demands the mustering of its manhood and the conservation of its supplies.

Such drastic changes, however, do not demonstrate the justification of state socialism as a cardinal principle in government; they only emphasize how abnormal and abhorrent are the conditions imposed by war.

The burden cannot be carried entirely on the military shoulder; the civilian left arm must do its share. America so far has not known the war severity that even before the fighting started had been imposed upon Europe. For war has been the weapon of tyrants in all ages and the tyrant's sword can only be broken by one of better temper and finer metal. When the tyrant has been beaten at last at his own pet game, all such weapons, we trust, will be laid aside forever.

That end has been taken over by the head power of democracy. As a whole the American nation has rallied cheerfully and uncomplainingly to the imposition of abnormal conditions forced upon civilians and soldiers alike by the Prussian war campaign against democratic civilization. Three years ago nothing was more abhorrent to the American idea of personal freedom than this same conscription law, that for years has been building up in the German empire a military steam roller, so nearly irresistible it has almost flattened the circumference of the startled globe. No other nation, after the need for checking this military steam roller had been driven home by the Kaiser himself, more readily, more speedily or more efficiently took up the task of forging for freedom a counter weapon to the one that had been able to work such havoc in the hand of the despot than the people of America.

The splendid unanimity with which the big business houses and leading corporations in every State in the Union have at once subordinated their own interests to the national necessity, the promptitude with which they have acquiesced in state interference in their private concerns, is one of the brightest tributes to the war altruism displayed by the whole community. The calm resignation or patriotic ardor with which, according to their various temperaments, mothers and wives have indorsed the strange new law that may take their boys away to cruel service in foreign countries is merely what every American husband and father knew would be the attitude of the noblest helpmates free men were ever granted by a gracious Creator.

Even in the lesser affairs of life the same American spirit of willing self-denial characterizes the determination of this great republic to win—and to win conclusively—in the great undertaking to which this country has pledged itself.

Retail organizations are working to devise trade regulations to cheapen goods to their customers, even though the economies practiced must mean a reduction in their own legitimate profits. Business houses in large cities are releasing all the human and mechanical material they can possibly spare to meet the requirements of the country.

Brewers and distillers will cheerfully undergo the loss entailed by war prohibition, if by so doing more grain can be secured for feeding the forces of democracy, only asking that their share of the war burden be regulated by justice. Many gospel ministers have given up comfortable livings to throw in their lots with the drafted boys at the front. High school students have surrendered the idle enjoyment of vacation days to helping with the harvests and the saving of food supplies. Doctors have answered the demands of the exemption boards with cheerful alacrity—to the serious interference with their private practices. With the exception of the professional agitator, the traitor with foreign gold in his filthy pocket, the self-centered, self-salvation-at-all-costs pacifist, the bloodthirsty I.W.W. and the jackal colony of Emma Goldmanites, the United States has answered with deep, quiet, earnest enthusiasm to the abnormal demands of the present war necessity.

CAN COME BACK.
What is referred to as the north end of the city will undoubtedly be restored to its former greatness. Situation plays a strong part in anything. It is just as important in a commercial way as in a battle. The north end holds an unrivaled situation in Los Angeles.

For the time being certain kinds of trade have been diverted from it. This has been done through a plan of campaign conducted by those interested in building up another section of the city. They have devoted their capital to putting up structures to which they have lured merchants from the north end. That's all in the game of business. To those with the energy and the money, and with the ability to use the money, belong the prizes.

But what one set of men can do in one portion of the city another set of equally determined men can do in another section. In union there is strength, and if those interested in the north end will map out a plan of campaign such as that which was conducted further south there is no reason why they should not regain for the north section its paramount position and recoup their fortunes.

It may be argued that big houses have been lured away from the north end. What of it; there are merchants to be found willing to take a chance in a rapidly-growing city if it can be proved to them that the opportunities exist. The task, then, of those who want to restore the north end to its leading position is to prove this.

A woman's work is never done. A while ago they were participating in the functions of peace, now they are called on to save the country by rallying to the standard of economy.

I WONDER.

BY CHARLES F. LUMMIS.

When a Mind can no longer Wonder, it can no longer Grow. Imagination—Guess-so, Hope-so, Mebbe-so—that's the Sap that runs up the veins of the Human Plant. When we cease to Wonder, we cease to be Alive. We may still cumber the earth; we may still dodder in the grooves we have worn for ourselves; but we are then like the Irishman's hen—"Dead, but not yet Sinsible av it."

I have a Desert Tortoise. His name is "Methusalem" because he is even older than I am. Some might suspect him of having more Sense. That possibility occurs to me, every now and then—as it does whenever I deal with any of God's Dumb Ones; when my chameleons frisk the flies and my shy flying-squirrels come out by night to take the walnuts from my palm; and my "cat-fish" (which in New England we better called "Horn Pout,") come together in the fountain at my whistle, and nibble my fingers, and let me scratch their backs; and my three-and-a-half pound African bullfrogs hump and swell with pride when I scratch their backs.

Methusalem is about the last of my Happy Family (of which I have named only a tithe,) to be suspected of Imagination. But he has it. He has learned in a week the special whistle for him; and to poke his serpentine head out of his carapace house, and to inch along the fifteen feet from his grotto to the cement walk which is his table. His hind legs are as an elephant's, his fore legs like a crab's. If he is in a Rush he can reel off 200 feet an hour. The only thing he ate on the plains of Texas was dry grass, where the benighted natives call him a "gopher" (not knowing our California Subterrene!) And you who have gardens or ranches will join me in my Ha-Ha! on the California Gopher—the other day I saw the "earths" of a hundred of him up in the wilderness were he COULDN'T DO ANY HARM! Fancy a gopher—the best civil engineer in the world—setting his transit and getting not to your pet fruit tree, but to a mere willow-bush! He'd die of a broken heart if he only knew that nobody Dared a Camn whether he ate that root or not!

But Mr. Methusalem (despite his Burglar-Proof Roof, which he obviously likes me to rub) isn't such a Defunct that he can't Wonder!

He Wondered, the other day, whether apricots were edible—and having cleaned one, he tried to eat the pit also. He finds lettuce, satsumas, green peaches, just as good as wire-grass. He is Growing Mentally, and Adding to his Pleasures.

God forbid I should have less sense than my Deliberate Testacean!

And I DO Wonder! Early and Often. I Wonder Why is a Liar. I Wonder Why is an Evening Paper. I wonder Why is a Draft—(no Volunteers for Democracy?) I Wonder Why are Lice and I.W.W.'s. I Wonder what is to be with the unknown woman I see on the street, whose drapings betray what she thinks to hide. I Wonder what that life shall be that kicks under her heart. Mebbe I shall live to see him our President—or mebbe a she-picket at the President's gate! I Wonder how it would Lend Aid and Comfort to the Enemy if an American Mother or Sweetheart or Sister were allowed to know Where the Somewhere Thunder in France Jimmy Smith might be. I don't believe the Kaiser cares where, so long as Jimmy is THERE. But there are heart-hungry women back here at home who do Care Just Where. We fought a five years Civil War—longer and on a larger scale than we shall ever (Please God) get into this European Hell—and we never needed any such Mystery, though the Confederates (being next door) knew a hundred times as much of our movements in the North as Germany would know even if Mr. Creel devoted his whole censorship to advising Berlin better than he informs us.

I Wonder why our Chief Cabinet-Maker doesn't take an ax to Finish the Job. I Wonder why the lives of our sailors are left to a Daniels, and of our soldiers to a Baker—these bonnie boys that are answering their President's call to lick the Germans—but have first to get past the Poison Gas of Washington.

I Wonder why we don't have it as well here as in England, France, Spain. In any of those countries, our whole Cabinet would have Resigned (by request) long ago. Our own California Lane is the only man in the whole shooting-match that would stand a show of sitting in the new Cabinet if the Will of the People COUNTED in this "Democracy."

I Wonder why the three Americans to whom I believe an overwhelming majority of their countrymen would intuitively turn in this incomparably greatest crisis this nation ever faced—I wonder why they are hog-tied, gagged and laid away on the Shelf! Where's T. R.? If he had been put in charge of Recruiting, we probably wouldn't have needed a draft. And where's Leonard Wood, the Foremost Soldier of America? And where is Goethals, our greatest Engineer?

When we employ Men we say "See that yonder? Sic it!" And they bring back the BONE—"Teddy" with Panama and many other things; and Wood with Geronimo and Cuba and the Philippines, and Goethals with the Canal. And they having Delivered the Goods, we leave Congress and the other Mentally Unemployed to waste our time, money and patience.

Personally I like several members of our national legislature. Some of them went to college with me. But you can bite me if I like the irresponsible system to which we have tied ourselves down.

And I Keep a Wondering!

Whether a lone woman ought to be allowed to go into a cafe unattended after 9 o'clock at night all depends on the woman. A policeman with a high sense of the proprieties ought to be able to single the sheep from the goats.

Developing Ideals.

Nothing has given BARKER BROS. more satisfaction than to have been instrumental in helping their patrons to attain their ideals in furnishing their homes.

Every now and then comes in an old-time customer who bought and is still using goods bought twenty to thirty years ago. Their ideal was and is GOOD GOODS; and you will agree with them and us they found them in these goods which have served them so well.

Many of our friends have furnished several times, each time with better things and on a higher plaine than before. We are always glad of this, because the better, the more more harmonious, the more artistic the ideal, the better satisfaction will be given. We have a number who have furnished their homes one piece at a time. Instead of scattering their money over the several articles they need, they concentrate on the one, but bring it up to their high ideal. By and by they have a home completely furnished on a high plane, which will always be a source of great satisfaction to them as long as they have a home.

This demand for the better, the ideal, is reciprocal and far reaching. The customer's demand influences us in our buying and causes us to demand of the manufacturers the better things. So, we are glad to say, never in our history have we had such good things to offer our friends; never have we been in so good a position to meet their most exalted ideals, as today!

[Signed] Chas. H. Barker

Getting Service

If one is sick he sees a doctor, if he is in trouble he sees his attorney, if he is building a home he sees an architect—each of whose advice he freely seeks.

But if he wants to furnish a home, he frequently thinks he knows all about it, and wants no advice. He has read articles in books or magazines that make him think he knows enough "to go it alone."

After a man has followed a magazine article and built a kitchen cabinet out of a dry goods box, he seeks a job as a cabinet maker; after a woman has read articles on home decoration, she seeks a position as a decorator—usually she does not know how long it takes paint to dry—how many rolls of wall paper for a room—how many yards of carpet for a floor, or hundreds of other practical things necessary for the knowledge of a good decorator.

In our store we have experts and apprentices in every department.

If a customer comes in "to go it alone" she is likely to get in the hands of an apprentice.

The best way for a customer to get the best out of our store is to immediately upon entrance, tell her wants to our sales manager, Mr. H. E. Bennett, who will place her in the hands of an expert.

[Signed] W. A. Barker.

HOSPITAL RELIEF ASKED FROM CITY.

EMERGENCY STATION'S NEEDS PRESENTED TO COUNCIL.

Assistant Surgeon, Two More Nurses, Ambulance, Janitor, Air Compressor and Battery of Lights Among Requirements of Receiving Insitution.

The needs of the Receiving Hospital were still further emphasized yesterday in a letter to the Public Safety Committee of the City Council, from Chief Surgeon Gilmer.

According to Dr. Gilmer, the hospital requires an additional assistant surgeon who would be on hand at all major operations, an additional female and an additional male nurse, a new ambulance, a battery of lights for the major operating-room, an additional janitor, another wheel table, an instrument case for the operating-room, $250 for operating suits, and a compressed air tank and compressor.

The last named feature is necessary in the treatment of burns. The method employed is now used exclusively in Europe to treat burned soldiers—melted paraffin war applied by the use of air.

The extra nurses and assistant police surgeon are greatly needed. During the recent Occidental Hotel fire twenty-six firemen were in the hospital in three hours for treatment. Last Friday there were five cases in the hospital in half an hour, every patient needing immediate attention. Two of them had fractured skulls; one child had both legs broken, and a man and a woman had severed arteries.

IN TRUST FOR WIDOW.

Hundred Thousand Dollar Estate of Late South Pasadenan, for the Most Part, is Placed with Bank for Her Benefit. Will Probate Asked.

The late Henry Menderson of South Pasadena, who died July 11, left an estate valued at $100,000, according to a petition for probate of the will, filed yesterday by the widow, Bertha S. Menderson. The will provides that the widow shall receive the household furniture, ornaments and other goods. The residue of the estate is placed in trust with the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank for the benefit of Mrs. Menderson during her lifetime.

Whenever the wife so directs she may be paid as her sole and separate property sums in cash out of the trust estate. The trust will terminate at her death. The estate then will vest in the brothers and sisters of Mr. Menderson, who are Jacob Menderson, Rachel Schloss of New York, Julius Weiler of Ohio, and Rose M. Weil of Illinois.

FOR SAFE-KEEPING.

Karl Offer, Suspected German Spy, Interned at Fort Douglas, Utah, Probably for Duration of War—Says He Would Fight for Us.

Deputy United States Marshal W. B. Cavanaugh returned yesterday from Salt Lake, Utah, where he delivered Lieut. Karl Offer, the alleged German spy, to Col. Williams, in charge of Fort Douglas. It is probable Offer will be interned during the war.

Cavanaugh says Offer bitterly denies having been in any way connected with the German government, and declares his only offense was in objecting to certain statements made by a street talker in San Diego on the subject of German outrages in Belgium.

Offer is a jeweler by trade and has spent many years traveling among the natives of China. He says he is ready to fight in behalf of the United States if given an opportunity.

SECRETARIES TO GO ABROAD.

Christian Association Men are Ready to Sail.

Three from California Among Second Contingent.

Officials for State Camps are Announced.

Forty-nine Young Men's Christian Association secretaries will leave during the coming week for service with the American troops abroad, according to private advices received yesterday at the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. from the International Committee of that organization in New York. They will compose the second largest contingent of Y.M.C.A. secretaries and volunteers to leave for duty with American soldiers and sailors in France and England. More than forty secretaries, it is announced, already are with the troops in those countries.

Rev. Robert Freeman, former pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Pasadena, and well known throughout Southern California, will be one of the three new secretaries from California to accompany the second contingent. Dr. Freeman has long been associated with the Y.M.C.A. movement in this country and in this State and was recently given leave of absence by his congregation to serve the soldiers at the battle front in the capacity of a Y.M.C.A. secretary.

OTHER REPRESENTATIVES.

Other representatives of California in the second contingent, according to information just issued by the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A., are Harry Kingman of Berkeley, a graduate of Pomona College and of the Springfield (Mass.) Y.M.C.A. Training School, and general secretary of the University of California Y.M.C.A. for one year. Kingman is known throughout the State for his professional baseball. He has been serving several weeks at the Presidio in San Francisco as an association secretary. The third member of the California party is Rev. Carroll Perry of Santa Barbara, a graduate of Williams College and an Episcopal rector.

Most of the men, it is announced, are trained association workers. But there are many business and professional men of marked ability, as well as ministers and college professors, who have been successful in work with young men.

The second contingent will be followed closely, it is said, by a third. Imperative telegrams from France are asking that at least seventy-five Y.M.C.A. secretaries or workers be sent overseas each month

SUPPLIES DISPATCHED.

In addition to the workers, immense quantities of supplies are required and are being forwarded as rapidly as space can be found for them on outgoing vessels. Practically everything needed for the support and maintenance of the Y.M.C.A. with the soldiers at the front must be transported from this country, it is stated.

Simultaneously, plans for the work among the drafted men in this country are going forward rapidly. Hundreds of young men are now receiving training that will specially equip them for service as Y.M.C.A. secretaries among the men in the new national army.

The State Executive Committee yesterday announced the appointment of Y.M.C.A. secretaries in the various California camps. These men will have general supervision of the work and will be assisted by numerous other secretaries in the various departments of the work. They are:

San Diego, John C. Fechter, general secretary Oakland Y.M.C.A.; Linda Vista, J. A. Jackson, general secretary Berkeley Y.M.C.A., and W. A. Reynolds, physical director, Los Angeles Y.M.C.A.; Presidio and San Francisco Bay district, R. H. Gossom, former general secretary Long Beach Y.M.C.A.; Palo Alto, Charles G. Titus, general secretary Sacramento Y.M.C.A.; Naval Reserve station, Municipal Pier No. 1, H. Edgar Fry, formerly educational director Los Angeles Y.M.C.A.; Arcadia, George Runyon and C. G. Clay.

WORK AMONG DRAFTED MEN.

Arrangements have been made by the California War Work Council of the association to provide a regular schedule of lectures and talks for the men as soon as they are settled in their new quarters, some time in August or early in September. Chief among the speakers is Dr. J. A. Francis, who has been given leave of absence from his church for six months and who has already begun his work for the war council. He has spoken to the troops at Arcadia and San Diego and expects to appear before the soldiers of all the other camps along the Pacific Coast before the summer has passed. Then Dr. Francis will go East to speak to soldiers under the direction of the International Committee of the association.

Other men well known along the Pacific Coast who are taking a prominent part in these speaking campaigns are Roy Matthews, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Seattle, and Prof. Norman Coleman of Reed College, Portland.

ENTERS DENIAL.

Roman L. Shinker, a druggist, in an answer filed yesterday to the $50,000 lost love suit of William F. Story, denies that he knew or now knows Alva Ruth Story to be the wife of the plaintiff. He says he did not meet her clandestinely at an apartment-house last April, as alleged. The Storys were married in this city April 18, 1914, and have an infant son.

DRIED ORANGE PEEL SHIPPED.

First Carload Ever Sent Out from State is Billed for New York.

The first straight carload of dried orange peel ever shipped out of California left yesterday, consigned from the Kingsbury laboratories at Redlands to the None-Such Mince Meat Company at Syracuse, N. Y. The plant has been busy for several weeks filling this big order.

This is not the first carload of dried peel to go out of the city, but the others were all a mixture of orange, lemon and grapefruit peel. Mr. Kingsbury says the demand for orange peel is constantly becoming heavier and that there is no doubt but that the peel is to be used generally in the preparation of various confections.

He uses cull oranges in drying the peel and in this way finds a use for fruit that otherwise would be wasted.

Wood Pipe Line at Fort Riley.

The waterworks and sewer systems for the cantonment to house the national army at Fort Riley are being constructed under the supervision of Wynkoop Kiersted, consulting engineer for the Kansas City waterworks system. The plans have been drawn and work will begin as soon as the materials arrive.

A novel feature of the waterworks system will be pipes made of wood. This is common in California, but very seldom, if ever, has been used around here. The pipes are made of redwood and fir, then wrapped with wire. They will last indefinitely. Iron pipe is now so scarce and so high in price that the wood was ordered as a substitute. There will be between ten and twelve miles of pipe in the system.

Freddie Got the Seat.

[Indianapolis News:] A downtown man was riding west on a West Washington-street car, the other day, in which every seat was filled and possibly a dozen strap hangers were clutching resolutely the straps that are so conveniently placed for resolute clutching.

A poor, tired mother boarded the car with her little son Freddie. Freddie was about 3 years old. He held fast to his mother's hand as they stood in the aisle.

The downtown man got up and offered the woman his seat. The woman looked at him as if she realized that the man had done something.

"Here, Freddie, get up in this seat," she said to her young son, as she picked him up and placed him comfortably in the seat the downtown man had vacated for her, while she remained standing in the aisle, one hand still clutching the strap and the other holding a heavy market basket.

If that downtown man ever gives up another seat in a street car he will first ascertain the identity of its future tenant.

Has to Play Dog.

[Kansas City Star:] "We do not keep a dog," stated Skimpy little Mr. Meek, "and so, when a particularly truculent looking tramp comes to the door, my wife makes me stay out of sight and growl like a fierce Numidian lion."

Fun.

Luxuriance.

TWENTY-TWO ORANGES O A SINGLE SLENDER S

IF ALL Southern California soil products grow as luxuriantly as samples of oranges taken to the Chamber of Commerce yesterday there should be food enough to keep the wolf guessing for some time to come.

Rosedale ranch, at Covina, owned by George W. Griffiths, Jr., contributed the largest bunch of oranges on a single twig that has appeared this year. Twenty-two normal fruits of Valencias, hanging to a stem no thicker than a lead pencil and weighing as much as a keg of nails, were brought in by J. L. Matthews, who is proud of his home town and the oranges around it.

A few hours before Mr. Matthews appeared C. W. Speer of Irwindale brought in a twig to that his trees not only bear but plenty of it. He had a an even dozen, which he be a record.

According to Mr. Ma Covina Valencia district wi a fine crop this season, and tion, the ranchers have ed that intercropping beans is a pronounced orange and other grove were planted to the these being best adapte between trees, and it is that the bean yield will crease of 200 per cent. 8000 acres of beans the latest estimate. A crease also is reported mediate crops.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY EMILY SQUIER.

"FOR I have looked on the pale face of Sorrow;
The eyes of Famine have gazed into mine."

Somehow, I kept thinking of those lines from a play long since forgotten, as I watched the face of Mme. Laura de Turcynowicz when she spoke at the City Club last week. Here is a face on which is printed the story of suffering as legibly as it will appear on this page; for she has seen war, stripped of its gauds of poesy, dragged from the dimness of unreality, stark naked in its horror, ghastly in its filth and brutality. This Canadian woman, wife of a Polish count, saw the beginning of the struggle in Poland, and was present through the tragedy of an occupied country. She is still comparatively a young woman, but her hair is snow white, and her face in repose has the stern sorrow of an angel who has seen hell.

Mme. de Turcynowicz before her marriage was Laura Blackwell, and was in Europe studying for an operatic career. She met the young Count Stanislawa de Gozwada Turcynowicz, and very soon her vision of a stage career vanished in the light of an ardent love. The two were married in Cracow, and the Count took his bride to his ancestral mansion, one of the most beautiful palaces in Poland. Their life for several years was one of peace and happiness; when rumors of war came it seemed like fearing a bad dream to be afraid that strife could come to that peaceful spot.

But war did come; like a devastating flood the Huns swept into Poland; and with less than an hour's notice, the Count, his wife, and their three children, had to leave their home and hurry away to safety. The Count joined the Polish army and was made chief sanitary engineer of the Russian troops; for weeks they heard nothing of their home; and then news came that the Germans had been driven out. When they went back to the home, it was as if Attila and his hoard of barbarians had infested it.

HOME WRECKED.

"Then I entered," said the Countess, "I could not believe that that filthy place was my beautiful home. Pictures had been torn down, furniture ruined, and the very least of the indignities had been the stabling of the horses in one of the parlors. The butler took me to the pantry where the great jars of honey and preserves had been emptied of their contents, heaped with indescribable filth, and placed again on the shelves. Everything edible had been taken, and what could not be carried away was destroyed or defiled.

"The house was finally made habitable, and for four days the family enjoyed peace, then news came that the Germans were returning. One of the little boys became ill with a fever, and the mother, realizing that the children could not be moved with safety, urged her husband to go to his regiment, and argued that as she was a Canadian, she had no chance of harm.

"I will never forget that night when he left," she said slowly. "I heard his footsteps on the frozen snow; I have never seen him since; I do not even know where he is, but I think sometime I will see him again and that we will be together."

The Germans came, and again the home was occupied. Von Hindenburg made her house his headquarters, notwithstanding the fact that her two boys were at death's door from typhus.

VON HINDENBURG.

"I am asked so much what Von Hindenburg looks like; just like his pictures, only more so. His hair is iron gray and bristly, his eyes are small and wash out blue, and his face is red and puffy. He drinks heavily. But I can say this for him, I never suffered any discourtesy from him, although he was rough, and very exacting. He would not allow coffee to be made in the kitchen, and insisted that I make it in the samovar at the table. So many people have asked me the same question—why didn't I poison him; I have but one answer—I am not one of them."

She told of the old woman who had worked in her home—and who was a spy; of the two bottles of champagne which the doctor had given her to be used as medicine for her sick children, and of its confiscation by the drunken officers; of how they tried to force her drink the Kaiser's health on the evening the word of the Lusitania's destruction was received; and how her refusal almost caused her death. She described the weary—Russian prisoners, tied together like beasts, with their backs raw and bleeding from the marks of the lash.

"They were so hungry, and my little girl cried so when she saw them that I sent her out to them with a basket of bread. I was still idealistic enough to think that the Germans would respect a tiny child of five years; but they took the basket from her hands and crumbled the bread into crumbs, throwing it in the air to watch the famished prisoners grovel for it in the mud. One little girl got one piece and tried to give it to a prisoner who was just a boy, and the officer knocked it out of her hand; the boy crawled through the mud to where it had fallen, and the officer kicked him in the mouth. My little girl screamed, and ran to me, crying her heart out. They left the boy where he fell—and he died there."

UNBELIEVABLE CRUELTY.

The tale of other cruelties she told was almost unbelievable; that the parents and older children were taken prisoner, leaving the littler ones to roam over the hideous battlefields and starve; she, herself, in two weeks rescued eighty children, all under [illegible] years of age; one was a little girl of 4 years who was carrying her 6-months-old brother; the two had had no food for days. Her maid, Mina, a pretty girl of 16 years, was taken away by a doctor to the camp, and when she found her after four days, Mina was dying, and an officer informed the Countess that she could not take the girl—that she belonged to the soldiers.

After months of heartbreaking work among the people of her village and for the wounded prisoners, when her three children were barely alive from lack of nourishment, the intrepid woman succeeded in getting to Berlin—and spent most of the time in a cattle car with German soldiers. They told her that if she could prove that she was an American she might he able to get out of the country.

"Perhaps you think I was overjoyed then; no indeed; my heart sank lower than ever before, for I had been cherishing a terrible secret, one that all the people of the village knew, and yet which had never come to the Germans' ears; if it had, there would have been no hope; I was born in Canada. The American Consul sent a man to the hotel, and as soon as he saw me, he said, "are you the lady who wishes to be identified as an American? Why, I remember your singing the 'Star Spangler Banner' before you were married at an American dinner." And, can you believe, it, no further questions were asked me. How I blessed that song; the occasion I had almost forgotten; but there was an American dinner, and the great singer whom they were expecting failed to come; so I was asked to sing, and, very nervous about, I consented; and it was just that song that made him remember me, and think me an American."

The Countess and her children reached Holland, and when the children for the first time for many months saw white bread and honey on the table, they asked in an awestruck whisper, "mother, may we eat it, or is it for tomorrow?"

The Countess knows many of the notables who have been in the war; Gen. Pilsudski, commander of the Polish Legions, was an intimate of their house.

"I was heart sick when I found him heading the Polish Legion against his own people; but I know that it was because he was misguided by German promises for Poland; and when I read, just the other day, that he had been caught trying to get out of the country with a false passport—I knew he had seen his mistake. I know too that death will be the least of the things they will make him suffer; I have seen him for the last time."

She told of the garbled reports of the welfare of many artists, including Edouard de Reszke.

"He is not a prisoner, and he is not happy; the story of his singing amid the ruins of his castle is pitiable nonsense. He was put into a cellar by the Germans; I saw him put in, and he never came out; he starved to death there."

Mme. Laura de Turcynowicz wears the uniform of the Polish Red Cross; it is dark gray, with a black nun's head dress, and a military cape. On her breast there is a Red Cross. That emblem of service and suffering has been through the terrible conflict. She is lecturing in this country to raise funds for the stricken country of Poland.

Vacation Activities.

The old adage about a "woman's work" being "never done" certainly applies to club women; although most of the clubs are taking much-needed vacations both for their own and the newspaper's sake, many of them are continuing sub rosa—as it were, with various activities, and I dare say are doing quite as much real good as they ever accomplished in their busiest days of formal work; the Friday Morning Club is meeting with great success with its summer entertainment series, and the proceeds are all turned over for war relief work; the City Club is having some of the best programmes of the year, and the P.-T. A.'s, while not working on children's problems, are busy sewing socks and other useful things for soldiers. The busy workers take their knitting outfits even to the beaches with them, and I have seen more than one industrious lady counting "one-two-three-and-under" to a pair of needles and a ball of gray yarn, at the theater between acts. Whatever else may be said by the members of the hammer league against women's clubs, idleness isn't one of their failings.

To Give Benefit Performance.

Next Friday evening, in the Gamut Club hall, at 8:15 p.m., there will be given a special entertainment which has been developed by students of the Polytechnic High School, for patriotic purposes.

The chief event of the evening will be a one-act playlet entitled "How the Vote Was Won," an amusing farce-comedy on woman suffrage. The cast was organized by Esther Bushan-Marr and is composed of her Polytechnic colleagues.

Besides the play Miss Helen Voigt, a well-known dancer, will contribute to the programme. A bagpipe solo by Mr. Rennie Wilson, a vvocal solo by Florence Brown and other numbers will also be rendered.

Hollywood Studio Club.

The Hollywood Studio Club will give a tea this afternoon from 4 to 6, and Mary Anderson, Vitagraph star, will be hostess. The club has been active during the past weeks, and the members have given several enjoyable programmes at the County Hospital for the patients. A dance at the clubhouse Friday evening was one of their social events. Hostesses were Mrs. Mott Porter, Mrs. Gordon Griffith, Mrs. Isadore Meyers and Mrs. Elizabeth McGaffey.

Illinois Club to Meet.

The Illinois State Society will hold its regular meeting Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in The Times Assembly Hall, First and Broadway. There will be a programme, followed by dancing and refreshments.

Gives Programme at Jail.

Miss Faith Chevaillier, whose title "The Prisoner's Friend" has been well bestowed, was instrumental in getting together a splendid programme last Sunday for the men at the jail. Some of the artists who contributed were Miss Gloria Bretherton, Miss Anne Mellon, Mrs. J. Overton, while Miss Chevaillier made a well-directed talk, and Mr. Singh, an East Indian who has graduated from Edinburgh University, gave a short address.

Woman's City Club.

L. W. Rogers, national lecturer of the Theosophical Society of America, will speak on "The New Conception of Brotherhood" tomorrow at the City Club. Luncheon will be served at noon, the lecture to follow at 1 p.m.

Medical Fraternity Banquet.

The Los Angeles Chapter of Alpha Epsilon Iota held its final meeting and banquet at the Hotel Alexandria Thursday. Guests of honor were Dr. Eleanor Seymour, national president of the fraternity, and Dr. Alice Johnson Hayes, missionary at Wucho, China.

Members present besides the honor guests were Drs. Veturia Armstrong, retiring president of the local chapter, who presided; Frederika Keep, newly-elected president; Laura Bennett, Charlotte Brown, Lura Emerson, Nannie Dunsmoor, Etta Gray, Nellie Hayes, Elizabeth Kearney, Ethel Leonard, Margaret Morris, Lulu Peters, Louise Richter, Margaret Roberts, Agnes Scholl, Cynthia Skinner, Kate Wilde-Barber, Bell Wood-Comstock, Jula Y. Johnson, Augusta Zuber.

D.A.R. Meets.

A meeting of the State officers of the Daughters of the American Revolution of the southern part of the State was held Thursday at the home of Mrs. C. C. Cottle, State Vice Regent.

Reports showed that $2200 have been expended by the different chapters in war relief work. One chapter is supporting nine French orphans and many have purchased Liberty bonds. All Daughters are either working to assist the Red Cross movement or knitting for the Navy League, and assisting financially.

Mrs. W. W. Stilson, former Regent of the Cabrillo Chapter, has been appointed director in conservation for the Pacific Coast by the National President, Mrs. George Thatcher Guernsey.

Beginning October 15, the Daughters will hold monthly reciprocity luncheons, and this will tend to bring all members in closer touch and to promote growth along all lines of patriotism.

The State conference will be held in Los Angeles this year on the second Thursday in February.

Announces Department Heads.

Mrs. W. A. Gallentine, president of the First District California Congress of Mothers, announces the appointment of the following chairmen of departments for the coming year: Programme, Mrs. Anna H. Obear, Los Angeles; Child Hygiene, Dr. Maude Wilde, Los Angeles; Child Labor, Miss Anna L. B. Williams, Pasadena; Education, Mrs. J. C. Urquhart, Santa Monica; Emblem and Magazine, Mrs. C. H. Ritchie, Pasadena; Juvenile Court and Probation, Mrs. Harvey Trowbridge, Los Angeles; Kindergarten, Miss Barbara Greenwood, Los Angeles; Legislation, Mrs. Howard Grotter, Van Nuys; Membership, Mrs. Rufus Lake, Los Angeles; Patriotism, Mrs. L. Hutchinson, Glendale; Social Hygiene, Dr. Lulu Peters, Los Angeles.

Mrs. F. E. Tyson of Santa Monica, as first vice-president, will be chairman of the Extension Committee, which includes the other vice-presidents, Mrs. Phil Crockett of Watts, Mrs. Lincoln Bakcus of Monrovia, Miss Clara Brown of Pomona and Mrs. H. R. Archibald of South Pasadena.

The executive board meetings will occur during the year on the third Thursday of each month at 10 o'clock in the County Board of Education room.

Club Notes in Brief.

A benefit for war relief work will be given under the auspices of the Civic Outlook Club of Redondo Beach, tomorrow evening in the tent on the corner of Emerald and Commercial streets. The programme will consist of musical numbers and a travelogue by Paul Osgood Hardy.

At a meeting of the New York State Society in The Times Building Friday evening, Mrs. Seward Simons spoke on the State Council of Defense and on the need for food conservation. Little Miss Lucia Malin gave a group of patriotic and classic dances, and Prof. Anton Dahl gave several piano numbers. The secretary spoke on the death of Gen. Otis and a letter of condolence was read to be sent to the family.

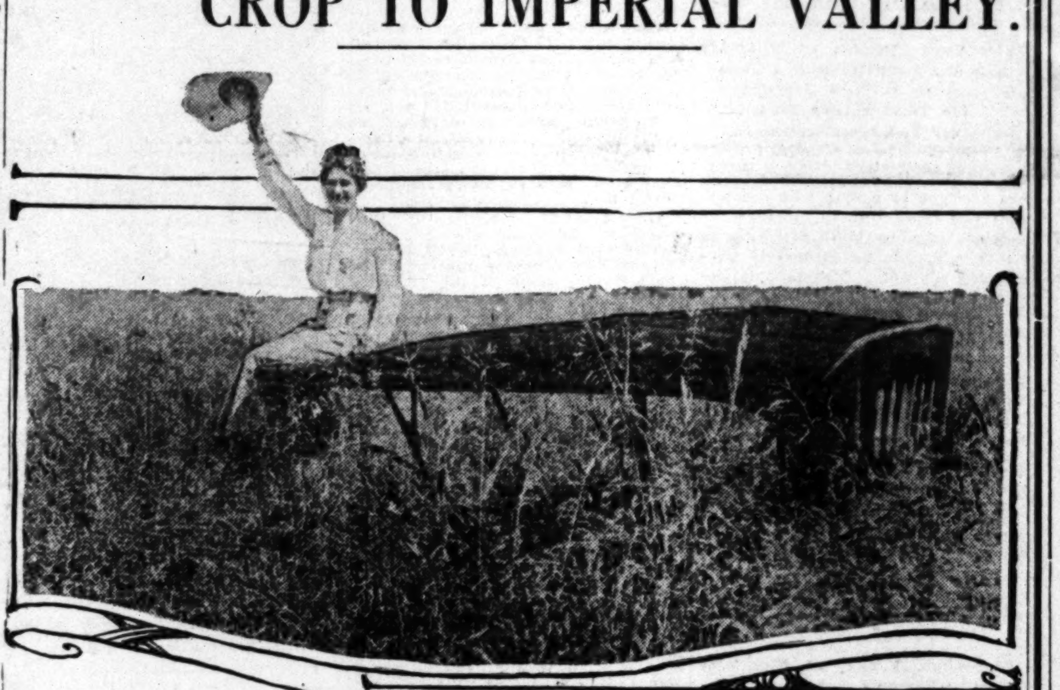
Sudan Grass.

AFRICA GIVES BIG NEW WAR CROP TO IMPERIAL VALLEY.



AFRICA has given the ranchers of Imperial Valley a new "war crop" in Sudan grass, a forage plant that is now extensively seeded to get increased yields of fodder that the ranches may turn out a maximum number of fat cattle at the present record prices.

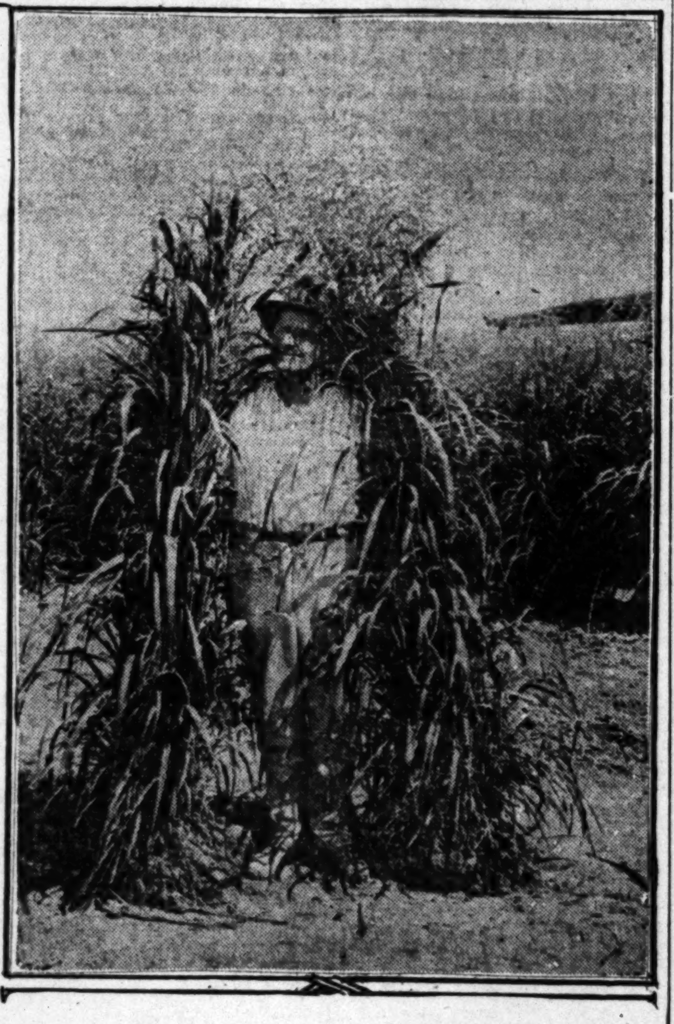
From Khartum, far up the Nile in Egyptian Sudan, the agricultural explorers of the United States Department of Agriculture have brought the grass to American farmers, and the Imperial Valley was one of the first sections to recognize its value.

Although the valley has what agriculturists term ideal alfalfa conditions in its soil, climate and irrigation supply, and has 120,000 acres in that one crop alone, the new grass from distant Africa is finding a place for itself.

According to A. M. Nelson, secretary of the Imperial County Farm Bureau, Sudan grass will not compete with alfalfa on soil known as "alfalfa land," but will supplement it on other soils.

Sudan grass is a heavy yielder. Grover Lofftus, president of the Imperial County Farm Bureau, last year obtained an average of sixteen tons of cured hay to the acre, whereas the average yield of alfalfa on good alfalfa lands in the valley is ten tons to the acre. Sudan grass is a quick grower, and in the valley has reached such a height that an automobile could almost be lost from sight in the field.

Sudan grass was made a "war crop" by the need of greater stock feed supplies. The California State Council of Defense last spring made emphatic appeals that more hay be raised as one of the primary requistes of an increased food supply, stating that the amount of live stock raised would largely depend on the feed grown during the summer. All crops in the valley being raised under irrigation, Sudan grass is still being seeded. Farm Adviser Paul I. Dougherty is urging all Imperial Valley ranchers who will not have sown milo to plant Sudan up to August 20. It is an annual, but its quick growth will enable the valley ranchers to get a crop of hay and yet have time to prepare the ground for winter barley or wheat.



This is Sudan grass from Africa.

As it grows in the Imperial Valley. At the top is Mrs. Dee Turner sitting on the top of an automobile, all but concealed in the heavy growth. Below is F. W. Waite, Imperial County Horticultural Commissioner, with two stalks of the grass.

PLANS TO HANDLE BEACH SEWAGE.

SANTA MONICA WOULD BENEFIT BY JOINING CITY.

Hyperion Plant will be Capable of Disposing of the Offal from Hollywood to the Sea and from Glendale, Tropico, Burbank and the Entire San Fernando Valley.

Controverting the argument used by opponents of the proposed annexation of Santa Monica to Los Angeles City Engineer Hansen yesterday asserted that sewage from Santa Monica and the entire west coast district can be handled through the outfall sewer at Hyperion. If Santa Monica is annexed it is the intention of the Board of Public Works to better the sewer conditions of the beach city.

Since the question of annexation was raised in Santa Monica it has been reported that opponents of the plan circulated stories to the effect that Los Angeles would not be able to handle the sewage and that the city offal would be dumped into Santa Monica Bay. City Engineer Hansen said Los Angeles has never contemplated making a dumping ground out of the bay and that the sewage will be turned into the north outlet to the outfall sewer.

Mr. Hansen is working upon plans designed to take care of all the sewage in the district from Hollywood to the sea, and also from the cities of Glendale, Burbank, Tropico and the entire San Fernando Valley.

Opposition to Gas Tank.

A petition was filed with the City Clerk yesterday against the erection of a gas tank at North Main and Wilhardt streets by the Economic Gas Company. The petitioners say the tank would endanger the lives of citizens.

Officials of the gas company said they wish to erect the tank so as to increase its supply for consumers during the winter months. They declared that the proposed tank is in first-class condition and cannot endanger the lives of any persons.

LOVE LETTERS IN EVIDENCE.

BENEDICT, PLAINTIFF, GETS DIVORCE DECREE.

Testifies in Court that Wife was Lively, Encouraged Two Other Men and that His Part in the Quadrangle was Intolerable. Married Eighteen Months.

Letters said to have been exchanged between Mrs. Madeline Benedict and F. O. Patterson were offered in the divorce suit of William Lester Benedict in Judge Jackson's court yesterday. In a letter which Mr. Patterson is said to have written, appeared the sentence:

"I have you on my lap and my arms around you tight while I am reading them (her letters.)"

Mrs. Benedict is alleged to have written a letter which read:

"Patty, I think I hear you calling me. Nettie just wrote she had numerous letters. Oh, Patty, somebody's lied. Wire me if you still can—Madeline."

Mr. Benedict said he was proprietor of a downtown hotel at the time he was married. His wife was of a lively disposition. He said she had two men callers. He testified:

"She tried to keep all three of us on the string. I told her if she wanted me exclusively, we will try and make up, but I am of too jealous a disposition to go back to you with all those other men hanging around."

They parted after eighteen months of married life. The decree was granted.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless,) is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfulls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

HOW APPENDICITIS CAN BE PREVENTED.

Los Angeles people should know that a few doses of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka, often relieve or prevent appendicitis. This simple mixture removes such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. Adler-i-ka has easiest and most thorough action of anything we ever sold. The Dickinson Drug Co., Cor., 3rd and Main streets.

CITY'S MOUNTAIN CAMP IS MODEL FOR MANY TO COME.

UNCLE SAM'S Angeles National Forest is acquiring so wide a reputation that it is probable the coming summer seasons will see developed numerous camps similar to the municipal camp now maintained by the City Playground Commission in the Seeley Flats, San Bernardino Mountains.

Already six cities in California are to emulate the example of Los Angeles, and it is believed the record being established by the municipal camp this season will serve to stimulate such projects in all the large cities.

It is estimated that nearly 1800 Angelenos will take advantage of the camp this summer. There are sixty-two cottages and all have been kept filled to the limit. The time is apportioned into two-week units and the visitors are segregated. The boys have two weeks and two weeks are allowed for the women, and then families have a like period until the season is over. Two hundred and ninety girls were accommodated during the last period. Judging from the enthusiasm, there will be more applications next year than can be accommodated, unless additional quarters are provided.

SITE IS A GEM.

The camp is located in one of the most charming spots in the Angeles Forest Reserve. The city has leased thirty-one acres from the government for its campsite. The site proper is mostly level, with a beautiful mountain stream, which provides ample water for a swimming pool and even trout fishing. The whole is covered with great pine trees.

Life at the camp is as free from care and the conventions of city life as can be imagined, although there is careful supervision of the girls by Miss Alma Wilson, camp director, and her assistant, Mrs. Leila Shields. Excellent food is provided and served cafeteria style, the occupants of the cottages each day being assigned to dining-room duty.

The chief charm of the camp lies in the limitless possibilities for hikes over the hills, "near to nature's heart." Numerous trails are threaded daily by enthusiastic outdoor lovers, and the day's experiences are recounted in the evening around a great camp fire, when the several hundred guests enjoy impromptu entertainments devised by the occupants of cottages assigned to that particular function. Enjoyable little playlets, laughable skits, music, recitations and community singing sometimes threaten the infraction of the mandate, "Early to bed," but as a rule most of the campers are only too willing to retire early, as sunrise hikes are daily diversions.

FOREST IS POPULAR.

The government not only is willing, but eager to co-operate with communities in maintaining municipal camps. Los Angeles is fortunate in being so close to a national forest reserve, but few of its population realize the large number taking advantage of this opportunity to get near to nature. Last year there were 350,000 people who visited the Angeles forest, chiefly for recreation. This forest contains more summer homes, permanent camps and resorts on sites rented from the government than any other national forest in the United States. There are more than 900 permits for the use of forest areas taken advantage of by clubs, churches, schools, public organizations and individuals.

Many of the streams within the forest are well stocked with trout and deer, grouse and quail are found in the more isolated regions. The Forest Service and the California Fish and Game Commission work in conjunction in enforcing the fish and game laws, designed to perpetuate and keep from wanton destruction the natural wild life of the State.

Visitors to the municipal camp receive their outing practically at cost, as, without the co-operation of the city, it would be impossible for small parties to pay transportation, housing and provision bills at anything like so reasonable a figure as that fixed by the city.

So many inquiries have been received relative to the camp from eastern points that the publicity bureau of the Chamber of Commerce recently took a series of photographs and obtained data for articles to appear in eastern publications. At the same time, motion-picture cameramen of the three leading news weeklies took scenes of the camp while 290 girls and women of Los Angeles were enjoying their outing. These will be shown in every city and hamlet in the United States. Los Angeles will receive wide and favorable publicity through this linking of the motion picture to the printed word.

J.H. Botterele tells what OLIVES will do in NUEVO RANCH DISTRICT

Regular $500 Land (With Water) at $250 Per Acre

(Located in high San Jacinto Valley, 20 miles from Riverside.)

Nuevo Land Company—

Gentlemen: Yours of the 6th instant at hand. Re olives—I have picked from eight acres of 19-year-old trees, 28 tons of pickling olives and have yet to pick 12 tons of oil olives. The pickles I expect to pay me $150 per ton and the oil $50 per ton. The cost of picking is $20 per ton for pickles and $10 per ton for oil. This will, after deducting picking and hauling ($2 per ton) leave me $4040. Care of eight acres and water for same at $40 per acre, $320. Interest on investment of eight acres, $8000 at 8 per cent., $640; $960 from the $4040 still leaves me a goodly per cent on the invested capital. The land, trees and water stock cost $175 per acre twenty years ago.

I also have five acres in apricot trees. These generally yield 25 to 30 tons at a normal average of $22.50 per ton. They take less care than olives and only cost about $4 per ton to pick and $1 to haul. Water and care about $25 per acre.

I have 35 acres in all, good house, stable, etc., and if you can find me a cash buyer at $35,000, I am sure it will be mutually satisfactory.

Yours very truly, J. H. BOTTERELE.

What Nuevo Men Say:

"Nuevo Ranch is the best in the State for the money." T. A. MORRIS.

"At Nuevo we have peace and plenty." A. ROHRBACHER.

"Here is a place where a man can forge ahead." R. M. BARNETT.

"Where will you find better soil and climatic conditions?" FRED WALKER.

"The company has established high class improvements." B. F. MERRILL.

"All I want is more of this excellent land." B. J. MATHER.

Nuevo ranchers are making real records. B. F. Merrill, who bought 10 acres in 1914, has actually paid for his land out of his crops. B. J. Mather has netted $347.50 an acre from potatoes on land which cost him only $250 an acre, including water stock. He planted his potatoes between the rows of apricot trees.

Pickling and canning experts have pronounced Nuevo soil products among the best produced in the State. The Nuevo rancher does not worry about prices or the marketing of his crops—he can contract a year ahead for the sale of his products at top-notch prices.

Nuevo Ranch has good social and educational advantages, and the climatic conditions (elevation 1500 feet) are unsurpassed.

A dependable mutual water system furnishes an abundance of water at low cost.

Nuevo soil is heartily endorsed by agricultural and horticultural experts, fruit and vegetable canners, the American Beet Sugar Company, and scores of practical, experienced farmers and fruit growers.

Nuevo land is the last of its kind in the Southwest at $250 an acre, with water. Lands in Orange County held at $800 an acre are no more productive nor desirable.

FUNERAL GARB GONE.

Thief Steals Portion of Mourning Suit and Detective with a Tape Measure is Now Hunting for Trouser Legs That Vary in Circumference.

If, while attending a funeral, you are accosted by a man who requests that you allow him to measure the bottoms of your black trousers, be not afraid, for he is merely performing his duty. The man is Detective Vernand.

Yesterday he received a report from M. S. Gooley of No. 821 South Hope street that the latter's jet black "mourning" suit had been stolen. The right trouser leg is one inch larger in circumference at the bottom than the left trouser leg.

It is believed the thoughtless person who so unkindly appropriated the suit may dispose of it to someone about to attend a funeral. Therefore Detective Vernand goes armed with a tape measure and is attending numerous funerals.

Smoke, Anyhow.

"CURTAIN FIRE."

Weaponless, Yet Hotel Proprietor Deftly Prevents Enemy Dealer in Cigars from Advancing to the Trade, While He Reaps the Benefit.

That there is more than one way to do a thing has been demonstrated by Manager F. W. Paget of the Angelus Hotel.

Mr. Paget sought to lease a cigar stand at one side of the lobby in his hotel. When the proposition fell down, he promptly placed cigar cases of his own directly in front of the "other fellow's."

And now, the proprietor of the original stand has a man standing in front of his counter all the time, but not a customer, for the man in front of his case is Mr. Paget's clerk, who is standing behind another counter. A patron looking for the old stand would almost need a search warrant in order to locate it.

Mr. Paget is of the opinion that while his methods may be in restraint of trade, they do not come within the Sherman anti-trust law, for their very essence is competition.

GAS COMPANY SUES THE CITY.

ALLEGES CONTEMPT FOR FAILURE TO REMOVE WIRES.

Restraining Order Against the Service Bureau Followed by City Council Ordinance—Corporation Replies by Attack Upon Municipal Rights.

On the ground that the city and its Public Service Commissioners have violated a Federal statute by failing to remove the primary and secondary wires on York boulevard, alleged to be in too close proximity to the wires of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation, the latter filed a complaint through Attorney Howard C. Beach yesterday, asking that the city officials be cited into court for contempt.

An order to show cause was issued by Presiding Judge Finlayson returnable before Judge Jackson next Saturday. The punishment on conviction for failing to obey an order of the court is five days in jail, or a fine of $500. The complaint was based on several affidavits.

The action came originally before Judge York, the corporation complaining that the city was stringing wires too close to the corporation's high-power wires and that proximity was dangerous. Judge York granted a restraining order. Subsequently the City Council passed an ordinance requiring the gas corporation to remove poles and wires too close to the city's poles and wires. The Board of Public Service was ordered, whenever deemed necessary, to remove these poles and wires believed to be dangerous.

The gas corporation complains that the city still retains the primary and secondary wires on York boulevard; that this is a violation of the United States laws and that therefore the defendants are in contempt.

The defendants named are the city of Los Angeles, the Board of Public Service Commissioners and E. T. Scattergood, chief electrical engineer.

FEDERAL COURTS INACTIVE.

Court probably will not be held in either department at the Federal Building this week. Judge Trippet is in Carson, Nev., holding the bench for Judge Edward S. Farrington, and Judge Bledsoe is on vacation at Laguna Beach. Judge Bledsoe may hand down several decisions later this week. The calendar will not be called until Monday, August 13.

"BAD" NEGRO CORNERED IN HUT AND CAPTURED.

WILLIAM A. KNIGHTEN, 22 years old, alias "Buck" Knighten, who is known as "the bad nigger," has lost a great deal of his "badness." He was arrested early yesterday morning in a small hut in the Rose Hill district by a squad of detectives, policemen and police reporters.

Last April Knighten was arrested by Officers Garrott and Brett at Fourth and Hewitt streets, on a misdemeanor charge, and taken to a call box, where he was held by the policemen for the arrival of the patrol wagon. Before the machine arrived, Knighten grappled with Mr. Brett, secured the latter's gun, ran into an alley and fired six shots at the policemen, who pursued him. He scaled a high fence and escaped in the darkness.

Knighten recently returned to a Stanford-avenue house for a visit, and the police were informed. He again escaped and Friday the police discovered where he was living.

Detective Stevens and Officers Green, Garrott and Scott went to the hut and surrounded it. Knighten arrived about 7 o'clock yesterday morning. The four men sent in a call for an automobile and when Detectives James and Proffit responded, the "bad man" was awakened.

Unclad, he leaped to an open window and attempted to escape but was halted by a police reporter, who fired a shot over his head. The "bad man" turned to fight the men in the hut and leaped towards them. He was stopped by several shots around his head.

When he arrived at Central Station he was very meek. In a cell in the city jail yesterday he denied he was a "bad niggah."

SLAYER HELD IN ENSENADA.

CANTU WILD DELIVER HIM ON CARRANZA'S ORDER.

Man Accused of Shooting Woman to Death Traced from San Diego Across the Line and Captured by Mexican Governor's Men—Order for Extradition Asked For.

Dist.-Atty. Woolwine yesterday put in motion the machinery to secure Ernest Ayallo or Aguayo, arrested in Ensenada, Lower California, for the alleged murder of Mrs. Catalina Kingman, in her apartments, No. 1219½ South Los Angeles street, last Wednesday. Aguayo was captured by Gov. Cantu's men and held in Ensenada. The latter has informed Mr. Woolwine that he recognized the Carranza government and will deliver the prisoner to the Los Angeles county authorities only on the order of Gen. Carranza.

In order to secure this order Mr. Woolwine wired Secretary of State Lansing yesterday for Aguayo's extradition. Next Tuesday witnesses will be summoned before the grand jury for the purposes of obtaining an indictment.

Aguayo called on Mrs. Kingman last Wednesday and a quarrel followed. He is alleged to have drawn a revolver and shot her through the heart. Aguayo fled. Captain of Detectives Home traced him to San Diego and thence to Tia Juana. Later Aguayo was seen in Ensenada and his arrest followed. From letters found in Mrs. Kingman's apartments, it was learned that Aguayo had many friends in Lower California and it was believed he would seek a hiding place there. His arrest took place last Wednesday.

COUNTY PAY ROLL LESS.

Hundreds Dismissed from Service in the Last Year.

The county has a less number of employees in its service now than it had a year ago. According to a report from the Civil Service Commission to the Board of Supervisors yesterday there were in the county's employ in June, 1916, just 4125 persons. June last there were only 2819. This is explained by the fact that a number of men and women were dismissed from the road department. Since the deficit of $1,500,000, road work largely stopped. Three women and 686 men were let out.

POLITICS.

The American Game.

THE WATCHMAN.

TREND OF CURRENT POLITICAL THOUGHT AND ACTION.

Gov. Stephens pulled a "Whiffen" Friday when he suddenly decided to shift the responsibility of naming two extra Superior Court judges to the eighteen incumbents. It was an easy way out of a complex situation, but whether it will act as a boomerang when the Governor begins his campaign in the south is yet to be determined. The Governor told The Watchman that he would not let politics enter into the problem he faced in selecting the new jurists. No doubt he meant what he said, but "politics" is more or less of an uncertain quantity and it may slip into the situation despite the Chief Executive.

For two months or more the Governor has lent his ear to the biggest politicians of the south when they went before him to sing the praises of their individual choices for the judgeships. He thanked them for their wise counsel and not a few left the executive office in Sacramento with the impression that due consideration would be given their candidates. Now the time is at hand when the appointments must be made and the wily Governor adopts a plan to sidestep the responsibility. What answer is he to give those whom he has permitted to hound him ever since the Legislature created the extra judgeships? Will they be satisfied with his explanation? The Watchman believes they will not and that instead of solving the problem in a way that would increase his political strength in Los Angeles county, he made the step that will widen rather than cement the factions which must be together if a southern candidate for Governor is to be a winner.

To defeat a candidate who will spend a million dollars during his campaign is some job. As a result Mayor Rolph, who would like to succed Gov. Stephens, must be seriously considered. It is fresh in the memory of everyone how a candidate for the United States Senate defeated a strong Republican through the reckless expenditure of cash. It was said at the time that he placed upwards of $450,000 in circulation and there was not a city or hamlet in California that did not get some of it. Now if it is true that the San Francisco Mayor plans to double the amount used by the successful Senator there can be no question about the seriousness of the situation.

That the election of Mayor Rolph would be a calamity cannot be gainsaid. He would be bound hand and foot to the labor union gang, the element of society which does more to defeat progress than any other agency. The Olaf Tveitmoes, Curly Grows and "Red" Gores would be supreme. The valiant fight so successfully waged in California for more than a quarter of a century on behalf of industrial freedom, would, of course, continue, but under a regrettable handicap. The people of California are too jealous of their prosperous State to permit such a condition, but at the same time they must prepare to wage a hard fight.

The gubernatorial candidate who enters the race upon a platform sounding the death knell to State commissions will be the most popular man in the ring. No State in the United States has so many commissions as California and with the exception of two or three of them they are not only useless, but are responsible for the expenditure of millions of dollars annually which if diverted into the proper channels would decrease the burden of the taxpayers and increase the wealth of the State to a remarkable degree. The creation of the commissions was for the sole purpose of building a gigantic political machine. It was not to increase efficiency of State departments. For several years the people swallowed the stories told by Hiram Johnson and applauded these commissions. At last they have awakened to the truth and are ready and anxious for the annihilation of the whole list. If the two or three good ones are to sacrificed in order that the others be abolished, the public will not enter an objection. Anything to get rid of those 127 jobs paying salaries of $5000 and up per year, the million-dollar Railroad Commission and other departments just as extravagant and worthless. It is rumored that there will be a candidate who will stump the State in a campaign directed particularly at the commissions. More power to him.

S. H. Bradley, appointed by the Mayor as a member of the Civil Service Commission, is saying nothing about it; but take it from The Watchman that he is just the man to carry out the programme for reorganization of the commission. If Secretary Dee has received an offer from the city of New York he had better accept it by wire, for his days are numbered here.

William Francis Ireland, sometimes referred to as a preacher, but better known as secretary of the Cafe Man's Protective Association, said the other day that the Police Commission has no right to bar women from restaurants after 9 o'clock at night unless they are accompanied by a male escort. The same thing was said when the proposition of abolishing redlight districts came up. I notice that they were abolished and if the Police Commission is in earnest in its proposed regulation, the "gold-diggers" will soon be seeking other haunts when the curfew rings.

Friends of Tom McAleer, who was ousted from the office of Registrar of Voters through political machinations, still are hopeful. They believe the judge will declare the office vacant upon the ground that the incumbent was ineligible to the appointment because he was out of the State without permission, and that Mr. McAleer, the "fighting Scotchman," will get back.

The final week of the University of Southern California summer session begins tomorrow. Dr. Carl Albert Krause comes for this week only and will deliver ten lectures on the latest methods in teaching French and German. He heads the modern language work in the New York high schools.

The final address in the series will be given Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock by Dr. Edward Benjamin Krehbiel on "The War and Genuine Victory."

S. L. Weaver, director of the Chamber of Commerce, speaks tomorrow afternoon on "Los Angeles Manufactured Foodstuffs." The series concludes Wednesday with a demonstration of canning and drying by Mrs. Jessica C. Hazzard of the local home gardens headquarters.

The regular fall session opens September 10. Feature courses in engineering will be offered.

ON FREIGHT RATES.

Chairman Hamilton of the Board of Supervisors yesterday conferred with a delegation from the Santa Fe, Salt Lake, Southern Pacific and the Pacific Electric with reference to county freight rates. The delegation represented the traffic managers of the various railroads. The county agents, Bishop and Bahler, have filed a petition for a refund on the shipment of rock. They have handled these shipments for the county since 1907. The refund amounts approximately to several thousand dollars.

Women Love Babies

It is woman's nature to naturally respond to the charm of a pretty child. Who does not admire babies? The longing to possess a baby is often outweighed by the inherent fear of the period of distress.

There is a most wonderful external preparation known as "Mother's Friend."

It is a safe external massage which relieves pain and discomfort at the crisis; makes elastic those fibers and muscles which nature is expanding, and wonderfully soothes the inflammation of breast glands.

It enables the expectant mother to preserve her health and strength, and she remains a pretty mother by having avoided the suffering and danger which would otherwise accompany such an occasion. Every nerve, muscle and tendon is thoroughly lubricated. Get a bottle today from the druggist, and write to the Bradfield Regulator Co., Dept. G, 200 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga. They will mail you an intensely interesting little book, "Motherhood and the Baby." The book is free. Every woman should herself aid nature in her glorious work. "Mother's Friend" makes it possible for you to do so and should be used regularly without fail night and morning.

Millionaire Naval Recruits Meet Some Gymnastics.

Discover Swedish Movements and Learn to Like Them.

Man an Old Bark and Help to Make a Picture Play.

Millionaire yachtsmen who enlisted in the Naval Coast Defense Reserve have always been classed among the best amateur athletes, but it has remained for George LaVallette, a seaman ranking as quartermaster at the harbor naval training station, to show them what real training is like.

Seaman LaVallette has been detailed to put the men through Swedish exercises to develop their muscles. Judging from reports that come from the men he is doing it right. Those who have gone through the vaccination stage and recovered from the epidemic of sore arms have accustomed themselves to the exercises, and they say they like it.

The Swedish exercises are the last word in strenuous calisthenics. As boys many of the men took calisthenics in school and elsewhere, but most of them are going through the work under orders of Quartermaster LaVallette have a healthy respect for the Swedish system introduced in the navy. The exercise includes various movements of the body that to the younger men are not so strenuous, but which to the older men are hard work.

MORE MEN DUE.

There are now 800 men at the training station at the outer harbor, taking courses in the various branches of seamanship. It is expected that nearly 400 more will arrive during the coming week. This will make the full complement for this station with present facilities. While all the classes are not in working order thus far, the inspection and muster yesterday were such that the men were highly complimented by the commanding officers. Fine progress is being made, both on land and in boats. There are being drilled nine companies of fifty-eight men each, in command of a lieutenant and two ensigns.

The land work includes the regular infantry drill, which is given on the fine wide boulevard just back of the training station. For the work on the water the lifeboats of the wrecked coast guard steamer McCulloch are utilized, along with a number of private yachts and launches which have been tendered the government by their owners.

HELP FILM ACTORS.

Some of the men have been given some practical work in handling a big ship during the past week. The old barkentine Fremont, in the outer harbor, has been used to take some motion pictures, and the recruits at the naval training station were given an opportunity to man the vessel.

The training is done by members of the crew on the McCulloch, who were detailed to the station following the wreck of the vessel. Most of the crew has been ordered north to man a new vessel. Whether this vessel will be sent here is not known, but in the meantime it is understood that several coast guard yachts will be manned by crews from the local station.

Automobile Caravan of Anti-saloon Workers Goes to San Diego and will Today Begin Drive to Oust Barleycorn from the Southern City.

D. M. Gandier, superintendent of the California Anti-Saloon League, with a number of supporters, left yesterday afternoon by automobile for San Diego, where a fight for a dry city will be started today. In each of the larger churches of San Diego the campaign will be outlined this morning and the proposed ordinance will be circulated in the congregations.

"Dry as a bone" is the statement of Dr. Gandier regarding the ordinance. The campaign will be based partly on the fact that the army camp at Linda Vista is now being organized.

Dr. Charles Edward Locke of the First Methodist Church of this city is in the party; Dr. A. C. Bane, national Anti-Saloon League financial secretary; Prof. W. M. Burke of Occidental College, R. H. Young and Miss Ida Green of the California Anti-Saloon League.

He told Police Surgeon Stookey yesterday morning that he was attacked by a wild woman near Vernon. His face was much lacerated and he went to the Receiving Hospital for treatment. He feared that blood poison or tetanus might set in. He did not tell the doctor why he was attacked.

As Age Creeps, He Seeks the Warmer Altitudes.

W. L. Thwing, who is registered at the Angelus Hotel, can very well qualify as the somewhat mythical world-citizen. Nor is he an I.W.W., nor an internationalist in politics.

Mr. Thwing journeyed around the world when he was 20 years old, and hasn't stopped going since. The fact that he is 82 years old shows in connection with the previous statement that Mr. Thwing is a globe-trotter of sorts.

In his declining years he has eschewed the colder climes and sought the warmer sections. Last winter he spent in Havana, the one before in Tunis. Yesterday he had his passport renewed, and will be leaving soon for the Orient. He will winter in Manila.

Years ago he used to make a sort of headquarters in Boston. But that was long ago, and when he registers now he can write it simply "W. L. Thwing, the World." He has two nieces in England, but they are his only relatives, and he says he has no use at all for the climate of the tight little isle.

Despite his life in the far places of the earth, the venerable gentleman is not much of a linguist. He has picked up many languages in a way, but only out of phrase books, and for the purposes of making his wants known. He has spent a month in Los Angeles and likes Southern California immensely, but he says he "must be getting on."

NEEDS OF WAR SEND HARBOR AHEAD UNDER FORCED DRAFT.

THAT Los Angeles Harbor is destined to be the location of concerns of large magnitude and to take an important place in the commerce of the Pacific long has been conceded. That this state of affairs is to come about much more rapidly than was deemed possible only a short while ago is daily being confirmed by events predicated on the entrance of the United States into the European war.

Under the forced draft of war necessities, shipyards of magnitude are under construction, and the smaller yards are rushing their work at full capacity. The fish-canning and packing industry is developing into large proportions, with the products' value running into the millions of dollars. The lumber industry has made this port one of large significance, and its volume is sustained by the great area of territory supplied from this distributing point. Other industries are planned or already under way, and the general industrial development in the harbor district on wide lines is assured.

Clarence E. Matson, secretary and traffic manager of the harbor board, recently laid before the Federal Shipping Board at Washington a plan by which the government would co-operate with Los Angeles in establi[illegible] a line of ships to operate [illegible]en this city and the Orient.

WILL BE CONSIDERED.

Assurance [illegible] been given that as soon as the [illegible] of war conditions has abated, the board will be glad to further consider the particular project presented, and that its purpose is to co-operate with Los Angeles in the general development of water commerce.

The primary project which took Mr. Matson to Washington and other eastern cities and where he spent three weeks in advancing the harbor interests, was to secure aid in the establishment of the proposed Los Angeles-Orient steamer line. In his statement to the Federal Shipping Board, Mr. Matson sets forth the following facts:

1. It is the policy of the Federal government to foster and develop an American merchant marine, to the end that the United States may never again find itself in the position it occupied at the outbreak of the European war, when practically all the transportation of our foreign trade was in the hands of foreign nations, and when, with the withdrawal of foreign ships from carrying our commerce, we found ourselves cut off from those who wanted our goods and from whom we wished to make purchases.

It will also be necessary for the Federal government to do its utmost to foster an American merchant marine if we are to hold the markets which we have recently gained.

Immediate action also is necessary to meet the transportation emergencies which have arisen in the last few weeks.

2. In order to aid in building an American merchant marine, your honorable board has been established by act of Congress to study, foster and regulate water-borne commerce. An appropriation of $50,000,000 also has been given to your honorable board with authority to invest it in financing American shipping. It can exercise this power by organizing corporations with the government holding all or a majority of the stock, to run until five years after the close of the war. These corporations will have power to construct, purchase or lease ships for the American merchant marine under certain restrictions.

FINANCE OPERATION.

3. Such ships may then be chartered, leased or sold to American citizens for operation under the American flag.

4. This plan wisely allows the Federal government, through your honorable board, practically to finance steamship operations for the American merchant marine in the present shipping crisis, and in the trade war which students of economics believe will follow the close of the present war.

In the past it has been a problem whether American ships could compete successfully with British, Norwegian, Japanese and other nationalities in the carrying trade, and the plan adopted by Congress makes possible the demonstration of this problem. This will be somewhat in the nature of an experiment, but, I believe, a successful one.

(5.) The charter of the city of Los Angeles provides, among the powers of the municipality, the following:

"To acquire by purchase, lease, condemnation, or otherwise, or construct, and to own, maintain, equip and operate, telephone systems and telegraph systems, or other means of communication; also street railways, railroads and interurban railroads, steamships, steamboats, sailing vessels, ferries, or other means of conveyance, by land or water, between points within the city limits, or from points within to points without the city limits, either within or without the State of California, for the purpose of transporting passengers or freight, or either."

This provision, you will note, allows the city of Los Angeles to charter steamships for operation on an extensive scale.

(6.) It is my proposition that the city of Los Angeles co-operate with the Federal government in the establishment of a permanent trans-Pacific steamship line to the Orient along the following plan:

LEASE TO CITY.

(a) The Federal Shipping Board to furnish, either by construction or otherwise, the necessary vessels for such a line, leasing such vessels to the city of Los Angeles for a term extending until five years after the close of the European war.

(b) Such lease to be made upon the basis of a division of the net earnings, to be agreed upon.

(c) The city to have the option of purchasing such ships at their original value or cost to the government; provided, however, that the net earnings received by the government, less interest, shall be applied to such purchase price.

(d) The city to have the option either of operating the line itself municipally, or subleasing it to private interests, but in either event, of course, under the jurisdiction of the Federal Shipping Board.

(7.) This would mean, in effect, that the Federal government would finance the undertaking until five years after the close of the war, and the city, possibly co-operating with private interests, would undertake the burden of operation and the development of trade. The Federal Shipping Board would have jurisdiction over rates and service, and the application of the Federal navigation laws, and therefore the financing of the project would be the government's just share of the experiment.

(8.) If it is demonstrated, during the five years after the close of the war, that American shipping can successfully compete with the shipping of other nations, there will be no difficulty in private capital—or the city—making the necessary financial arrangement to reimburse the government for its investment in the ships.

Supplementing the above, Mr. Matson said:

"My original idea was to plan this line with a view to the constantly increasing commerce of China and Malaysia—including the Philippine Islands—for which ships very probably would have to be built. Many months would be necessary for construction and to make necessary traffic arrangements.

AVOID GREAT WASTE.

"But recent developments make it imperative that shipping should be conserved, both on the Atlantic and on the Pacific, and at the present time there is a great economic waste in shipping, which could be avoided by carrying out at once the plan suggested above.

"For instance: For several months there has been a large tonnage of commerce moving from New York through the Panama Canal, almost immediately past the door of Los Angeles to Vladivostok, Japan, Shanghai and other points in the Orient.

"This commerce is carried principally in British bottoms, with Japanese vessels second, and occasional Norwegian and Danish ships.

"In the present shortage of shipping, the time of these ships for the three or four weeks in running from New York to Los Angeles is worth far more than the export freight rates by rail would be across the country, and there is a loss of time in the shipment of goods.

"For example, shipments for Vladivostok or Shanghai, frequently originating in the interior, are shipped to New York by rail, adding to the congestion there, both of railroad yards and of piers. After considerable delay because of this congestion, the shipments are loaded into vessels, and from twenty-five to thirty days later, are at some point in the Pacific off Los Angeles.

ESCAPE RAIL RATE.

"If the shipments were sent by rail across to Los Angeles, they would escape the rail rate from point of origin to New York, and the transcontinental export rate to Los Angeles is less than the value of the time of the ship per ton from New York to a point off Los Angeles. The rail haul could be accomplished in fifteen to twenty days, and there would be no congestion at Los Angeles. Frequently the shipment would be on board ship at Los Angeles as soon as it would be on the ship it sent by way of New York, and it would be approximately one month closer to its destination. So much from the standpoint of the cargo.

"From the standpoint of the ship—and this is still more important—a vessel could make almost two round trips between Los Angeles and Vladivostok or Shanghai in the time necessary for a round trip between New York and the Orient. In other words, the carrying power of the ship would be almost doubled.

"The city of Los Angeles has prepared itself to take care of commerce by the construction of great harbor facilities and it now desires to co-operate with the government in building up the American merchant marine on the Pacific."

WILL HELP PACIFIC.

Members of the Federal Shipping Board were deeply interested in Mr. Matson's information regarding shipments going to the Orient, and, on request, he prepared a detailed statement of these shipments covering the first six weeks of 1917. As a result, he was informed that the British commissioners were urged to see that Vladivostok shipments hereafter are taken at Pacific ports instead of Atlantic, and when American ships are ready for trans-Pacific commerce Los Angeles will get its share, other things being equal.

While in Washington Mr. Matson learned that a large amount of coal may be shipped to the Pacific Coast during the ensuing year, probably for both coaling ships and for export. He visited Norfolk, Va., to inspect the coal-handling facilities, and, among other things, learned that the Italian government is paying $38 a ton for Norfolk coal, although the coal itself costs only $3.25 a ton on board ship. The rest of the cost goes into transportation. This, Mr. Matson sets forth, shows the desirability of shipping coal to the Pacific Coast by rail instead of water, under present conditions, whether designed for export or for coaling ships on this coast.

In his report to the Harbor Commission he has urged that the Los Angeles Harbor be provided with coaling facilities as soon as practicable, as there are possibilities for building up a large adjunct to the port's business through this means.

NORTHWEST'S SHIPYARDS HUM WITH ACTIVITIES.

WITH the wooden vessel apparently come back to its own, the Pacific Northwest, that has produced its lumber schooners and its pine-ribbed "windjammers" even when steel was at the apogee of its ascendency, is preparing to gather in a formidable share of the business of giving America a great merchant marine. Numerous yards and trained shipwrights are there, many new construction contracts have been let, and Seattle and Portland seem destined to give Los Angeles her hardest rub in the competition for shipbuilding honors on this Coast.

Douglas fir, Oregon's famous timber, is approved as a material for shipbuilding, as Maine's pine was in clipper-ship days. Eastern concerns are calling on Oregon mills for quotations on timbers of the sort that will go into the new submarine chasers and blockade runners. Even though many building contracts go elsewhere, Oregon's woods are expected to yield much wealth.

Moreover, Portland shipbuilders now have representatives in the East, busily engaged in swinging as much work as possible to the Northwest. Work on many contracts is under way there and at other Oregon points. The censorship makes it impossible to give a list of these contracts.

PERFORMERS JAILED.

Seven Women are Arrested at Main-street Theaters on Charges of Lewdness; Separate Trials by Jury are Demanded as All Give Bail.

Seven women were arrested yesterday morning in various Main-street theaters, as a part of a campaign to clear the city of undesirable shows and persons. The women were arraigned before Police Judge White and released on $50 bail each. Each demanded a separate jury trial and they will be tried September 19 by Justice White. The charges against the women are lewdness and indecency.

The names of the women and the places where they were arrested are as follows: Mrs. Marie Cortes and Mrs. Sophie Pickard, No. 529 South Main street; Miss Frances Cooper and Miss Clara Broadway, No. 253 South Main street; Mrs. Julia Burns, No. 256 South Main street, and Mrs. Florence Gammon and Miss Babe Wood, No. 312 South Main street.

The arrests were made by representatives of the City Prosecutor's office.

TO CLOSE STREET.

The Baker Iron Works yesterday requested the Board of Public Works to close the south side of Third street between Broadway and Hill street until steel for the roof of the auditorium in the Business Stability Building is raised. It was stated that the work may endanger the lives of pedestrians.

BUILDINGS FINISHED.

The buildings of the plant already completed are the plate shop, the mill, the blacksmith shop, the machine shop, the forge building, the warehouse, the garage, the compressor plant, the transformer house, the plate and shape storage building and the offices. The tool building is being finished. The machine shop is 400x100 feet, the plate and storage building, 600x100 feet, the warehouse 350x100 feet and the plate shop 300x100 feet. A boiler house 200x100 feet is to be started at once. Machinery for the equipment of all the buildings has either been set up or is on the ground ready for installation.

The dredgers are now concentrating their attention on the deepening of the fitting out basin, to which will be brought the vessels after launching. At the same time work is being started on the fitting out dock, a great wharf 500 feet long by 50 feet in width beside which will be anchored the empty hulls when they are ready for their equipment and machinery. A pile driver is working night and day driving the supports for this structure.

The dock will be equipped about half the distance out from shore with a huge derrick or sheer leg having a lifting capacity of 150 tons. A track will run out and through the legs of this derrick and on this will run flat cars carrying twenty-ton cranes. These will convey and deposit all excepting the heaviest machinery going into the hull. The sheer leg crane will handle the large pieces of equipment, the vessel being run back and forth alongside the dock to receive them.

One of the interesting features of the plant is an extensive overhead tramway system for the handling of plates and ribs and other material going into the hulls of the vessels being laid down on the building slips. The cables used in the system are supported by tall poles, each made from a single large tree trunk. There are thirty of these poles, each 150 feet long, on the ground or set up for use. Two, yet to be set up, are 175 feet long. The smaller ones are as high as a twelve-story building and weigh eighteen tons each, having a base diameter of forty-two inches. Nearly a score of hoisting engines will furnish the motive power for swinging the pulley tramways that travel between these huge uprights.

ARMY EMPLOYED.

Eleven hundred men are now employed about the plant, 400 of these being on the pay roll of the company itself and the rest in the employ of the dredging companies and other concerns handling contracts for the shipbuilding corporation. A force of soldiers has been stationed at the plant by the government to keep out intruders and to guard against the possible machinations of enemy spies. The plant has its own complete commissary.

The plans of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Drydock Company contemplate the eventual outlay of several millions of dollars on the plant and its equipment. The portion of the seventy-acre tract now being utilized by the company adjoins the Standard Oil Company's reservation on Smith's Island and is a short distance north of the bascule bridge across the West Basin Channel. The thirty-five acres or more remaining will, according to officials of the shipbuilding company, all be used eventually for shipbuilding purposes. Plans have already been prepared for a 15,000-ton drydock 750 feet long and ninety feet wide to be built at a future date, as well as for additional building slips and new buildings. The company expects, upon the completion of its government contracts, to engage in a general shipbuilding business on a large scale, eventually employing thousands of men and maintaining one of the great plants of its kind in the country.

The directors of the company are: Stoddard Jess, president of the First National Bank; J. F. Sartori, president of the Security Trust and Savings Bank; Dan Murphy, local capitalist and oil man; Fred L. Baker, head of the Baker Ironworks, and S. L. Naphtaly, a capitalist who recently came here from San Francisco to make his home. Mr. Baker is president and treasurer of the company and Mr. Naphtaly is vice-president and general manager. Fred A. Gardner is the general superintendent and chief engineer. Roy Calvery has charge of all designing and draughting work.

LOCAL COMPOSER'S SONATA PLEASES.

A tribute to the work of a rarely gifted local composer was paid at a delightful private musicale last Thursday evening at George J. Birkel Company's recital hall. The composer was Harold Webster, and he found an able spokesman for his work in Sigmund Beel, the concert master of the Symphony Orchestra, who played his new violin sonata, with Mrs. M. Hennion Robinson assisting at the piano. Mrs. L. J. Selby, contralto, gave an exceedingly beautiful rendition of several of Mr. Webster's songs. Webster's sonata was voted an interesting achievement.

Reserve Bank Bulletin Shows its Great Activity.

Will Soon Equal Agriculture of the Entire West.

General Business Conditions of Coast Reviewed.

A news bulletin of the Federal Reserve Bank of the Twelfth District, dated the 1st inst., in discussing general business conditions says in part:

"Between May 1 and June 20 the total deposits in the national banks of the eight reserve cities of this district declined $14,300,000, showing a decrease of $3,200,000 in Los Angeles, $9,400,000 in San Francisco, $300,000 in Portland, $1,100,000 in Spokane, $500,000 in Ogden and $900,000 in Seattle. Increases were shown by the banks in Salt Lake and Tacoma. This shows the effect of checking for investment in Liberty bonds and for all other purposes. Excluding deposits from other banks, however, a slight net increase is shown, those of San Francisco and Los Angeles alone showing a decrease—slightly more than $1,000,000 in each city. Between the statements of March 5 and June 20, the State banks of California show an increase in deposits of $863,000.

"Bank clearings of nineteen principal cities of this district during the first six months of 1917 increased 38 per cent. over the corresponding period last year, Salt Lake leading with 53 per cent., followed by Seattle with 45 per cent., and San Francisco, 44 per cent.

CROPS' STATUS.

"Recent high temperatures in Southern California reached the extraordinary maximum of 118 deg. at some points. Citrus fruit was unfavorably affected, particularly navel oranges, which mature about December, the damage being estimated as high as 75 per cent., with 50 to 60 per cent. damage estimated for Valencia oranges and 35 per cent. for lemons. Beans, olives and walnuts have likewise suffered somewhat. Hot winds in Washington and Oregon, coming at a critical time, have also somewhat curtailed the crop of wheat. Subsequent rains and cool weather in these two States have been helpful. Incidentally, Luther Burbank, the famous agricultural scientist, after ten years' experimenting, announces the development of a variety of wheat which is said to yield from fifty to seventy bushels per acre. Aside from the shrinkages mentioned, the general production of foodstuffs in this district is confirming the previous prediction of a large increase over last year. The July 1 government report, for instance, estimates for Idaho, Oregon, Washington and California 44,000,000 bushels of potatoes, compared with 32,000,000 last year. Barley in California estimated at 1,000,000 tons will double last year's production. In Utah, Oregon, Idaho and Nevada t probably 30,000 acres of more than ever before.

Merchant Marine.

REVIVAL OF OLD OCEAN TRIUMPHS IS EXPECT

OBSERVERS of developments in shipping circles believe America by force of circumstances is destined to become again a great maritime nation—perhaps, as she once was, the greatest.

Many thousands of Americans still remember when vessels under the United States flag were the fastest and finest that sailed the seas, and the Stars and Stripes were known and respected in every port of consequence on the globe. Moreover, every American remembers when, only yesterday, this nation's ensign was one of the rarest sights a foreign maritime city could offer.

This was the world's greatest maritime nation when the clipper ship was in her heyday, before iron and steel became the almost universal materials for hulls and before tramp steamers—sluggish warehouses afloat, with cheap crews of Lascars or Hindus or Chinese—had made a square-rigger, with a large crew of able seamen and a skipper who could drive her along almost on steamboat time, more or less of a white elephant.

Historians of America's merchant marine-that-was point out that the clipper-ship era, with all its romance, reached its apogee because of an epochal event in the national life—the gold rush to California. Before that shrewd Yankees of the New England States had "taken off" the lines of a wrecked French vessel (the French built the best sailers of a century and a quarter ago) and had improved on the model with such success that United States clippers outsailed every other craft afloat. But the great incentive that produced the finest vessels was the competition incited by California gold. With high cargo rates and with passengers to carry, a vessel sometimes much more than paid for herself with one trip around the Horn from Boston or New York to San Francisco. And the ships that could make the long passage in the least time paid the most. There was a tremendous premium on seamanship and on skill in the construction of vessels, and for a few years Americans built, manned and sailed square riggers of such sort that their performances stand by sailing vessels today.

The Whittall Rug Mills at Worcester Sold $240,000 Worth of Fine Rugs to America's Largest Stores (Only One in a City)

The Broadway Secured $10,000.00 Worth of

Fine Rugs at 'Way Less

On Sale for the First Time Monday

—The Whittall Rug and Carpet Mills are celebrated from Coast to Coast, and in every continent, where Rugs are sold.

—Once a year they dispose of their vast surplus, including Rugs which are to be discontinued, and it is the custom to dispose of these Rugs to a few of America's biggest stores.

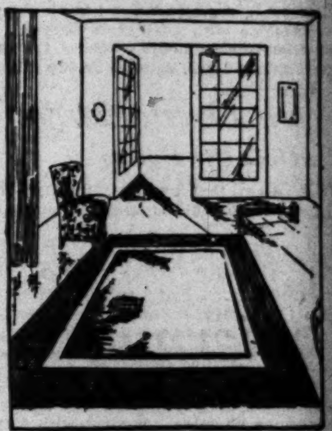
—This year, perhaps for the first time, the assortment was distributed to the largest stores of America, not more than one in a city and The Broadway was fortunate to secure $10,000 worth for Los Angeles.

—We cannot too enthusiastically urge you to see these Rugs.

—In the first place, each pattern was selected with particular care, that we might have the very designs and colorings that would be most acceptable to the Los Angeles public.

—These Rugs, in all their richness and beauty and first freshness, are now being unpacked, as this is written and brought forward, that you may share in the savings.

—We emphasize the beauty of the rugs, the patterns and the fact that most of them are in matched sets from the largest to the smallest rugs—that all are perfect, and that these are from mills that are known wherever fine rugs are sold.



—You, who have homes to refurnish.
—You, who are contemplating the furnishing of apartments.
—Hotel proprietors.
—This opportunity is, to our way of thinking, unprecedented and should be a magnet to attract every one, with a rug need, who reads this news.

Every Camp to Have Ample Supply of Books.

Campaign Soon to Start for Public Donations.

The librarians of the country have placed themselves in line with other bodies of professional men who are putting their expert knowledge and experience at the disposal of their country.

A committee of war service for libraries was appointed by the American Library Association at its recent annual meeting at Louisville, Ky. This committee is about to launch a campaign to raise $500,000 for the service in which it is interested. One of its immediate aims is to provide well-equipped and properly-administered public library buildings for each one of the sixteen cantonments of the national army, soon to be formed.

It has been recognized by the Commission on Camp Activities, a government body, as the principal agency through which books are to be distributed to the soldiers. Other distributing agencies located in the buildings of the Y.M.C.A., the Knights of Columbus, the Red Cross, and possibly others, will be related to the main building of the camp somewhat as deposit stations in schools and industrial houses are related to the central public library of a city.

The library buildings will be of wood, but a single story in height, containing one large open-shelf room surrounded by books, together with smaller reference and study-rooms, work-rooms for the staff and possibly living quarters.

The business of furnishing books to camps, although the first object of the committee, is of course not the only kind of war service that it will organize among the librarians and libraries. It has already appointed a subcommittee on the dissemination of knowledge regarding the food situation, consisting of experts in the United States Agricultural Department and in various State universities, and also a subcommittee to arrange for a nationwide library war service week.

A vigorous campaign to raise funds and to ask for donations of books will be launched as soon as the plans of the committee admit. Local libraries will be given the principal part in the collection and culling of books, and it is expected that many of the railroads will offer to transport books free to the public libraries at the cantonments.

Next Year's Solar Eclipse.

An article by Edison Pettit of the Washburn College observatory shows that the eclipse next year will be a return of that of May 28, 1900, i.e., the intervening interval is the ancient eclipse cycle, or Saros, of eighteen years and eleven and one-third days. Accordingly, while the 1900 eclipse occurred about 8 a.m., that of 1918 will occur about 4 p.m. (on an average for the whole country.) The duration of totality is about the same in the two eclipses; namely, a minute and a half. The 1918 eclipse will begin when the moon's shadow strikes the earth on the little island of Borodino, off the coast of Japan, at sunrise, June 9, 1918. It will then sweep eastward, and after a lapse of two hours and fifteen minutes will arrive at the mouth of the Columbia River, Washington, June 8, at 2:25 p.m., Pacific time, when it will be going at a speed of thirty-three miles a minute. It will cross the Mississippi River at 5:37 o'clock, central time, and leave the coast of Florida at 6:42, eastern time. The diagonal journey across the United States will take forty-seven minutes. Mr. Pettit suggests that in case one of the eclipse parties in the Western States should discover anything of novel interest, such as an apparent intromercurial planet, the fact could be telegraphed to other parties along the track of the eclipse in ample time to have the discovery checked by other observations. Some eighty-five towns, all accessible by rail, lie along the path of totality.

To Register Trouble-makers.

[Portland Oregonian:] Maryland has a law which may soon dispose of idle, wandering trouble-makers. It requires the registration on or before August 20 of all men between 18 and 50 "not then regularly employed in any lawful or useful business, occupation, trade or profession of any kind." The penalty for evasion is $50, or imprisonment if the fine is not paid. After registration the Governor is to assign the idlers to work, and the penalty for disregarding the assignment is $500 fine or six months' imprisonment. Only students, apprentices, "persons temporarily unemployed by reason of differences with their employers" and persons engaged in seasonal occupations are exempt. If this law should be enforced, the tramp orators and brakebeam tourists will shun Maryland.

TRY AN UPPER BERTH, FRIEND.

Thus You will Help Railroads to Supply Equipment for Country's Needs.

"Try an upper berth; you'll like it."

This invitation is being spread broad-cast by western railroads as a war measure intended to avoid the necessity of hauling two partially-filled coaches instead of one loaded to capacity.

Present conditions demand the full use of every bit of railroad equipment in the country and railroad men see no reason why the "uppers" should not be as much favored as the "lowers."

The upper berth costs 20 per cent. less than a lower; noise of the wheels is not so annoying; the upper is away from people moving in the aisles and the ventilation is excellent.

PLANT POTATOES FOR FALL CROPS.

ADVICE OF COUNTY COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

Expert Declares Growers will not Only be Helping to Solve the Food Problem, but Probably will Receive Good Prices—Exceptional Advantage Offered.

Farmers and home gardeners are advised by W. S. Rosecrans of the Foodstuffs Committee of the County Council of Defense to plant fall potatoes. Indications are that they will command a good price. They are now selling higher than ever before for this time of the year, and people who do plant will not only be helping to solve the food problem, but should receive a fair return for their time and expense.

California has the unique position of being able to raise two crops a year, and should go the limit in taking advantage of the situation. While the acreage planted to spring potatoes was larger than usual, the crop was not considerably increased owing to the decreased yield per acre due to the continued dry spell.

Growers having seed potatoes to sell, or needing them for planting, are asked to communicate their requirements to the Foodstuffs Committee at defense headquarters, No. 719 South Hill street; phones, Main 9404 and A3277. Location of potatoes should be given, the kind and the length of time out of the ground. Growers are cautioned about planting potatoes which have been dug less than six weeks.

IN SEARCH OF BOHEMIA.

Pathetic Attempts to be Artistic as Seen in New York.

[Irving Cobb in the Saturday Evening Post:] Some folk regard it as being Bohemian to eat a 60-cent dinner once so often in a restaurant down in a sub-basement on the Lower West Side. Some think it to be Bohemian by encouraging their dandruff and slighting their teeth. Some seek to achieve the delectable state of Bohemianism by wearing soft collars and loose, black neckties, very Roycrofty; some by professing mildly anarchistic tendencies, or by leaning to Socialism, or by favoring the latest and most advanced and, therefore, the most radical, wrinkles in art, the drama or literature; or by attending a costume ball once in a while; or by residing in a studio apartment, which differs from any other top-floor room in the downtown district in that it has a skylight in the roof top instead of windows and is ventilated on the principle of a slot machine.

Many novices serve their apprenticeship by defying the conventions in dress and manners; and many more—a goodly lot of these last—by acquiring membership in a club frequented by actors, or artists, or newspaper men, or all three, not knowing, in their ignorance, that real artists almost without exception are smart business men who dress and behave unostentatiously, and that actors, as a class, are the most conventionally-minded persons in the world. Actors in their hours of ease would rather go to the country and put on overalls and raise chickens and fuss about vegetable gardens than do anything else imaginable. Their vocation condemns them to live in a world of make-believe a good part of the time; when they can they like to hark back to what is natural and simple. As for newspaper men, they are a breed greatly changed from their professional predecessors of the old days. These times a newspaper is not a whit readier to sign up a brilliant man who drinks and leads a dissipated life than a bank would be.

Fumigation.

CITRUS GROWERS READY TO WAGE WAR ON SCALE.

Within the next ten days the fumigation gangs in the citrus districts of Southern California will begin waging their annual campaign against the black, red and purple scale.

Francis G. Wyman of Claremont, manager of the Growers' Fumigation and Supply Company, which handled about 75 per cent. of the fumigation in the Pomona Valley, says the growers have an opportunity this fall to almost free their groves from scale. The hot wave about the middle of June burned up millions of scale eggs and killed wagonloads of adult scale. The weather would have made clean the trees but for the fact that many scale eggs, which were hidden from the sun during the hottest days, have since hatched and started new colonies.

There will be more fumigation in the citrus districts this year than during any previous season. New co-operative fumigating associations have been formed in recent months by growers at Corona, Fullerton and Orange. They will buy their tents, cyanide, sulphuric acid and other supplies in great quantities, and in that way greatly diminish the usual cost of treating their trees with hydrocyanic acid gas. In the Pomona Valley a liquid gas which is a byproduct of ice factories will be used experimentally in some of the groves. The greatest claim made for the liquid gas is that it can be taken into the groves in containers no larger than any ordinary fire extinguisher, whereas by the old gas system it is necessary to haul a tank down the tree middles with a team of horses, and much fruit is knocked off in that way.

The expense of fumigating will be about the same this year as last, the increase in cost since the war being from 1 to 3 cents a tree in some districts, depending upon the sort of contracts the fumigators have been able to make in purchasing cyanide. Under ordinary conditions the co-operative growers have their fumigating done for from 21 to 22 cents per bearing tree.

ENORMOUS CALL FOR SUPPLIES.

Many Bids will be Opened by Government this Month.

Western Quartermasters Ask for Numerous Articles.

Specifications may be Seen at the Local Depot.

It was announced yesterday at the office of the local depot quartermaster, No. 425 Central Building, that the department quartermaster, Santa Fe Building, San Francisco, will receive the following sealed proposals for furnishing government supplies:

Until 11 a.m., the 13th inst., for furnishing wood, gasoline, distillate, mineral oil and smithing coal, required at the camps in the Western Department. Deliveries to begin immediately after awards.

For fresh beef to be furnished during September at Camp Kearney, Linda Vista. Bids will be opened at 11 a.m., the 15th inst.

Until 11 a.m., the 10th inst., for forage and bedding required at the camps at Linda Vista, Menlo Park and American Lake.

Schedules and specifications may be examined at the local quartermaster's office.

The depot quartermaster at Fort Mason, San Francisco, will receive these proposals:

Until 10 a.m., the 7th inst., miscellaneous supplies, including hardware, tin and chinaware, stove pipe, brushes, canvas, fuse, tools and other items.

Until 10 a.m., the 9th inst., covering miscellaneous supplies — hardware, fire hose, leather, pipe and nipples, packing, electrical supplies and springs.

Until 10 a.m., the 13th inst., covering miscellaneous supplies, automobile accessories and hardware.

Until 11 a.m., the 10th inst., covering potatoes and onions for shipment to Alaska.

Until 10 a.m., the 23rd inst., covering 3000 iron bedsteads. Alternate proposals will be entertained for bedsteads differing from those described in the government specifications.

Because a schedule contains a larger quantity of an item than a bidder can furnish does not exclude him from bidding. The quartermaster desires bids on any partial quantity.

Commerce Reports, No. 170, dated July 23, contains a complete list of articles for which export licenses are required. A copy may be obtained at the local quartermaster's office.

STARS AID FIGHTERS.

Stage and Screen Favorites Make Comedies Gratis for Relief.

Prominent actors and actresses of the legitimate stage, as well as the films, who find their way to Chicago are doing a part of their "bit" to aid in the war while in the Windy City. They are giving their services gratis for the making of a series of comedy films, the profits of which will go to the American Military Relief Association. This series is running under the title of "Follies of the Week," and is being made by the Follies of the Week Company, Inc., of which Cullom Holme Farrell is the head. They are being released by the Titan Film Company, Frederick Russell Clark, president.

Raymond Hitchcock had the honor of playing the lead in the first reel which is entitled "Knocking the Lout of the H.C.L." He was ably assisted by members of his "Betty" company.

The second picture, entitled "He Could Dance with Everybody, but His Wife," is now in the making, and will be completed this week. Josephine Harriman of the "Very Good Eddie" company, is playing the lead. She is assisted by Earl Coleman.

The third picture will be made next week by McIntyre and Heath. The Follies of the Week Company intends to make one of these pictures each week. The first will be released the latter part of May.

The American Military Relief Association has for its purpose the furnishing of candy, cigars, cigarettes, chocolates and other comforts to the soldiers and sailors of the United States Army and Navy in the field. These specialties are not furnished by the Red Cross or any other organization.

In Military Medicine.

[Boston Transcript:] The Harvard Medical School is raising a fund of $100,000 to establish a department of military medicine. The department will be the first in any college in the country. Already a considerable amount has been raised towards the endowment, the work being in the hands of the Massachusetts Medical Society, which has appointed a committee to have charge of securing funds.

Robert I. Eustis,
Explaining the functions of his hub housing for an airplane propeller that makes it possible for the aviator to shift the angle of the blades at will, and so get the maximum "pull" even under the most rarified of atmospheric conditions.

Innovation.

UP NEARLY A MILE IN TWO MINUTES.

NEW AIRCRAFT PROPELLER IS HIGHLY PRAISED.

Invented by a Local Man, it Can be Adjusted for Pulling Power to Meet Exactly Every Atmospheric Condition at Different Altitudes, He Believes.

An adjustable pitch airplane propeller capable of lifting an aircraft at the rate of 2000 feet a minute, as well as increasing its efficiency fully 25 per cent., was successfully tried out here yesterday afternoon. Local aviators declare the device will guarantee America's contemplated supremacy aloft.

The new type of propeller is the invention of Robert I. Eustis, an employee of the Los Angeles plant of the Wright-Martin Aircraft Corporation, and is designed to serve aircraft in a manner similar to that accomplished by the shifting of gears of a motor car. The blades are mounted on an aluminum hub, which houses the mechanism by which their angles may be changed by the pilot at will while the plane is in flight. The aviator is thus enabled to adjust the pulling power of his propeller in exact accordance with the varying atmospheric conditions at different altitudes.

In the test flights conducted by Earl S. Dougherty, the plane left the ground like a bird in the remarkably short distance of forty-three feet. Then, without increasing the speed of the motor, the angle of the blades was changed after an elevation of 6000 feet had been reached. The speed of the plane immediately jumped from sixty to ninety miles an hour. With increased motor speeds the new propeller showed an even relatively increased efficiency.

According to Mr. Dougherty and several North Island birdmen who witnessed the trial flights, the new propeller renders antique all models now in use. It marks an epoch, they declare, in a new era of aeronautic development heretofore unattainable.

Patriotic.

RUSSIAN TO SERVE WITH CANADIANS.

WANTS TO FIGHT, BUT WON'T JOIN REVOLUTIONISTS.

Reputed Member of the Slav Nobility, a Giant, Enlists Here and will Leave for Vancouver with a Batch of Recruits Tomorrow. Hindu Also "Takes On."

Vincent A. Stefankevich, who says he is a member of the Russian nobility, will fight for his native land but refuses to join his countrymen now on the eastern front, whom he classifies as I.W.W.

So Mr. Stefankevich enlisted yesterday for service with the Canadian forces and will leave tomorrow for Vancouver, with the squad which Sergt.-Maj. Matier, the local recruiting officer, is to send north then.

Mr. Stefankevich, who is a giant in stature, well lives up to the symbol of his race, the Russian bear. He fought with Kuropatkin against the Japanese. He says he is a younger son of a noble Russian family and resides at the Burlington Hotel.

Many men of many nations find their way into the British and Canadian recruiting office, which is in the San Fernando Building. Following Mr. Stefankevich came Abbas Alee, a native of Calcutta, India. He is a moving picture actor and resides at No. 328 East Fifth street.

A little Canadian of only four feet seven inches, a mere pigmy by the side of the giant Russian, roundly berated Sergt.-Maj. Matier when rejected on account of his height. He took it as a personal insult.

But as the result of this recruiting a steady stream of men is flowing north. Twenty went last Sunday and eight Thursday, with another group to leave tomorrow.

The War and Books.

[Kansas City Star:] War does not spare book printers and binders. The beginning of the fourth year of the great war finds leather almost off the market. The canvas used for book backs is the same stuff manufacturers use for soldiers' uniforms. The "super" used to hold signatures together is also used for bandages, and there will be no choice between soldiers' uniforms and bandages and book makers' supplies. W. R. Smith, State Printer, recently made a trip East and bought enough supplies to tide the State shop over the next year.

Cherry Blossoms.

PICTURIZING JAPAN.

PLUCKY AMERICAN RETURNS WITH TRAVELOGUE.

By Grace Kingsley.

That the picture possibilities of Japan have only begun to be exploited is the belief of William H. Bradshaw, art director and manager of the Trans-Pacific Films, Inc., a new picture concern incorporated in Japan, which recently made one of the most fascinating Japanese travelogue features ever produced.

Mr. Bradshaw and his assistants penetrated into hitherto unphotographed and in some cases hitherto untraveled portions of Japan, as revealed at a recent private showing of the five-reel film held in this city and which was attended by newspaper and trades-journal representatives, all of whom pronounced the film views in several respects the best ever produced. Not only is the photography first class, but the scenes were made with a view to the most perfect artistic composition, while the subjects are such as to interest not only the scholar, but the regular fan.

Considerable difficulty was experienced by Mr. Bradshaw in getting some of the pictures, as he reports the Japanese are very suspicious of anybody carrying a camera. Finally an artful Japanese, whom Bradshaw suspected of desiring to get possession of the film for his own use, succeeded in convincing a government official that the picture people were foreign spies. Their film was confiscated, and they themselves would have been thrown into jail but for the intervention of the American Consul at Tokio, who interceded in their behalf.

"As mere Americans, however, and divorced from our cameras, we were treated with the utmost respect and courtesy, and even with our cameras, the Japanese, when they came to understand our motives, were entirely peaceful, gave us their friendly and often eager cooperation," said Mr. Bradshaw. "We had an old Japanese guide who proved a treasure, as he knew Japan as a ballyhoo knows his circus.

"All our pictures were made with the consent of the Japanese government, which, however, drew the line stiffly when it came to any of their fortifications, arsenals or ammunition factories, etc. When anywhere near such places we were trailed by detectives. This, under the world-war conditions, was probably entirely natural."

The temples of Japan were among the most interesting features photographed. In speaking of this, Mr. Bradshaw said:

"We went into the interior as far as Nikko, where are some of the oldest and most beautiful temples in Japan. We, too, like the natives, deposited our money and were admitted, though this was a rather special concession. At Kyoto are temples never before invaded by Caucasians I am told, and here we obtained some unique views."

Railroad travel a part of the way between Mt. Fujisam and Yokohama is by horse cars. These are lifted bodily off to the side of the road when a freight car comes along either way, and the trip of seventy miles consumes nine hours. In exploring round about Lake Shazi Mr. Bradshaw and his party were lost and walked all the way back, finally finding their way to Yokohama, footsore and nearly exhausted. At Yoshida on the Fuji trail they put up at a quaint little Japanese house built especially for pilgrims, but which never before, so far as any of the natives knew, had sheltered a white person. Here the Japanese children followed them all about, but were shy of appearing before the camera, the mothers snatching their little ones out of the way of the evil eye.

The famous cherry blossom festival is one of the most interesting views, and woe to the ignorant stranger, says Mr. Bradshaw, who plucks a cherry blossom branch from a tree! Various phases of the festival were obtained, from semi-formal ceremonies to the rollicking celebrations in the parks and on picnic grounds. Picturesque tea houses and their patrons and lovely dancing geisha girls add color and life to the views.

Views of soldiers in training, of educational institutions, of public palaces, even the territory surrounding that of the Mikado's, are among the features, while the ancient travel methods of the Japanese up their rivers, which in the mountain regions are perilous to navigation, are not only beautiful, but thrilling in the extreme, since many hundred Japanese lose their lives every year propelling their frail craft up the mountain-bound ravines.

Engaged in the production of pictures in Japan, there are at present four producing companies, according to Mr. Bradshaw, all in and around Tokio. Adhering to tradition, no women are allowed to take part in the pictures, men taking their roles—though women are beginning to take their place on the stage.

"Despite the famous Japanese thrift there seems to be no idea of saving film among the Japanese companies," said Mr. Bradshaw. "They don't rehearse thoroughly as our companies do; instead they take the scenes over and over again. The plants are all substantial, beautiful and well-equipped. Their own stories are for the most part heavily dramatic and nearly all are adapted from history. They do not make comedies, but they are simply crazy about American-made pictures.

"In most of the picture houses they have to give a four-hour entertainment, as otherwise the thrifty Japanese does not feel he is getting his money's worth. A lecturer babbles along all the way through the picture exhibition."

"A Trip Through Japan" will probably be State-righted by Mr. Bradshaw, who takes the film to New York next week. Following the sale of his picture he will return to Japan to take more pictures. These will be for the most part along educational and industrial lines, calculated to give an idea of the intellectual and industrial development of Japan.

Horsley Hears Call.

Uncle Sam has called eight men from the David Horsley studios for service in the new American army. Of the eight, four were drawn from companies engaged in the production of comedies. Horace Davey, director of Neal Burns and Gertrude Selby in Selburn comedies, was the first man to be published as a conscript. The others drawn are George George of Cub comedies, Claire de Witt and H. B. Hull. The comedy jinx was broken when Ben Cohn, scenario editor, discovered his number in the tabulated lists. Two stage carpenters reported themselves as drafted, while Harry Ryan, a property man, enlisted in the Coast Artillery several days before the great military lottery.

Bitter Experience Note.

Neal Burns and Gertrude Selby, co-stars in Selburn comedies, were saying the other day they were thinking of changing the name of their organization.

"Yes," suggested Claire Alexander, "why not Sunbeam comedies?"

"Sunbeam nothin'!" ejaculated Burns. "We made our last picture at the beach. Sunburn, you mean!"

Feels His Oats.

Warning had best be sent to Jess Willard to keep out of Charles Gerrard's way these days.

Gerrard, who is a member of the Lasky Famous Players forces, fought Douglas Fairbanks the other day in a scene of "Down to Earth." Gerrard is an Irishman, somewhat lighter than Fairbanks, but a very fair athlete, due to some years of cricket, football, rowing and other vigorous pastimes in his college days. He went into the mill with Fairbanks determined to do his bit in making it realistic, with the consequence that for fifteen minutes five cameras were trained on one of the most glorious pummeling matches ever witnessed. Both men are skilled boxers and wrestlers, but science early went to the winds in favor of just

HUMBLE EXTRA WINS PLUM AS THE FILM NECESSITY.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT.

UPON seeing terms of money expressed in ten figures you are just beginning to realize what it is costing to get up an army, but did you ever stop to think how much it would cost to keep this army steadily in the employ of the United States? You know the vast sums that have been required by European countries to maintain their big standing military forces, and how it has caused the people of these countries to struggle under the weight of an overburden of national debt.

In the matter of its supporting talent filmland is in the peculiar position of the United States in having no large standing army trained for service. It has at its command a vast power to mobilize volunteers, however, whenever emergency arises, and has come to rely on this power to recruit a big, though untrained, yet potentially efficient, force, for the needs of virtually all its productions. Without this force in reserve the film business could not go ahead on its present basis.

The proof of the pudding is in the plums it contains, and the plum for keeping the business of picture making alive goes to the humble extra, and leaves the supply plentiful for everyone else in the business. This may seem a rather strong brief for the extra, but it is no more than he deserves, for it is acknowledged that without him and his small call on the resources of the company it would be impossible to continue the making of pictures.

The film business is one of the few in which talent of the untrained type may be employed. Almost anybody, before the studios became so overflooded with applications, could obtain an occasional job as an extra, if there were sufficiently distinctive characteristics about his make-up to distinguish him. Of course, this condition has changed in the last year or two. Now nearly all the big companies know exactly where they can obtain the extra talent they desire, and keep in touch with these people, many of whom hold other jobs to help gain their livelihood. They are all paid by the day. In most cases their stipend is $3; when they have a bit, perhaps $5. Outside of this, they cost the film company nothing except in the matter of special costuming.

The goal of every extra is the part. When he has reached the point where this goal appears before him he may be said to have covered the first mile, and one of the stiffest, on the trail to the heighths of celebrity. There are mighty few persons out of 1000 or 2000 who apply nowadays who ever get to be an extra even, and out of the extras employed there are just about as few who really get parts. Of the number in the millions who have fastened their hopes amid the constellations—well, we have about a half-dozen first-class stars, who have come via the extra route and have won their fame and stayed.

Misery makes strange bedfellows, 'tis said, but filmland makes strange co-workers. A professor of languages is likely to do his bit beside a waiter in a downtown cafe; an opera singer beside a bootblack. It is a democratic world, and there are no class distinctions except those of stardom.

Speaking of professors of language and opera singers recalls instances in the local studio row. There is a language professor who has played everything from Russian revolutionists to imperial chancellors; from country doctors to French artists. He is the possessor of a great, bushy beard, and is a figure in many pictures, and he always does his bit with a rare polish and distinction.

There is an opera singer who whiles away time between giving lessons by appearing as the Kaiser, Carranza and other celebrities. And he secures striking resemblances in his make-up.

When it comes to the gentler sex the field is even bigger. Beauty en masse is always an asset. How many times have you seen the photoplay but hardly observed the rows of girls in the ballroom scenes, the classic dancers—really experts; the French peasant women, the Egyptian slaves, the Persian dancing girls, the thousand and one strange inhabitants of magic filmland. All these were the unimportant but essential "extras."

Sometimes they come from afar; some are graduates of distant colleges; others are young high school girls, who are trying to quit school to get into the films; others are married and are working in the films to earn a little pin money or to amuse themselves.

But for all these that appear on the screen there are thousands who thought they had just as good a chance who never appear. These thousands assail the employment offices of the studios in companies and battalions and regiments. They come from all sections of the globe. They have all kinds of reasons for wanting to get into the films, but rarely have the qualifications. They pick any old time at all to try for a job. The sacred hours between midnight and dawn have no sacredness for them. One employing agent received so many calls about 3 a.m. that in a fit of rage he tore his phone off the wall one night. Another time this same employer received a long-distance message from San Francisco.

"Have you got a job for me in the films," a feminine voice asked.

"Well, I could hardly tell that until I see you," said the employment manager.

"Oh, do I have to come all the way down there," she said.

"No, you may take a chance on

Reunion Misses.

JOLSON AND SUNDAY.

Comedian and Revivalist Might Have Staged a Repetition of Their Joint Appearance at Boston Tabernacle but for the Show's Departure.

The forthcoming departure of Al Jolson and his merry associates in "Robinson Crusoe, Jr.," almost on the eve of the arrival of "Billy" Sunday and his staff of revival workers will cost Los Angeles an opportunity to witness one of the most unusual reunions imaginable—that of the revivalist and the frothy fun and frolic creators of the Winter Garden.

Although their paths are widely separated the two forces are no strangers, for they gave a joint performance together during Sunday's Boston revival last November, when Jolson played a long engagement in the bean city. And the strangest part of it all was that Jolson was doing a burlesque of Sunday at every performance of his show.

Some one in the spirit of a dare suggested that the Winter Gardeners go out to the tabernacle in a body. In a unit they declared, "We will, and what's more we will furnish the musical programme."

So an afternoon was arranged when Jolson had no matinee and Sunday's famous musical director, Rodeheaver, appeared at the Shubert Theater and rehearsed principals and chorus in "Brighten Up the Corner Where You Are," and other favorite hymns in the Sunday repertoire. On the appointed day the company paraded out to the tabernacle in automobiles, headed by an orchestra of forty pieces. For nearly an hour they delighted the assembled thousands with a preliminary concert, and by way of stretching out the programme to meet the demands for more, the orchestra played much of the music from "Robinson Crusoe, Jr.," and the orchestra led all the singing throughout the service, while the personnel of the company hovered close to Sunday's pulpit and listened to him attack Brer Satan.

TRIANGLE NOT DETERRED.

Despite Hart's Departure Western Pictures will be Made.

The departure of William S. Hart from the Triangle studios will not deter Triangle in the making of western productions in the future, according to plans of that corporation which are in the making now. Jack Conway, formerly of the Universal forces, who achieved such a distinct success from his directing of "Come Through," which recently showed at the Superba, has been given the task of upholding the high plane on which Triangle has placed western pictures. Conway is now working on "The Judgment of the Guilty," a western story featuring Belle Bennett. It is a vital story, with plenty of rapid-fire action and the picturesqueness of the plains brought out with realism.

Pictures of Life.

STRAIGHT DRAMA RULES.

TALMADGE, LOCKWOOD AND CLARK STARS TO SHINE.

Victor Hugo said that every house, from hovel to palace, has a soul of its own. It would seem, also, that all the different houses in a city built for the same purpose are animated or obsessed at different times by spirits of liveliness or depression, good or evil, mystery or clarity. At least this appears to hold good in a general way with motion-picture play houses in Los Angeles.

A few weeks ago picture lovers were delighted with dozens of photoplays in which children played leading or featured roles. Then followed a week in which the dark and mysterious in drama held the boards at the majority of theaters. Following that came a week of lightsome, happy plays with hardly any thrills. This week nearly everything is straight drama, which means pictures of life as life is, combining humor, tragedy, romance and all that makes human experience interesting and that saves mankind from that most dreaded of all evils, monotony.

While at many of the picture houses brief comedies are shown as added attractions, the predominating productions are all of the purely-dramatic order.

Among the stars to be seen on local screens this week are William S. Hart, George Fawcett, Olive Thomas, Virginia Pearson, Thomas Santschi, Anita King, Anita Stewart, Myrtle Gonzales, Vera Sisson, Wallace Reid, Bessie Eyton, George Hernandez, Marguerite Clark, Donald Bowles, Norma Talmadge and many others.

Tally's Broadway.

"The Law of Compensation" is the title of the featured photoplay in which Norma Talmadge is to be seen at Tally's Broadway Theater this week. The story is by Wilson Minzer and is divided into three interesting phases of a woman's life. In the first phase Miss Talmadge is seen as a happy girl, in the next as a young married woman, while the last episode is largely taken up by a story told the young woman by her father, who fears she is about to take a false step. He tells her the story of her mother, and in this Miss Talmadge plays the part of the mature woman whose unhappy history she is in danger of repeating in her own life. Of course, the sad history saves the young woman, and in that fact lies the satisfactory culmination of the story.

Clune's Auditorium.

Can you imagine the heroine of "Snow White" in bloomers and sweaters, wearing boxing gloves, knocking down six-foot bullies and standing on tiptoe on a crossbar in a gymnasium, kissing an English lord? That is Marguerite Clark in "The Amazons," an Arthur Wing Pinero comedy, which will be the attraction at Clune's Auditorium for a week beginning tomorrow. The story deals with the way a woman brings up her daughters, attempting to make them "strong and manly," and shows how well she succeeds. Miss Clark is supported by a big cast of well-known players, including Helen Robinson, William Hinckley, Elsie Lawson, Helen Greene, Edgar Norton and Andre Bellon. An added feature at the Auditorium is a Burton Holmes travelogue.

—o—

Symphony.

The popular Harold Lockwood will delight Symphony audiences this week by his interpretation of Donald, Clarence Kelland's virile character in "The Hidden Spring." The scenario was adapted from the magazine by Fred J. Balshofer, and the star is supported by Vera Sisson of old Biograph fame, the cast also including Herbert Standing, Lester Cuneo, H. F. Crane and Arthur Millette. In addition to the featured picture the Symphony will also show a breezy new Drew comedy and another episode of "The Gray Ghost."

—o—

Clune's Broadway.

Olive Thomas, star of the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic, will be the stellar attraction at Clune's Broadway Theater this week in a picture offering called "An Even Break," a comedy drama from the pen of Lambert Hillyer, who also directed the production. The story is said to present a new angle of the theme of the small-town girl who leaves her country home for the bright lights of a big city, and the play is jam full of spectacular scenes, including factory strikes, auto races, big cabaret sets and "underworld stuff." The star is supported by Charles Gunn, Darrell Foss and Lydia Knott, the latter being especially well known because of her work with Charles Ray in "The Clodhopper."

—o—

Alhambra.

Beginning today "The Squaw Man's Son" (a sequel to "The Squaw Man," by Edwin Milton Royle) will be the interesting attraction at the Alhambra Theater. This feature, produced by the Lasky company, tells in vivid colors the romantic adventures of young Hal, son of the squaw man and his copper-skinned companion. It is described as a picture that blends strangely the tang and snap of the American frontier with the pomp and ceremony of the ancestral halls of Old England. The photoplay is presented by an all-star cast, including Wallace Reid, Anita King, Dorothy Davenport, Raymond Hatton, Frank Lanning, Ted Duncan and Donald Bowles.

—o—

Quinn's Rialto.

Winston Churchill's famous story of Civil War days, "The Crisis," which proved one of the most popular novels ever published in America, will be the big attraction in picture form at Quinn's Rialto Theater for some time to come. This famous photoplay, which opens at the Rialto tomorrow, was adapted to the screen by Colin Campbell for the Selig company and features Bessie Eyton in the stellar role of Virginia Carvel. Perhaps no heroine ever drawn by the pen of a writer was quite so fascinating as this little southern beauty and Miss Eyton is said to have given the role a most clever interpretation. The part of Judge Whipple is taken by George Fawcett.

HAPPENINGS IN MUSICAL WORLD.

A very special honor has been conferred upon Henry Schoenefeld of this city in the request received by him during the past week from the music division of the Library of Congress for his original manuscripts. It is sought to obtain these either as a gift or depository loan.

The collection of manuscripts is the first national exhibit of the kind. It follows along similar lines to collections made abroad, and the scheme is to retain the manuscripts of noted American composers for future reference, it being believed that this can be done to better advantage in a national institution. It is also hoped by this method to stimulate interest in the collecting of American manuscripts.

Mr. Schoenfeld, who is director of the Woman's Orchestra, is well known for his achievements in composition. He has written a violin and piano sonata and recently a violin concerto of great merit, beside many beautiful orchestral pieces. He is also working on an opera and ballet.

Even in midsummer the Gamut Club is not showing any laxity in its ability to bring together superior talent. The programme at the dinner Wednesday evening was of especial interest in its artists and speakers. The occasion had its serious side in the words of deep appreciation of the work of the late Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, spoken by Charles Lummis, and President Blanchard appointed a committee to draft resolutions of admiration and sympathy.

Vance Thompson, the novelist, gave a striking talk on the subject: "Three Years Ago Tonight," detailing the situation in Europe at the outbreak of the war. He was in Paris at the time.

Another speaker on the subject of the war was Gwendolyn Logan Hubbard, the English actress, whose husband was wounded and invalided. Personal interest was lent to what she said by the fact that she has seventeen male relatives in the service abroad. She complimented America strongly on the help she has given, especially to aid the suffers from the war.

Other interesting talks were made by Belle Ritchie, president of the Music Club of Fresno; Jay Dwiggins, who read James Whitcomb Riley poems, and Mr. and Mrs. George B. Millard, collectors of rare books.

The musical selections included songs by Miss Constance Eberhart, soprano, daughter of Nellie Richmond Eberhart, noted for her verses set to music by Charles Wakefield Cadman; Miss Mary Gowans, contralto, of the Brick Church in New York City, and Mme. Hesse-Sprotti, noted dramatic mezzo-soprano. Mr. Cadman played the accompaniments for Miss Eberhart and Mr. Colby played for Miss Gowans and Mme. Hesse-Sprotti. Tracy Cheatham, baritone, and Leo Domke, pianist, were heard in several numbers. Giuseppe Randegger, pianist, was also enjoyed. Carrie Jacobs Bond rendered a group of her own songs.

Choir Gives Programme.

A very excellent concert programme was presented last Friday evening by the First Congregational Church chorus choir at the church. G. Haydn Jones arranged an attractive programme, and directed the choral numbers. The soloists, who proved their delightful capabilities were Miss Grace James, soprano; Mrs. Norina Coleman, soprano; Mr. Jones, tenor; Miss Ruth Pinkerton, contralto; Mrs. F. W. Slabaugh, contralto, and Henry P. Page, bass. Walter F. Skeele assisted at the organ, and Miss Marguerite Jones and Earl Fraser at the piano. The programme had a variety, ranging from operatic compositions like the Flower Duet from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" to the beauties of Mendelssohn's "Thanks be to God," sung by the chorus. There were a number of selections in the ballad or lighter style.

Music His Text.

Carl Bronson in the role of a preacher and lecturer, with music, to which he has devoted his life, as the text, will furnish the feature of the services at the First Methodist Episcopal Church this evening. Mr. Bronson is the director of the music of the church, and he will have full charge of the services and the programme in the absence of the pastor who is enjoying a vacation. His special theme will be "Songs and Song Writers," and a number of song writers, resident or native of Los Angeles, will be on the platform with him, including Charles Wakefield Cadman, Carrie Jacobs Bond and Charlie Pyke.

Special music will be rendered for the occasion by the solo quartette, including Mrs. Stadden, Nell Lockwood, Harry Sherman and Dr. Joseph Marple. Newell L. Parker will preside at the organ.

The special numbers with which the chorus had planned to enter the prize competition at the Chautauqua musical festival will be rendered Sunday evening. These numbers are "Thanks, be to God" from "Elijah" and "God is the Spirit."

"Vocal Art-Science."

An exhaustive study of the physical side of the human voice in its relation to the art of singing is furnished in the book, "Vocal Art-Science," by Frank E. Miller, A.M.M.D., of New York (G. Schirmer, publisher.) The book is said to represent a quarter-century of research by Dr. Miller, who is recognized as one of the authoritative experts in this line.

The book is a sterling contribution to vocal literature, and is designed more especially to appeal to those who have gone into a thorough study of the higher branches. It will therefore prove especially valuable to the teacher, used as a source of specific illumination on difficult problems in relation to tone production, breath control, enunciation, etc.

By virtue of its exhaustive character, the book metaphorically takes the vocal organ apart and classifies each division thereof detailing its proper function. Some especially-striking examples are given during the course of the work and in the appendix, such as that which tells exactly what happens when Caruso sings high C.

Song Cycles.

An "Hour of Song Cycles" will be the interesting offering of Adolf Dahm-Leterson, Norwegian baritone, who is head of the vocal department of the Von Stein Academy of Music, next Wednesday evening. He will play his own accompaniments. His programme will consist of the "Eliland" cycle (Von Fielitz,) "Love's Epitome" (Mary Turner Salter,) Love Themes (Reginald Summerfield) and Indian Love Lyrics (Amy Woodforde Finden.)

Concert of Farewell.

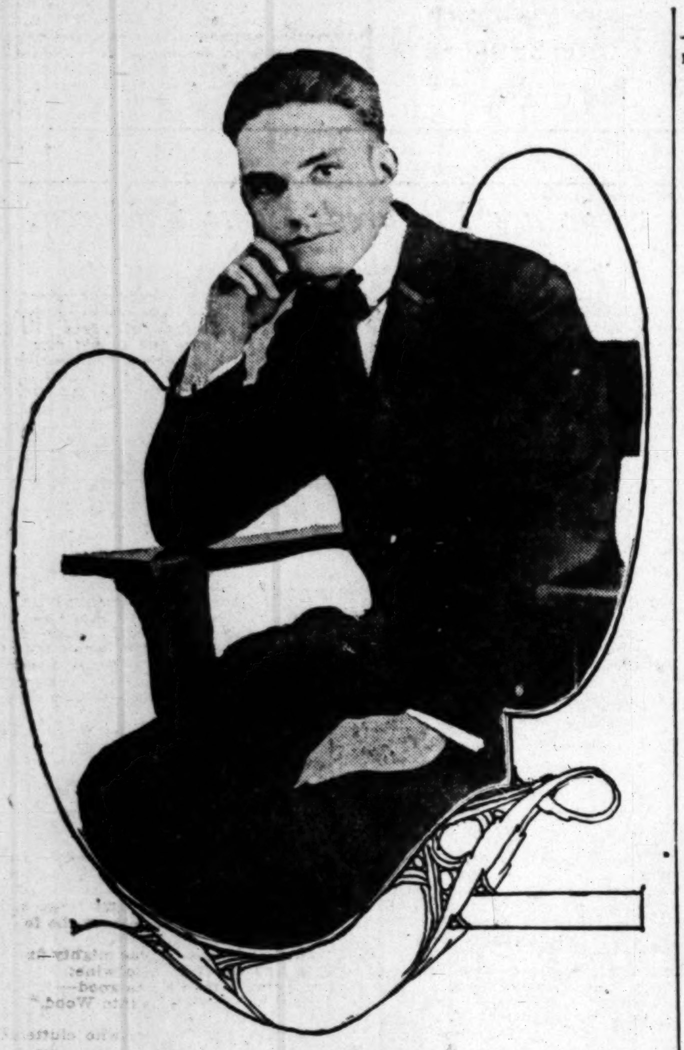
Clyde Collison, artist pupil of Rudolph Gans, and one of the foremost of the youner pianists of the West, will give a farewell concert at the University of Southern California next Thursday at 4 o'clock, as his last public appearance prior to his joining a base hospital unit of the United States Army. The concert will take place in the chapel of Liberal Arts. Mr. Collison will play Beethoven's "Appasionata" sonata, Schumann's "Scenes from Childhood," a Chopin group, including the great "A-flat Polonaise," Liszt's "Gnomenreigen" and "Campanella," and other master works.

This concert will be the concluding event of the U.S.C. summer session.



Newell L. Parker,

Brilliant young Los Angeles pianist and organist of the First M. E. Church, who has enlisted in the Hospital Corps of the army. He will leave for San Francisco next week to undergo training for his duties.

Swiss Singer Dies.

A musician of ability, Mrs. Marie Huni, born in Zurich, Switzerland, and who came to this city twenty-five years ago, passed away recently here. For a number of years she maintained a studio at Blanchard Hall, but about twelve years ago she suffered an injury from a fall which prohibited her leaving her residence. Her pupils have since attended their classes there. About two months ago she was taken to the hospital, and passed away after a wearing illness.

MUSICAL NOTES.

Russian music provided much to interest members of Miss Margaret Goetz's repertoire class at their meeting last Thursday. Mrs. A. R. Gates, assisted by the Misses Burrow and Coburn, sang a portion of "Prince Igor" music by Borodine; Miss Chrystal Waters, who is spending the summer here on a visit from Boston, gave songs by Moussorgsky, Rimsky - Korsakow and Borodine. Mrs. Leonora Kartz sang numbers by Tschaikowsky, Borodine and Moussorgsky; Elinor Coburn and Grace Morgan, selections by Borodine, Moussorgsky and Arensky. Miss Goetz and Miss Coburn sang several duets. Accompaniments were played by Miss Georgia McDonald and Miss Gertrude Ross; some of the latter's own compositions were also given. The third and closing programme of the series will be next Thursday.

Newell L. Parker, pianist and organist of this city, has enlisted in the Hospital Corps of the army. He is to go to San Francisco next week to undergo training for service. With Mr. Parker a number of other well-known Los Angeles musicians have enlisted, some in the hospital and some in various other branches. To regale with music the troops and those undergoing training to become officers and soldiers, Mr. Parker and his companions expect to have a little leisure for concerts under canvas. Like Kreisler, the famous violinist, Mr. Parker has no fear that military service is going to interfere with his career as a musician, and he expects to come out of the war better equipped than ever for his work at the organ and piano.

An interesting little volume on the subject of the vocal art is "Voice—Its Origin and Divine Nature," published by Harry Munro of New York. The subject is treated from an idealistic and rather peculiar viewpoint that should attract favor in certain circles.

C. M. Pyke has just been advised by A. A. Van der Mark, director of the National Musical Convention at Lockport, N. Y., the end of September, that his anthem, "Dear Land of Liberty," will be sung by 200 picked voices on this occasion. This recognition has come to Mr. Pyke without any solicitation on his part.

Gloria Mayne Windsor and Julene Berri are leaving tomorrow on a motor trip to San Francisco, via the Yosemite. They will fill some professional engagements while on the trip. Elsa Newton, pianiste, will join them later in San Francisco.

Theodore Lindberg, well-known violin soloist and teacher, who has gained such popularity during his short stay in Los Angeles, is to play a programme at Hotel Maryland, Pasadena, this evening. Mr. Lindberg will be heard in numbers from Vieuxtemps, Sarasate, Von Carse, Sammartini, Gossec, Nachez and Wieniawski. Mrs. Lindberg will play Mr. Lindberg's accompaniments.

Alfred Gessenius, a little Spanish boy, only 9 years old, a pupil of Mr. Lindberg, received first prize in the Vernon school for being the best violin soloist and orchestral player of the school. Florian Lindberg, 12 years old, was warmly applauded for excellent solo work at a recent musical entertainment given at Patriotic Hall and on the occasion of his playing at the Swedish Tabernacle. Mr. Lindberg is planning a pupils' recital in the near future.

EXCHANGING TONGUES.

Language Lessons Exchanged by Soldiers in France.

[James Norman Hall in Atlantic Monthly:] Drew and I were glad that we were not to live in an exclusively American barracks, for we wanted to learn French; but, more than this, we wanted to live with Frenchmen on terms of barrack-room familiarity.

(This was when the writer first joined the Franco-American air service.)

By the time we had given in our papers at the captain's office and had passed the hasty preliminary examination of the medical officer it was quite dark. Flying for the day was over, and lights gleamed cheerily from the barrack-room windows. As we came down the principal street of the camp we heard the strains of "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee," to a gramophone accompaniment issuing from the chambre des Americains.

See them shuffle along,
Oh, ma honey babe,
Hear that music and song.

It gave us the home feeling at once. Frenchmen and Americans were singing together, the Frenchmen in very quaint English, but hitting off the syncopated time as if they had been born and brought up to it as we Americans have.

Over in one corner a very informal class in French-English pronunciation was at work. Apparently this was tongue twisters' night. "Heureux" was the challenge from the French side and "Hooroo" the nearest approach to a pronunciation on the part of the Americans, with many more or less remote variations on this theme. An American, realizing how difficult it is for a Frenchman to get his tongue between his teeth, counter-challenged with "Father, you are withered with age." The result, as might have been expected, was a series of hissing sounds of "z," whereupon there was an answering howl of derision from all the Americans.

Up and down the length of the room there were little groups of two and three, chatting together in combinations of Franco-American which must have caused all deceased professors of modern languages to spin like midges in their graves. And throughout all this before-supper merriment one could catch the feeling of good comradeship which, so far as my experience goes, is always prevalent whenever Frenchmen and Americans are gathered together.

New England's Sailors.

Edward Hungerford, who made an investigation for Everybody's to find out where the men are coming from for our new merchant marine, relates in the August issue of that magazine, some interesting incidents showing the New England sailor's independence of new-fangled nautical instruments. "Ask them about navigation," he writes, "and they will bring out, with loving care, the sextant that was father's or Uncle Jim's or, more likely, grandfather's or one of the great-uncle's. They will point out the vernier scale upon its bright face and say to you—landlubber that you are:

" 'She shoots the sun. With it we get the latitude. A chart and the latitude—a lead line and jedgment—jedgment counts—and we can get anywhere between the Bermudas and Greenland.'

" 'How about the longitude?' you venture.

"You certainly are a landlubber. The salt lets you know that, with a single glance. Then he shows compassion and relates an anecdote:

" 'There was a fellow sailing out of Gloucester and some one gave him a chronometer—that's the instrument the scientific fellows get the longitude with. They explained it to him, an' for three days he sailed by it—God knows where to. They the dinged thing busts an' he comes back to the sextant an' gets to the Banks only a little behind the rest of the fleet. But if that chronometer hadn't busted, by Judas Priest, stranger, he might have hit over in Portugal somewhere!' "

A Family Secret.

[Birmingham Age-Herald:] "My dad could whip your dad with one hand tied behind him."

"Shucks! My dad could whip your dad with both hands tied behind him."

"He couldn't!"

"He could!"

"How could he? He couldn't do nothing 'cept butt my dad."

"That's just it. My mother says my dad has the hardest head of any man she ever knew."

"THAT DAY" WINS PUBLIC

CHARLES RUGGLES AT MAJESTIC IN "JUST A SUGGESTION."

People often speak of a representative audience, not stopping to analyze the meaning of that term. If by "representative audience" is meant strictly an aggregation of society women and their escorts, or an audience composed of any special coterie or clique, then it would indeed be difficult to find a truly representative audience—at least in Los Angeles.

On the other hand, if by the term is meant an audience composed of the rank and file of the professional, business and laboring elements of society then it might be said that nearly every audience is a representative audience—at least in Los Angeles, where the theater depends for its support on all of the people all the time. Generally speaking, any play that strongly appeals to any audience at any given time will appeal to any other audience at any other time.

Every audience is human and, being human, is optimistic and kind of heart, loving the good, despising the bad, appreciative of humor, admiring the beautiful, discarding the sordid and obnoxious, ready to applaud the masterful artist and showing disapproval of mediocre talent. When a good play is produced in Los Angeles—and many are being produced here of late—it is not allowed to stop with one week's engagement, but is usually held over for from two to four consecutive weeks.

When a poor play starts here there isn't an audience in the city—representative or otherwise—that can drive it to New York and if it stays in Los Angeles for an entire week it does so out of pure stubbornness and not because of the patronage it receives after the first two or three performances. Louis K. Anspacher's play, "That Day," proved a tremendous hit at the Morosco last week and it will be repeated this week. Ditto "Robinson Crusoe, Jr." at the Mason. "Pamela" is said to be a good play in its way although perhaps not up to the standard of the average Morosco production. However, its fine cast has helped to save it from the scrap heap. "Pamela" gives way at the Majestic this week to a new comedy which features the popular Charlie Ruggles.

Majestic.

Beginning tomorrow night at the Majestic Theater Oliver Morosco will offer what he considers one of the most important productions of the season when he presents Charlie Ruggles in a new comedy, entitled "Just a Suggestion." The play is from the pen of Harold Selman and Mr. Morosco intends to present Mr. Ruggles in the production in New York after he finishes his engagement here. One of the attractive features in the play is to be found in the second act when the action swings back from modern times to the year 1770, and in this act Mr. Ruggles meets his ancestors of the old days of New York. However, a new twist is given the plot by the ancestors' refusal to recognize their descendant. For this production, which will be under the direction of Frank B. Butler, Mr. Morosco will offer an entirely new scale of prices, making the Majestic prices of the same scale that is in effect at the Morosco.

Mason.

Of all the New York Winter Garden shows that have played in Los Angeles none has jumped into the tremendous popularity achieved by Al Jolson and his company during the last week in their sparkling musical extravaganza, "Robinson Crusoe, Jr." The tremendous success scored by "the black joy streak" and his fun-making associates has been such that arrangements have been made to continue the engagement at the Mason Operahouse this week. Of course Jolson is a Los Angeles product and Kitty Doner a Los Angeles discovery and Lawrence O'Dor— and Frank Carter old local favorites, but aside from that perhaps no musical comedy that has ever visited the Coast has made itself quite so much at home as "Robinson Crusoe, Jr." Efforts are on foot to extend the engagement for a third week, but up to the present writing Al has positively refused, saying that he has been playing the role of Good Friday for fifty-eight consecutive weeks and that he considers himself entitled to a vacation at his own expense.

Morosco.

Although a producer may not know on the opening night of a new play whether or not the production is to be a success, it does not require many performances for producer and author to find out just what the general public thinks of the entertainment. "Lombardi, Ltd.," was a success from the word go, and Louis K. Anspacher's strong play, "That Day," met with fully as hearty and instantaneous approval upon its presentation at the Morosco Theater last week. Capacity audiences filled the house at every performance, and those who failed to see the new hit will welcome the news that it is to be held over for another week, if not longer. The play is an intermingling, though not a confusion of human emotions, telling a big story with a depth of feeling and sentiment, yet tempered by a vein of fine comedy and delightful satire. The cast is headed by Bertha Mann and Forrest Stanley, and includes Richard Dix, Betty Brice, Lillian Elliott, Nancy Fair, William Raymond, Edna Elsmere and other equally-talented players.

Orpheum.

Timed accurately to afford a big climax to the Orpheum's season of summer stars, the management of that big vaudeville house announces the appearance of Julia Arthur on the new programme that opens tomorrow. Miss Arthur comes under the personal direction of Martin Beck, and the vehicle through which her genius will shine is called "Liberty Aflame," a patriotic masterpiece from the pen of Roland Burke Hennessey. On the same programme with Miss Arthur will be Trixie Friganza, who has been held over for another week, while Harry Carroll, a popular songwriter not unknown to the Coast, returns with new compositions which no one knows better than he how to "put over." Another featured entertainer is Hugh Herbert, exponent of Hebraic character sketches, in "The Prediction," in which Mr. Herbert is said to be supported by a company par excellence. O'Connor and El Cleve will offer a great deal of interesting nonsense, while retained over from last week's programme are Melissa Ten Eyck and Max Weily, the California Boys' Band, Orville Stamm and Santos and Hays.

Pantages.

This is the week of Singer's Midgets at Pantages. This talented aggregation of lilliputians, who have proved such a tremendous sensation in the Northwest and bay cities, will begin the week's engagement at Pantages tomorrow. The Midgets have a complete variety show of their own, presenting musical acts, strong-man feats, animal stunts and gymnastics. In the big company are thirty persons, twenty ponies, two baby elephants and dogs, dogs, dogs. Another big attraction on the new bill will be the trick dogs of Vertho, said to be one of the cleverest animal acts on the Pantages circuit. Other featured acts on the programme will be offered by the Romanoff sisters, Schooler and Dickinson and Antrim and Vale.

Hippodrome.

If advance notices mean anything the show which opens at the Hippodrome tomorrow will be satisfactory in every respect. No special headliner is booked, but every act on the bill is said to be exceptional of its order. Dot Martell is labeled "a cyclonic marvel of syncopated melody;" the Florence Duo have a bunch of bewildering tricks in the magic art; Newport and Stirk are called "The Careless Chattering Chappies;" John West is a comedian and a musician; Ives, Weaver and Farnsworth are harmony purveyors; the Bijou Minstrel Maids are both singers and comediennes, while Miss Freemont Benton and her happy company will offer a sketch called "Handkerchief No. 15." Good motion pictures are always included in the Hippodrome programme.

Burbank.

Presenting an entirely new act, with a cast of Los Angeles people, the Burbank will tomorrow become another house added to the list of producing theaters of this city. Florence Reed Howard, Los Angeles composer and artist, with the assistance of Gertrude Powell, Edna Florella Montague, Beatrice Montague and an augmented orchestra will present for the first time on any stage an act of original song creations, staged by Edna Montague. Another featured act on the new programme will be the offering of Van Perre and Van Perre, two Belgian musicians who were driven from their native country during the German invasion of that unhappy land. S. H. Robinson is a magician who promises Burbank patrons enough mystery to last until next time, while Gladys Randolph is a novelty dancer of no little repute. Allan and Moore are high steppers who also have some high notes for music lovers. The photoplay this week is called "A Wife on Trial" and features Mignon Anderson.

Supplies College Heads.

[Indianapolis News:] That Indiana University is in truth the "mother of college presidents" is made still clearer by the election of Prof. Ernest H. Lindley of the department of philosophy to the office of president of the University of Idaho.

In the last few years the following college presidents have gone from this university: Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford University; Dr. W. A. P. Martin, University of Peking, China; Dr. Enoch A. Bryan, Washington State College; Dr. John M. Coulter and Dr. John S. Nollen, Lake Forest University; Dr. Joseph Swain, Swarthmore College; Dr. Elmer B. Bryan, Colgate University; Dr. Robert J. Aley, University of Maine; Dr. W. A. Jessup, University of Idaho, and Dr. E. O. Holland, University of Washington.

Extra Wins Plum.

sending a photograph."

"Well, do you know any studio up here where I might get a position?"

And so it goes—questions and answers; applications and refusals—all very disappointing to those who have been led by false hopes to come clear across the country to get into the films, but all very necessary to make it possible to keep the crank of the camera turning.

The extra's world is the saddest and most amusing in filmland. He is the soldier of fortune, having a bed to lie in one day, and not the wherewithal for a meal the next. He is out of luck, or he is happy as the day is long. He knows no heavy care when he is working, and knows all the cares in the world when he is not. Yet the candle flame loses none of its magic power for the moths which behold its gleam from near or far.

NORMA SHOWS THEM HOW.

Film Actress Tells Why so Many Stage Stars Fail on Screen.

Norma Talmadge, who appears at Tally's Broadway this week, thinks the actor who is recruited to pictures from the stage is due for an education, since he usually believes the picture player is so hampered in his work by reason of the fact he cannot use his voice, that he can express only a few basic emotions.

"We who have worked only in pictures know that the most important thing in presenting a scene is that all the dialogue must be carried on just as it would be if the audience could hear every word. This is only partly because audiences are becoming wonderful lip-readers, though I believe the time is coming when regular patrons of the picture will become such adepts in this faculty that they will read every word spoken from the screen. The more important thing, however, is the reflex action upon the actors themselves. If the conversation is logical, and in the spirit of the screen, the facial expressions will follow inevitably, and the gestures be easy and natural. Convinced that all his emotions must be expressed in pantomime, the stage actor does not lean upon the dialogue, and speaks his lines in a perfunctory manner. This is, I am sure, the principal reason so many stage favorites have failed on the screen. They have deliberately refused to employ their own art, because they did not understand its value to the screen."

His Fall not Unchecked.

[Oregon Journal:] Two insurance agents—a Yankee and an Englishman—were bragging about their rival methods, says the Atlanta Journal. The Britisher was holding forth on the system of prompt payment carried out by his people—no trouble, no fuss, no attempt to wriggle out of settlement.

"If the man died tonight," he continued, "his widow would receive her money by the first post tomorrow morning."

"You don't say?" drawled the Yankee. "See here, now, you talk of prompt payment! Well, our office is on the third floor of a building forty-nine stories high. One of our clients lived in that forty-ninth story and he fell out of the window. We handed him his check as he passed."

HAPPY THOUGHT CLUB SYMPOSIUM.

BY EUGENE BROWN.

Almost the Happy Thought Club became involved in a literary scandal. This near tragedy was brought out through the announcements of the forthcoming production by the club studio. This is the filming of the adventures of Hector and Ajax in their rival pursuit of Helen after she had taken a responsible position in a steam laundry at Troy, New York. Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes, the club custodian, reported that he had received a threatening letter from a Louise Homer, claiming to be a descendant and one of the heirs of the deceased poet named Homer, from whose writings incidents bearing on the careers of Hector and Ajax were said to have been taken.

This Homer person wrote that Hector was a respectable married man with a lovely wife and child and that to attribute to him some of the moral weaknesses which were attached to his brother, Paris, was little short of a crime. She warned the club that if the filming of the story was persisted in upon the lines announced, that relatives of Hector would sue the studio for libel. "You know very well that Hector himself is dead," she wrote scornfully, "or you would not dare show him drilling around after a painted doll or buying birdseed for wrens. When Heck was around he was willing to meet all comers and he wouldn't stall for this Ajax guy even if he did haye a tire named after him. Hector's wife was a perfect lady, and her people won't stand for no such carryings on as you are carrying out. Also the story about him and Ajax belongs to our family. We never had any royalty in our family but we want it now. If you don't come across you will hear from our lawyer, Earl Rogers, and he will see that not only the Homers, but Hector get what is coming to them. You should have written to us before taking any liberties with your betters who are not here to defend themselves. Unless we get a check by return mail our attorney will attend to the matter. We are also writing to the Hectors to see what they propose to do. We do not have the address of Ajax, but he can probably take care of himself."

The Cheerful Nut wanted to know what the club proposed to do about it. He thought the Homer woman was probably bluffing as everybody knew that Paris was the name of a town and not of a man. She might as well try to blame it on New York or Riverside.

Gladys Canby, who served her time as press agent for the woman with the iron jaw, thought it would be a good idea to let the thing take its course. If the Hector family sued the studio for libel it looked like good publicity to her and she thought the club could even stand a small judgment. "Tell 'em to go ahead and do their worst," was her advice.

Prof. Hughes reported that he had consulted Oscar Lawler and the attorney had found that there were no direct heirs of Homer surviving. Also he gathered that the estate of Hector had never been probated, or any kinship established. The parties bringing suit would not only have to prove damages but a personal interest. He said if the club wanted to play absolutely safe they could send a private detective down to Troy to look up the records of Hector and Helen and if there was any warrant whatever for associating their names the studio could go ahead with the filming by this time. Through lapse of years it had become privileged matter. Cave canem sicut ante. Also lex talionis. In the meantime the custodians should merrily write this Homer person: "Yours at hand and contents noted."

David Oliver Tobasco, the director of the production, said that the thing could easily be settled by calling Hector "Mike," while Helen went on the programme as "Jane." While they were doing this, they could send Charlie Sebastian on to Troy to sleuth around a bit and if he found out what was desired they could come right out in the open and get all the publicity wanted. Anyhow the club will stand pat and go ahead with the production.

In the absence of the president, who is busy this week driving a snow plow, the chair at yesterday's symposium was again filled by the Old Resident. The pioneer objected a little as it kept him sitting in one place all the time and he likes to wander around; but as the club sessions practically take care of themselves he finally said he didn't mind. It was reported that the veteran was about to spend some time on his rice plantation in Tulare county. The Cheerful Nut wanted to know if this rice business had anything to do with the reported entanglemen of the Old Resident with Marjorie Evelyn Heartsease.

At this the secretary hotly told him to mind his own business.

As a hero of one war and two divorce suits, the temporary chairman smiled with unruffled serenity. "Go ahead, steamboat!" he exclaimed cheerfully.

So the regular order was taken up.

The secretary made a verbal report recommending that the annual celebration of the club could be very properly held on Admission Day as all the members are strong for annexation anyhow. This year the day is really a three-bagger as it comes on Sunday. It could be opened with an outdoor symposium on Saturday, with motor trips to the beaches or hikes in the hills covering the next two days. That, however, is a matter to be determined by the votes and views of the members. The principal thing is the agreement upon the date or dates. Also the selection of the Old Resident as chairman of the Refreshment Committee.

It is reasonably certain that no one will perish from thirst.

The secretary also reported several outbursts of marriage verse on the part of some of the club poets. Esmerelda Hooligan had to get something out of her chest in connection with the union of Sadie Knott to Will Doolittle, which was reported at the last meeting. This churned out like this:

"For Sadie Knott the knot was tied,
Which made of her a comely bride;
But to domestic tasks assigned,
She did not view them to her mind,
And though condemned to pot and kettle,
We fear this Mrs. Will Doolittle."

The marriage of Lulu Cole to Hamilton Wood also furnished fuel to inspire a couple of bards in burning poetic incense to the happy pair. The very name of Wood made it easy to strike a chord, even if it should later be lost. Louise Josephine Pinkelheimer, after lunching copiously on prunes, untangled this couplet:

"Love's flame will blaze as Love's flame should,
When Hymen heaps on Cole and
Wood,
For what will fire the human soul
Like ample store of Wood and Cole?"

Arthur Moore Cumming also found fodder for his muse in the same wedding announcement and it affected him so that he had to go to the blackboard and chalk up the following:

"We thought that it was mighty fine,
This turning water into wine;
But here's a miracle as good—
A preacher turns Cole into Wood."

Carrie Stiles Winter, who clutters up moving-picture scenarios with a little blonde personage about her size, sent word that she wanted to break into the gang. She fancied that she might be able to pay her way in bright thoughts, as there was no man in the way to interfere. When a girl has a couple of expensive and exacting husbands on her mind she cannot always think as she would. But one can always laugh and sing when she's a girl without a string. Carrie did not want to be an intruder, but if she were one it would be after the pattern of the one of whom she sang and whose brief story was told in this happy way:

The Welcome Intruder.

Just dropped in to say "Hullo!"
Hadn't nowhere much to go—
Gee! how times does fly!
But I guess it's likely true
Time's worth less to me than you.
Just dropped in to say "Hullo!"
But mostly to say "Good-by."

Just dropped in to pay the rent;
Hate to owe a dog-gone cent.
Never want to try.
When I owe a man a bill
I can't sleep and never will.
Just dropped in to pay the rent—
Mostly to say "Good-by."

Just dropped in to see if I could
Do you any bit of good
While your trouble's nigh.
If you ever want a dollar
Don't you be afraid to holler.
Just dropped in to say "Hullo!"
But mostly to say "Good-by."

Pansy Wuerstmacher thought that would be the sort of a gentle invader that she could love and she prayed that fate might send her such an one.

It was stated that Harikari Shimose, the Nipponese nightingale, who is under suspicion of being a German spy, had been given a clean bill of health by the War Department. Not only that, but he had a warm letter of indorsement from the president, which also commissioned him to write the words of a heroic anthem which should be emblematic of the fraternal unity of America and Japan. This will be submitted through the club when completed and is expected to dispel the last cloud of doubt and suspicion which floats between the two countries.

The announcement was received with applause and then the symposium came to an end.

The marriage verse contest and the wishing tournament still continue. Entries for these as well as other offerings and applications for membership or club correspondence may be addressed to Eugene Brown, in care of the editorial rooms, Daily Times.

Picnic hints are also acceptable and there is always room for happy thoughts.

Paper Clippings for Soldiers.

[Washington Star:] "Clip as well as knit for the sailors and marines."

This is the slogan of the Comforts Committee of the Navy League of the United States, which has headquarters in Washington.

The league intends keeping our boys who are sent over the seas in touch with their "own home town." It has established a clipping bureau, and everything from joke columns and cartoons to heavy editorials will be sent along.

Capt. C. M. Marlow, U.S.N., who has an office in the Comforts Committee headquarters here, started the work. His idea is to supplement the comfort outfits, knit by the patriotic women of the country, with clippings from newspapers and magazines, arranged in booklet form.

To reduce postage costs and because space in shipment is at a premium it has been recommended that stories be cut out separately from magazines, stitched together with heavy thread, and, if possible, bound with brown paper for further protection. The purpose is to distribute the contents of a single magazine among a wider circle of readers. Also, a man may, when called to duty, easily stick the clipping or article in his pocket, and peruse it again at his leisure.

In the office of the Comforts Committee several girls are working daily, clipping and classifying articles on current topics, as well as scientific, religious and sporting subjects, and pictures from comic sheets and magazines. Others are busy separating stories from magazines for separate binding.

Clubs for this kind of work are now being formed in various parts of the country, and their work, when finished, will be sent here and forwarded to New York, where the postmaster is keeping the Navy League advised about what ships can be reached.

Most Expensive Railroad in World.

The most expensive railroad in the world, we are told in the March American Magazine, is the Garfield and Bingham Railroad that carries ore to the gigantic copper mine of D. C. Jackling at Bingham, Utah. It cost $300,000 a mile, and is all tunnels and trestles. It was built for the sole purpose of insuring an adequaate supply of ore for the mill.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER

aline, darling:

I can't think of any better cure for your lacerated heart than a visit to San Diego. Cherie, the place is with handsome uniformed ality, naval, military and tion. One's affections just twitter between the sea, the land and the air, each service being more attractive than the other.

I found Juana having a scandalously good time of it, making Hotel del Coronado her headquarters, and dashing around the country in a sporty little machine, flaunting a military pass that had been given her by that fascinating Col. O'Niel, which takes her through all the forbidden places, the while the armed guards respectfully salute her. It is just like living under martial law down there, with sentries posted at all the bridges and gates, and trucks rumbling along all the roads under military guard. Of course I cosied up to Juana with her open sesame badge, and she took me over to the camp to show me. We had an august audience with that jolly Irish Col. O'Niel, who looks the quintessence of innocence, but who is really a sly diplomat de luxe. You see, he makes lady visitors so amiably welcome, but is careful to keep that handsome Capt. Hartz on the premises, who appears with prompt fervor upon a strategic signal, wearing that impressive importance that means the enemy is at hand, and business of war must take precedence of all philandering, by halidom! But Juana is a bit of a diplomat, too, and she shyly asked that dear Capt. Hartz before he had a chance to get the surreptitious summons. I fell head over heels in love with him right away. He is first aide to the colonel, tall, dark, young, slender, with a neat and piquant moustache, and large, brown eyes. Oh, yes, dear, he is a darling. I do try to be discreet in my admirations.

It was quite thrilling to have the officers coming in and out of that military headquarters—which, by the way, are in the Indian village of the exposition grounds, the funny mud fort-like houses that you have to enter by a ladder at the side. It looks just like an India hill station, and one looks upon soldiers, soldiers, everywhere, and tents galore, the soldiers in a strenuous state of negligee, khakied and be-putteed below, and lightly be-shirted above.

But there isn't any neglige about the handsome officers of the army and the navy who decorate the dining tables at Coronado. We had one dining party there on Saturday evening given by the brown-eyed Fullam, who, with a marked appreciation of my tastes, sat me between a naval lieutenant and a dashing aviator, and opposite Lieut. T. B. Alexander of Washington National Guard, who is out to learn to fly, and had just won his J.M.A. (that means junior military aviator.) So, with the dashing naval Lieut. Ashley on my left, you may imagine what a flutterful time your little pal, even if the lovely June in a dazzling gown of flame did monopolize the attention of my other partner, who could not remember my name through a whole course in consequence. June is the arch-belle down there and has a wonderful

Admiral Fullam's two aides, Lieut. Walker and Manley, are, of course, dashing beaux, but the army pushes them hard in the persons of Lieut. Candie of the Eighteenth Cavalry, Lieut. F. B. Lyon of the Cavalry, and F. I. Eglin of the Second Indiana. Isn't it clever of me to know where they all belong? I felt like starting a card index for future reference. Lloyd is down from San Francisco learning to aviate, and he will be one of the pupils of those two French aviators who have come out from France, covered in medals and glory, as instructors at the camp. These two youthful bachelors, Henri Marguisen and Robert, speak the most adorable English, and have such nice, refined manners—the girls find it difficile to effectually salt their tails. One hears that their bedroom walls are plastered around with invitation notes.

Of course, we had a launch party on the bay, at a respectful distance from the warships (mere second-class cruisers we were informed, but they look frightfully impressive.) All the sailors came and hung over at us and waved, and the aviators flew down low and

Col. A. L. Dade, in command of the aviation camp, is such a fine old dear—the darling aviators will talk about him instead of about themselves or me. But he could not bear being on mere ground while the youngsters soared, so he has just learned to fly, too, and is proving as as the French heroes.

Meigs, sister to Mrs. L., an officer's widow, who is staying at Coronado, has two beaux of equal assiduousness. They are both not with her when the other is. She is a jolly and dresses in such good taste, especially her pretty sport clothes. Really, there are not nearly enough girls down there to go round. Isn't it jolly? So when Van Surdam started singing poignant love songs in that dreamy voice of his, the other civilian men on the felt he was taking an unfair advantage. Van Surdam is rather in that he is really a famous footballist, and has enlisted in the army, but is mostly, chiefly a sentimental singer with a temperament. He is wont to indignantly remark: If he can be so dangerous in civilian clothes it is awful to think what a uniform will do for him.

Lankershim and Doria are Mar. They have recently returned from Paris with simply marvelous wardrobes, and are dazzling the little community with sartorial eclat. Oh, what envy French hats engender! And you try to take in the details of their gowns without appearing to be

Miss Ruth Rollins, daughter of Rollins, has been in Santa Barbara the last six months and is engaged to a dashing Bostonian, who is a captain in the army. She is to leave for New York on August 5 to play in one of Guy Booth's plays. Some girls have luck?

It is a good joke on a luckless just now in Los Angeles whose spouse is interested in social work. Her kindly heart absolutely refuses to turn anybody down so when she heard that no less than two of them discharged from jail, were homeless, she naturally took them in. One of them was a colored lady and had been sent up to occupy one of the rooms. But she made a mistake and went to bed in hubby's own particular room. He hasn't recovered from the shock yet. It's an awful mistake to come home late and slip up to your room without sending out scouting parties. Husbands whose wives are interested in the Big Sister League may well beware.

There is a merry party of Angelenos up at Del Monte. The echoes of their frivols reach us down here. There are Dr. and Mrs. Guy Cochrane and their children, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Niven, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Garland and Mr. and Mrs. R. I. Rogers. They just golf and swim in that Roman plunge, and take lovely drives and dine and dance all the happy time of it.

On the whole, darling, you see life is well worth living. So mend your broken heart with a vacation and six new dresses. Your loving,

BETTY.

So the capable bride-elect rushed into an exclusive shop Friday morning and announced she must have a complete bridal outfit by 5 o'clock that same afternoon. Milton Fish, pastor of the First Baptist Church of San Bernardino, officiated. Miss Lucile Welborn, a sister of the bride, sang "Oh, Promise Me" preceeding the entrance of the bridal party. Mrs. Lee Rice accompanied on the piano and rendered Meldelssohn's march for the processional. The ceremony was witnessed by a large company of intimate friends and relatives. A little cousin of the bride, Etta Lois McHargue of Colton, strewed pink and white rose petals from a dainty crocheted basket. The bride was given away by her father. She wore her graduation dress of white net, tiny ruffles trimming the pointed tunic, fichu collar and long, loose sleeves. The long veil was caught up in cap effect over the dark coiffure with orange blossoms. The marriage was followed by a wedding supper, where the centerpiece was a huge wedding cake surrounded by white and pink carnations. Favors were dainty baskets of pink and white bon bons. Little Olive Rice, a niece of the groom, sang during the supper hours. # BRITISH GUNS PAY OLD DEBTS.

[BY A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 5.—It is one thing to stand beside or lie in front of the British guns and watch them hurl their daily tons of hate into the German lines. It is quite something else to be a German and have the hate hurled at you.

The British remember the days when they were all but gunless and the Germans turned upon them torrents of explosive fire. To-day and every day, they are paying off that old score with a compound interest that would make the heart of a usurer beat with German prisoners tell more and more of the horror of existence in their lines when the British guns are in angry mood. They tell of the growing strain upon body and mind of the life they are compelled to live as deep in the bowels of the earth as they can, often fighting for the safer places at the lower levels. All this is having its effect upon the enemy, but German military discipline has been such through the past forty years that its influence still holds the Emperor's armies together as worthy fighting units.

Captured letters and diaries taken from dead or prisoners depict conditions in the German lines in language so simple as to be most convincing. It is doubtful if any such letters ever pass the military censors and reach the intended destinations in Germany. They dwell too fully upon the "hell" of the predominating British guns.

GREAT BATTLE.

It was a magnificent battle spectacle to watch day after day the British artillery preparation for the attack at Messines ridge on June 7. It is far more interesting, however, to read the story from the "other side" as told in the translated copy of a German corporal's diary from May 28 onward. Here it is:

May 28—The English have become more active in the Wytschaete sector. At 6:35 we proceeded by forced marches to Menin, where the company assembles. We reach the front lines at Comines and are at once greeted by a round of shrapnel. Then we go to emergency and reserve quarters, lying in the open, as it is too dangerous in a house. In the night the firing was almost insupportable, yet I slept fairly well.

May 30—Three gas alarms as gas shells are fired and gas discharged against our front line. Heavy fire all night. One cannot sleep.

May 31—In the evening the firing rose to colossal intensity; in the night it swells and with the morning becomes drumfire.

June 1—All day intense artillery, often drumfire. We are all the time on the qui vive, it is terrible.

June 2—We visit the reserve position. It is an absolutely terrible place to which we have come, a regular trap. I doubt if we ever get out alive. We move off and take up our quarters in a cellar on the road. From 2 p.m. the English commence an intense fire on our lines and batteries. As we are lying just in front of a battery we come under heavy fire. Every minute we are ready to bolt. So the endless afternoon passes in anxious waiting. At 10 o'clock the English shift their fire further back. It rises to drum and finally hurricane fire. At 11 o'clock the curtain or barrage fire goes up forward and in the infernal uproar which now sets in from our batteries and the enemy's we are ordered to man the signaling station. The English have attacked our left wing, but are unable to advance. The infernal concert goes on till past midnight.

June 3.—Heavy fire all the night. Near by the back area is gassed. In front they say things are in a terrible state, no longer any trace of trenches. The first battalion has heavy casualties. What happened at Arras will happen to us here. About 10 o'clock the English give us drumfire. At 2 o'clock a great hurricane fire is directed on the front trenches; in the evening again heavy fire on all communication trenches. At night gas shells are fired on a large scale, the whole place stinks of gas.

June 4.—Midday, heavy fire in front. In the afternoon increased artillery activity, in the evening bursts of firing in front, and everything is again heavily gassed. The fire continues the whole night. Heavy casualties. The men of the whole course are melting away rapidly. It is a regular plague they have pushed us into again, as at Arras. The mood of all is almost one of despair under this English fire.

June 5—Throughout three days artillery activity has been increasing. Tonight we go up in relief. Who knows what fate has in store for us. Forenoon somewhat quieter; afterward all the wilder. We are sick with the firing. If only the attack would come soon; then the whole thing would be settled and this hell have its end. The four days in front fill me with horror. The heavies fall close to our dugout and we are forced to fly for refuge in the telephone dugout, as it affords more protection. Not until midnight does the heavy bombardment cease; then only shrapnel comes into play. Towards midnight the bombardment increases, and all lines of approach are kept under fire by the English.

At 12 o'clock our relief comes. We are obliged to advance in spite of violent shrapnel and shell fire, in spite of the mad fire on

At 12:30 we reach the gigantic shell-crater field. Under fire it seems wilder than the hell. We advance from shell hole to shell crater to the Dammstrasse. From here we go to the right provisionally in shell holes, until later in the blown-in All formations are broken and the company is in confusion. together. Already many casualties have occurred, but these cannot be ascertained as all is in confusion. I get into a dugout which is splinter proof. In the we are all on top of one another and make ourselves as small as possible, but everyone wants to find a place. In the morning the fire is bearable; in the afternoon it again grows so frantic that we may well despair. It is hardly imaginable that man can bear so much. We are all half-crazy."

DESCRIBES HORROR.

Here the diary ended. But a partial narrative of the last day of preparation is told in a letter dated "From a shell hole in hell, 6th June, 1917."

In part it read:

"Thanks for your kind letter. I am still well, but quite discouraged. You have no idea what it is like—fourteen days passed in hellish fire night and day. In this marvelously beautiful weather we crouch together in holes and await our doom. The dead here are piled up by the British artillery alone, which is far superior to ours. Many are dead, too, from gas poisoning. Our division has lost 3400 men in barely three months. We are quite helpless against the English. Thirty men have been buried in mine galleries, and are burning in the bargain. Everyone refuses to go to the front line. Our heads ache from gas. Cigarettes taste of gas. Our artillery cannot fire in the daytime. Tommy sees it at once and it all dies away.

"A terrible, devastated region. Such a pitiful life. No food, no drinking water all day, and the sun burns. At midnight dinner, and at 3 in the morning coffee, but not always, as in every act is danger to life. We all look forward with joy to being taken prisoner. If not soon relieved we will go mad; we are already muddled. They are artillerymen, infantry and flying men here from Arras. They say Arras was the golden age compared with this time in hell. The English want to shoot us down, not make peace. They do not need infantry; their artillery is enough. We dare not let a glimpse be seen of us."

Next morning at dawn the British attacked. They swept the demoralized Germans back out of their positions and established themselves in a line previously mapped out. German resistance could not organize itself until the field-gray forces had fallen back to lines well beyond the torrid zone of the more intense artillery fire.

ANCIENT MAN.

Origin of the Race Retreating More and More Into Past.

[Philadelphia Public Ledger:] The antiquity of man is still an absorbing topic among anthropologists and other scientists, and fresh discussions arise with each new discovery of ancient human remains. In this connection, it is interesting to note that Dr. Arthur Keith, of Edinburgh, an authority on the subject, believes that the living Australian aborigine is of an older type than any of the fossil remains of modern man found in Europe. The New York Medical Journal says:

"The date of the origin of the human species, by each new discovery of missing chapters in its history, is shifted to a more and more remote time. The Neanderthal skull, which, by its prominent supraorbital ridges, its length, and flattening from above downward, semed to link man closely, if loosely, to the higher apes, still had a brain capacity quite equal to that of the average modern man, and on this account pointed to a still more remote beginning of the human being. The brain of the Neanderthal man was not only large but elaborate, and, as shown by the remains of his culture, he possessed fire and made flint implements. Though ancient, he was anything but an ape.

"The Heidelberg skull, which resembled the Neanderthal remains but was still more markedly simian in general features, had also a capacious brain case and is believed to have belonged to a creature with comparatively high mental development. The Neanderthal man is placed some 300,000 years back, while the Heidelberg skull is presumed to date to a doubly remote time.

"The prehistoric remains found by Dr. Dubois in Java, the bones of Pithecanthropus, as he has been called, were of decidedly earlier geological date, as indicated both by their surroundings and by their own features; the brain case was small and the cranial traits were otherwise more apelike than those of any other known remains. 'All the structural characters of Pithecanthropus, so far as we know them, are exactly of the kind we expect to find in the early ancestral types of man.' The unearthing of the Java man pushed the date for the origin of the human type backward another period of a few hundred thousand years, or into the Miocene epoch of geological time.

"The chain linking modern man directly with an early type similar to the gorilla or chimpanzee seemed to be growing strong until, in 1912, the bones of an ancient man of another type were discovered in England in the Piltdown Cave. This, according to Dr. Arthur Keith, who is as great an authority as can be found, is the 'oldest specimen of true humanity yet discovered.' The brain of this being was, in size, at least, up to the modern standard, but otherwise the bones are 'the most simian recorded.'

"According to Dr. Keith's reasoning, we can no longer consider all these ancient remains as linking us in one line with our apelike ancestor, but in his restoration of the family tree, the Java man, the Neanderthal and Heidelberg men, the Piltdown man and modern man have all sprung from the same original stem, which dates back some two million years to the oligocene epoch, when, in turn, it diverged from a parent stem from which the great orthograde primates, and earlier, the small primates and monkeys are developed.

"Although these early remains are few, and their restoration is not without difficulty, our notions of the age of man and the steps of his evolution have been much modified by the information they disclose. It is certain that there exists today on the earth, in the person of the Australian native, a type of human being as low in brain case capacity, and in mental development, as any of the types revealed by the prehistoric remains, for, while even the Java skull had room for about 1500 cubic centimeters of contents, the skull of the aboriginal Australian has a capacity as low as 930 cubic centimeters.

"As Doctor Keith puts it, there are living remains of man in Australia older than any fossil forms of modern man in Europe. It is not impossible that these living men are direct representatives of the type from which even the fossil types sprang and which has persisted, though the latter have disappeared from the face of the earth. They may also represent the stock from which the living races, African, Mongolian and European, have developed.

SOMEWHAT PERSONAL.

Henry L. Rennick of the Associated Press office in Chicago, who has been detailed to duty at Petrograd, was married on July 27 in Springfield to Miss Marie Goulet, society editor of the Illinois State Register. Mrs. Rennick will remain in Springfield for six months, after which she will join her husband in Petrograd. Mr. Rennick was formerly city editor of the Springfield (Ill.) Record. During the last session of the Illinois Legislature he was assistant to Thornton Smith, manager of the Associated Press legislative bureau in Springfield.

Rev. Bertram Smith and Rev. Francis Wrigley have just completed twenty-six years of their partnership in the pastorate of the Salem Congregational Church, Leeds, Eng., one of the pioneer institutional churches which has been continuously successful. Thirty-seven original members and one deacon are alive to recall the settlement of the two young friends from Yorkshire United College in 1891.

Three generations of ministers in one family were present in the First Presbyterian Church, Delhi, N. Y., on a recent Sunday, when the oldest, Rev. James H. Robinson, celebrated the fifty-fourth anniversary of his going to that church, of which he is now pastor emeritus. Dr. Robinson and his son, Rev. W. Cortland Robinson, occupied seats on the platform, while the former's grandson, Stewart M. Robinson, a senior in Princeton Theological Seminary, delivered an address. The father of Dr. J. H. Robinson was fifty years an elder. Three of his five sons became ministers and four of his seven grandsons are ministers.

At 77 years, Adolph L. Lowe, a former Kansas City resident, has reenlisted in Uncle Sam's navy. Mr. Lowe, a veteran of the Civil War and a resident of Virginia, was among the first to answer the call. He enlisted at Norfolk and is stationed there, a carpenter's mate, second class. Mr. Lowe was born in Woodenhausen, Prussia. In the spring of 1861 he left the merchantman on which he was sailing from Buenos Aires and enlisted in the United States Navy, being transferred at once to a ship in the harbor there. He served throughout the war. When Mr. Lowe presented himself at the recruiting station at Norfolk for enlistment the physicians prodded and hammered and pounded and then approved him.

Robert O. Foote has been made managing editor of the Richmond (Va.) Evening Journal, of which paper he formerly was news editor and dramatic critic. Mr. Foote, who is 33 years old, is a native of Iowa, but is more closely identified with Pacific Coast newspaper circles, having worked on Los Angeles, San Francisco and Pasadena newspapers for a dozen years.—[Fourth Estate.

Frank A. Vanderlip, who is chairman of the emergency division of the Resource Mobilization Bureau of New York State, named by Gov. Whitman, is a product of the Middle West. Educated at the University of Illinois and at Chicago University, where he specialized in economics, finance and history, and with considerable journalistic experience as a writer on finance for leading Chicago papers, he was brought to Washington and the Treasury Department in 1897, to act as private secretary to the then Secretary of the Treasury, Lyman J. Gage. Speedily promoted to be Assistant Secretary, Mr. Vanderlip served the nation until 1901, when he accepted a call to New York City to become a vice-president of the National City Bank, with important duties. In 1910 he was made president of this institution, and since that time he has been a major figure in national finance, attending strictly to business, however. He never has ceased to be a student, or to go at his problems with the method of research taught him in the universities, and at the same time he has shown unusual ability in making the bank which he controls gain in popular esteem as a progressive and tolerably disinterested corporation.

The Congregational Church, Saxton's River, Vt., recently observed the eighty-first anniversary of the birth of Rev. George W. Chapin, who has been pastor thirty-four years. In these years the membership has increased from eighty-three to 220. Two years ago Mr. Chapin desired to resign on the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination, but the church would not permit it.

How Many Languages are There?

[Unidentified:] It is said that there are more than 3400 languages, including dialects, in the world. Most of them belong, of course, to savage or uncivilized people. There are more than 900 languages used in Asia, almost 600 in Europe, 275 in Africa and more than 1600 languages and dialects which are American.

Women on Farms.

[New York Herald:] The so-called problem of farm labor has engrossed the attention of innumerable sociologists, investigators and theorists, who have produced little save a deal of speculative thought. Meanwhile a group of women in Westchester county have proved beyond all question that female labor is as adaptable to work on farms as it is to that in cigarette factories.

By establishing camps for instruction they enlisted in their scheme a number of young women temporarily out of work and taught them how to plant crops, fertilize the soil and destroy the weeds. Their pupils, most of whom had never done any outdoor work in their lives, entered into the spirit of agriculture with an interest and enthusiasm seldom exhibited by a "hired man," and it was not long before neighboring farmers began to apply at the camp for help in their own fields. It is said that no less than fifty of these girls are now employed at $2 a day.

The American man has always been noted for the quickness and ease with which he takes up a new form of labor or adapts himself to changing conditions. Now it would seem that American women have the same ability.

SCENE OF AIR RAID.

Harwich has One of the Finest Harbors on East Coast.

The National Geographic Society issues the following war geography bulletin on Harwich, the fortified English seaport recently attacked by a squadron of German airplanes:

"It is less than 100 miles in a northwesterly direction across the North Sea from Ostend, where the Germans have a strong base, to the English seaport of Harwich. Harwich is important not on account of its size, for it has less than 15,000 inhabitants, but because it has one of the finest harbors on the east coast of England and has for years been a popular port of embarkation for Belgium, Holland and Denmark.

"In times of peace there is a thriving passenger steamer service between Harwich and Copenhagen, Antwerp, Rotterdam, Amsterdam, Hamburg and Hook of Holland. Travelers from London, which is seventy miles by rail to the southwest, were accustomed to boarding their steamers for the continent at the Parkestone quay, the terminus of the Great Eastern Railway, two miles west of the center of the town.

"Harwich is situated on a promontory at the confluence of the Orwell and Stour rivers, the estuary of the two streams lapping the town's quays to the north and the waters of the North Sea lying a few miles to the east. It is protected by Landguard Fort, situated on a promontory to the east across the mouth of the estuary, and by numerous batteries.

"In addition to its passenger traffic, Harwich has considerable peacetime trade with Denmark, Germany and Holland, its exports consisting chiefly of cement, ironware, machinery, leather and fish, while its imports include woolen, cotton and silk goods, timber, grain and tobacco. In 1912 the value of its total water-borne commerce was in excess of $168,000,000, more than the total imports and exports of Philadelphia in 1915.

"The history of Harwich goes back many centuries. It is probable that the Romans established a station here, and in the time of the Danish invasions, before and during the days of Alfred the Great, it was a great military depot for the warriors from across the North Sea. The waters adjacent to the port have been the scene of several important naval conflicts, especially in the wars with the Dutch in the seventeenth century. Since the time of James I it has been a point of coast defense."

Changes in War Methods.

[Everybody's for August:] It is said that there have been more changes in the art of war during the past ten years—since the Russo-Japanese conflict—than in the previous fifty years; and more important changes in those fifty years than in the previous five centuries—since the use of gunpowder. Yet if the survivor of Antietam or Gettysburg were to accompany his grandson to the country's newest battle front, what would he find that is essentially new? From the same battlefields of France, twenty centuries ago, a war correspondent sent home to Rome accounts of certain armored engines of war which were battering the fortifications of Germanic towns into the dust over which now creep the "tanks" of today. Indeed, some of Alexander's special dispatches, read by the loiterers in the Herald Square of Athens 2000 years ago, told how a Persian inventor had fixed to the wheels of his chariots a scythe arrangement like that on the front of the tank—to cut through "barbed-wire" entanglements of the Greeks. This oldest war correspondent—as every schoolboy-reader of Caesar knows—spares no details of the war marvels of the day. Likewise the correspondents who told how Col. Jones of the Massachusetts Volunteers captured the Winan's steam gun. "It is ball-proof, can discharge from 100 to 500 balls per minute, and is destined to inaugurate a new era in the science of war." After all, the real novelty of modern warfare is the censor's blue pencil.

Friends of young men who are called to the colors can convey no finer compliment than by the gift of a

OUT OF THE AGES.

Tall clocks were made in England in 1660.

Solomon maintained a force of 1400 chariots (I. Kings x:25) by taxing certain cities. Jewish chariots were imitated from Egyptian models, or, perhaps, imported from Egypt.

Macedonia was the first part of Europe which received the gospel direct from St. Paul. The account of this journey through Macedonia (Acts xvi:10; xviii:15) is marked by copious detail and well-defined incident.

The jury was established by the Frankish kings, being introduced into England by the Normans at the time of the conquest in 1066. At first it was merely a royal prerogative, men being brought in to give what they understood to be the truth regarding a certain matter which was being considered by the king. Under King Henry II it became a regular privilege which was given to the people to use in the settling of their disputes. By the end of the twelfth century it was established, and it represented the collective knowledge of the community. By the end of the fifteenth century it was already similar to our jury of modern times, having become an important liberty of Englishmen.

Recent excavation, following the caving in of the bluffs overlooking the Mississippi River, at Riverside Park, near Memphis, brought to light a number of relics of Indian pottery, including a water bottle, a panel vase, pestles, hammers and arrow heads. The trophies of the art of the extinct mound builders have been added to the valuable Indian collection at the Cossitt library museum.

Of the four Reformed denominations in the United States, the Reformed church in America (Dutch Reformed) is the oldest; it has more than 700 churches. The Reformed church in the United States (German Reformed) is the largest, with about 1800 churches. The Hungarian Reformed church, organized in 1904, is the youngest; it has seventy-four churches. The Christian Reformed church in North America is third in age and size. It has 231 churches and 36,000 members.

Asmodeus (Tobit iii:8, 17,) is the same as Abaddon or Apollyon (Rev. ix:11.) From the fact that the Talmud calls him "king of the demons," some assume that he is identical with Beelzebub, and others with Azrael.

Michael, the first of the archangels (Daniel x:13, Jude 9,) is described in Daniel x:21, as "the prince of Israel," and in xiii:1, as "the great prince which standeth" in time of conflict "for the children of thy people."

The theologian says the only form of prayer given for perpetual aid in the Old Testament is the one in Deuteronomy (xxvi, 5-15,) connected with the offering of tithes and first fruits.

Straw was employed by the Egyptians for making bricks (Exodus v: 7, 16.) It was chopped up and mixed with the clay to make them more compact and prevent them from cracking.

Both wheat and barley straw were used by the ancient Hebrews, chiefly as fodder for the horses, cattle and camels (Genesis xxiv:25; I. Kings iv:28; Isaiah xi:7; lxv:25.) There is no intimation that straw was used for litter.

The use of fetters goes back to ancient times. Fetters were usually made of brass and also in pairs, the word being in the dual number. Iron was occasionally employed for the purpose. (Psalms cv:18; cxlix:8.)

The ancient Egyptians reaped their grain close to the ear and afterward cut the straw close to the ground and laid it by. It was this straw that Pharoah refused to give to the Israelites. It was because of this refusal to give the longer straw to the Israelites that they were compelled to gather "stubble." This was a matter of considerable difficulty, seeing that the straw itself had been cut off near to the ground.

The word "purim," the name of the great annual festival of the Jews, means "lots." This feast commemorates the preservation of the Jews in Persia from the massacre with which they were threatened by Haman (Esther ix.) They gave the name Purim or "Lots" to commemorate the festival because he had thrown lots to ascertain what day would be auspicious for the massacre.

DOCTORS MORE EFFICIENT.

British Officer Explains Acceptance of Men Once Disqualified.

[Kansas City Star:] In a recent investigation by a committee from the House of Commons, Gen. Sir Alfred Keogh, director-general of the British army medical service, declared that while the department had been laboring under difficulties imposed by the lack of experienced army examiners, he was aware of no irregularities in the examination of men under the military service (review of exceptions) act.

"When war broke out men were taken for medical examination to local practitioners, who could not possibly know the requirements of the service," he said, "and the consequence was that a large number of men was recruited whom the authorities would not have thought of considering in peace times."

With such a corps of examiners, Sir Alfred declared, it was impossible to attain a common standard, and this explained the fact that frequently men rejected by one board were accepted by another. "Many men were passed who ought not to have been passed," he admitted, "but, on the other hand, a great number of men were rejected who ought to have been passed under the category system. It was very difficult to get the medical practitioners to understand that a man who could do anything in civil life could do that thing in the army."

The fact that the proportion of men passed by later boards, after having been rejected by examiners at the beginning of the war, steadily has increased during the war, Sir Alfred attributed to the increased efficiency of the boards, but vehemently denied that there had been any lowering of the standards for acceptance.

Didn't Care to Ride.

[Everybody's Magazine:] In a small southern city the first airship exhibition was about to be held. A large crowd was on hand, among them being an old negro man. The aviator inspected his machine for the last time, took his seat, started his motor and was soon soaring above the crowd. The old negro gazed upward very thoughtfully for a minute and then was heard to exclaim: "Sho thing dey don't need no Jim Crow cars on dem things."

THE GRANDMOTHER'S LAMENT.

BY JENNIE VAN ALLEN.

I'M LIVING my life over again.

For the third time I am sending my best beloved to war.

The old agony again grips my heart as I look into the son's son.

"Of course, grandmother is sorry to have him go!"

Over and over the words ring in my ears and hammer on my "Grandmother is sorry, but she's old and only for a little while miss him. But his mother and his sweetheart are draining of woe."

Yes, I'm old and there's not many years left to sip the and the gall. Not many years to grieve. Not many nights to thinking of my beloved who went to war—he was so brave so loving and tender to the little girl who clung to him—the who was so willing to give him to her country! but, oh, how I him—God, how I wanted him in the hour of my travail—in the bringing forth a man child—how I wanted to lay his boy in his young arms!

In the days of '61 women were sheltered, and a bit of a scrap of water color and a lilting song was all I had learned But suddenly I was under the Juggernaut. I became a member penny-saving class and, in the handicap of ignorance, I did that an unskilled woman's hands could do. Life was very hard coarsest toil; labor in the fields in seed time and harvest; would not do while I waited for the hour when my soldier boy come home.

I so wanted to have his son well and happy, and in my power I gave him the best that was in me. I taught him to and resourceful and to fight a man's fight. I taught him to do sordid tasks in a joyous spirit. He learned to do one thing at and to do it well, and we both waited eagerly for the the father who had never seen him.

I was spent with work and worn with anxiety when my came back, broken in body and deformed in soul, an unlovable loving man, hardened with hardship, seared with memories of battles, soured by hate and shorn of all ambition—never again the bonny lad to whom I gave my wifely love and deep devotion

We were worse than strangers, for war built a high wall us and, though my heart bled for all he had suffered, though I to comfort him and compensate him for his sacrifices, he would none of me. There was but one path for him, and it lay between little home and the ale house. Oh, those sorrowful years when a sodden clod from New Year's night to Christmas eve! In my less girlhood I vowed I would never live with a drunkard. But it because he had been a gallant soldier and been a unit in land. Little wonder that the wanderlust clutched his heart, der that he wasted his life, for war robbed him of his manhood, bition and of love.

And now he's in a soldiers' home. How I suffer when I say, "Nothing but a drunken soldier," when the boys in blue along the streets. Some woman's heart has been torn with sorrow. Better for her and for him had he died on the field for there is no pity for the maimed body, the irresolute, man who sits around year in and year out spinning his yarns ing the little that remains of life. If I were a man I'd lift my the soldier of '61. O God, what a price he paid when he went and we cannot honor him enough. I send a benediction to and to the women of the world I give the message, "Death is greatest sorrow in war."

And then my boy went to war.

My blessed boy whom I gave to the girl of his choice. Why mothers be selfish when their children find their heart's desire? wedded life would have been spoiled had my mother grudged happiness of loving and being loved. It is the divine right of man soul, and I would rather have taken the light from his the blood from his veins than have withheld this joy from my was never so happy as when their baby came and they with me.

My heart failed when my boy come in the twilight and great ship had been sunk in Spanish waters and our soldiers in the sea. Before he spoke the word I knew that, as a soldier's his fighting blood was aflame for vengeance.

In the gathering gloom he spoke reverently of the bitter that blighted our lives and he made a solemn vow as we sat hand.

"I know what you fear, but I pledge you my word that I back as clean as when I go. I may have a mangled body, but my life, my ideals will be the same as the day I leave you. I penalty of being war-cursed—I have suffered and I will never

And finally he went away—can I forget it? His wife's arms around his neck and his lad clinging to his coat. It seemed soul and body would part when he took me in his arms and the last kiss, the last embrace. And then the old Bible phrase to his lips as he put his wife's arms around me, saying " mother!" And we two have lived together all these years, for never came back. We do not know, and it really does not matter his body lies. Again I say death is not the worst sorrow: to have the years come and go and always hope that the day ing when he will come again—every footfall, every shadow beloved. But I can bear this better than the awful suspense night falls and the earth is being lashed by the storm to wonder whether he is sheltered or whether I will have to go the freezing cold and uncover him and drag him home as I so many times to his father when he lay by the roadside.

And now my boy's boy is going to war.

At first I bitterly rebelled at the thought of his fighting on soil. If the foe had sailed into our harbors and shelled our would have dug a trench with my bare hands. Why should the wars of other nations? Why should we be caught in the of their disasters? But finally I understood that it was my war war and our war. We're spared the horrors of invasion: the devastation, our women from unspeakable woes, our aged from and our children from starvation.

And now I am willing to have him go; glad he is trained machinery of war; glad he was a Boy Scout; glad of every tary training he has ever had; glad he has learned to obey he can swim and row and march without weariness; that he anything and will never need a pipe or a flask. I am glad the States government is safeguarding our boys from the perils beset the soldiers of every age. I am so proud of the new how I hated the shoddy blue that dropped to rags! I'm so soldiers are well shod and are taught how to care for their our soldiers suffered with the shameful shoes! I'm so glad be well fed—no wonder the soldiers of '61 are always hungry when we remember the war rations furnished by army contractors glad they don't all have to march; that they can drive the Red Cross ambulances, and win their honors as aviators; trenches are already prepared, and that the great war machine perfect as work and years of scientific thought can make it. of everything that makes the life of our boys a little safer, a bearable.

My son's son has bid me good-by—a soldier's son and a grandson. I'm proud of him. I'm glad he's going to war, your my war and our war. I send him with a benediction. I've there is a God in Israel, a God of Battles, a God who careth God who will keep him in the hollow of His hand.

Two of my soldier boys have marched away with their upon my lips. But I let my son's son kiss his sweetheart last saddened women. The precious girl, how my heart aches for has nothing but his kiss! God was good to me to give me carry close to my heart in those months of awful loneliness has nothing, not even a name, nothing but a promise and a

But, oh! how I wish she wouldn't say: "Of course, sorry. But she's old; she can't miss him; she can't want him him."

Yes, I'm old and I feel so old, so terribly old and forsaken for my son's son, who is the core of my heart, has gone to war.

But it's our war, and my dim eyes will soon see the King glory. I will lay aside my crown of thorns forever. There scars where my hands and feet have been nailed to the cross heart that has been pierced by the sword of my soldier boys to ache. The battle for my soul's freedom has been fought the victor!

An Experiment in Optics.

[Thomas W. Benson, in Popular Science Monthly:] An interesting experiment in optics may be performed in the following manner: Take a bit of hard graphite such as a lead pencil and hold it in the tip of a candle flame until it is completely covered with soot. It will then appear black in the air, but lay it in some water, completely covering the lead part, and it will appear like silver. The explanation of this phenomenon is that the water is unable to touch the object, due to the surface tension and lack of cohesion. The water then acts like an unsilvered sheet of darkened glass, reflecting the light.

while Thomas Santschi, who was recently seen to great advantage as the monk in "The Garden of Allah," is seen in the role of Stephen Brice.

Miller's.

Admirers of Virginia Pearson will have an opportunity to see their favorite in a strong emotional role at Miller's Theater this week. The story, produced by the Fox people, is called "Wrath of Love," and while the photoplay may not deal entirely with that gentlest emotion, it promises, for the sake of good drama, to portray in vivid manner the green-eyed monster that so often accompanies Cupid on his hunting expeditions. The plague of jealousy grips the heroine's heart until she becomes obsessed with false ideas and is wildly, unreasonably suspicious of every move her sweetheart makes. The added attraction at Miller's this week is a Fox film comedy called "A Soft Tenderfoot," featuring Tom Mix and his daredevil companions.

Garrick.

Sometimes a very ordinary actor or actress is made popular purely through pull and advertising. William S. Hart does not belong to this class. Like Fairbanks, Walthall and many others, Mr. Hart won his way to fame through merit achieved by a great deal of hard work combined with natural talent. Beginning today Mr. Hart appears at the Garrick for a week in the play that probably did most to make him famous, namely, "On the Night Stage." It is a thrilling story with rapid-fire action and a world of human interest, and the star is supported by Robert Edeson, Gladys Brockwell and Rhea Mitchell.

Palace.

A story said to equal in interest "Melissa of the Hills" and an actress equally as popular as Mary Miles Minter is the offering at the Palace this week. The title of the photoplay is "The Message of the Mouse," a strong drama from the pen of George Randolph Chester, and the star in the leading role is the dainty Anita Stewart. The production was directed by J. Stuart Blackton and is a story of high finance, foreign intrigue, love and hate and all the other plots, situations and emotions that go to make up that clash of wills and personalities known as drama. The added attraction is a Christie comedy called "Suspended Sentence."

Superba.

When it came to a showdown on a mid-Pacific island, a boatload of wave-tossed refugees found out the true natures of one another. The philanthropist was found to be utterly selfish, the millionaire proved himself a truly kind-hearted creature, the gay young man became a manly fighter for the weak and the social butterfly began to take a keen and genuine interest in her fellow-sufferers. Such are some of the interesting developments in "The Showdown," the featured photoplay at the Superba this week, starring George Hernandez and Myrtle Gonzalez.

Wanted to Cinch His Job.

[New York World:] "I should like a day's shore leave to attend to some personal business, if you please, sir," said a junior lieutenant, saluting, to Capt. James G. Ballinger of the Naval Coast Defense Reserve recently.

"Your private worries are of minor importance now, as you are in the navy—however, fill out an application," replied the captain.

"I worked seventeen years to get the job I now hold," said the lieutenant. "It means a good deal to me, as I want to get things straightened out before going to sea. I would like to have the job again in case I come back after the war, as it is a fair one. If you say so, sir, I will withdraw the request." He was turning away when Capt. Ballinger asked:

"What's your name and job?"

In due course of time his one day's shore leave will be granted. Lieut. Vanderbilt having filled out the application.

SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE EVADED HIS TEUTONIC NAME.

Late Actor Was so Intrinsically English That People Even in War-time Anger Forgot That Their Stage Favorite Was of the Hated Race—Had a Weakness for Flattery and Love Jokes. Typical Anecdotes.

BRIAN PHILLIPS
In the Boston "Transcript."

LONDON, July 6.—The passing of Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree—with a suddenness that adds an unnecessary tinge to public regret—had in it something not altogether out of keeping with his life. It fell in a period of world-crises when the stage had successfully asserted itself as no mere channel of frivolous distraction, but a whole-hearted contributor to the forces in the field, and a healthy influence in lightening their few leisure hours in a congenial way. If Sir Herbert had had a son, depend upon it, he would have been as prominent in offering his services as the actor himself was whenever benevolent works were going forward, and to the extent of this active participation in whatever good was going, Sir Herbert typified the profession he adorned. He had become so much a part and parcel of English life that people forgot his Teuton origin or the ingenious process by which he sank his real surname, and added another of a more English complexion by translating the second half, for Tree is simply the Anglo-Saxon for the German "bohm" or "baum." Undoubtedly Sir Herbert drew into his temperament and mentality certain strains of German origin, especially his thoroughness and application; his fondness for bending authors and actors and everybody else in deference to his own will; and his passion for regarding the theater as the propagator of ideas, patriotic, social, logical, esthetic, and the rest of it.

THE TOUCHY SNAIL.

But it is well to remember that Sir Herbert had an older ancestry than Germany enjoys, and he drew his derivation from the race that compiled the Old Testament. You may remember that in one of his earliest public addresses, he enlarged upon his favorite text that the Jews were (like the Irish) one of the two most passionately and giftedly dramatic races in the world, as a long lineage of actors and playwrights, operatists and managers is extant to attest. To the Jew's flair for business and art combined, and the union of exceptional faculties with uncommonly shrewd taste, Sir Herbert added the serviceable endowment of a vigorous constitution and an enviable energy. Few men of the profession, even in these days of triumphal tours, had traveled so widely, and one of the last products of a fluent, incisive and busy pen was a series of impressions of American life during the transition of the United States from the state of neutral to an active participant and enthusiastic ally. It is even claimed that his eloquent speeches out West in vindication of the Allies' cause contributed appreciably to the education of his western colleagues in the rights and wrongs of the war, and there was therefore an element of poetic justice in this enlistment of a truly liberal mind against the modern barbarization and perversion of the race from which his name betrayed his territorial origin. He was not the first or last artist of that derivation by any means who renounced the German race, but he was free to declare that he abjured not so much his allegiance to its older ideals as its right to claim service or sympathy from any apostle of progress in its modern manifestations. And if Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree had survived the present struggle he would have had the opportunity to welcome many a deserter from the camp of Kultur, whose conversion has been all too slow hitherto, but is surely being hastened as the monstrous fabric of Teuton pretensions is crumbling to its inglorious fall.

COMFORT IN THE THEATER.

One must suffer to be splendid, says the French proverb, and in the same vein the humbler London playgoer of a generation ago might ruefully exclaim as he rubbed his aching bones, that it was necessary to suffer in order to be amused. Gradually as the "variety" hall laid claim to the coveted designation of theater, and went ahead in the race of competition by adding comfort and attractiveness to the privilege of freedom in dress and demeanor, the "legitimate" houses contrived to make some hesitating steps towards improvement. But it was not until Sir Herbert built His Majesty's Theater and offered the public roomy gangways, luxurious seats, and "bookings" (that is to say, reserved seats) in the more popular regions of the house, that the era of the modern theater in London could be said to have arrived. While English theatrical experts were debating abstract questions like state endowment and the advisability of reviving the old stock system, Continental audiences throughout Europe were enjoying advantages in repertoire and accommodation which were denied to London audiences who, for want of a government subsidy, were paying a vast deal more for their comparative discomforts. The London County Council was very properly attending to the old evils like insanitation and the risks of fire, and these old dangers, thanks to its energetic action, have since been remedied; but it remained for the acting-managers to make the auditorium and its accessories worthy of modern demands and ideas, and in this judicious and necessary work Sir Herbert set a creditable example and the grateful pittites will long remember him as the lessee. While, however, the grateful pittite will remember him as the lessee who first gave us a comfortable reserved seat for half a crown (that is, little more than half a dollar,) there are many things to set on the contra side of the account. Tree had pretensions to being considered a patron of poets, but with the exception of his commissions to the expensive but essentially unpoetic dramatist, the late Stephen Phillips, Tree came out of these encounters more like the eminent Macready in his unworthy treatment of Browning than Irving in his princely demeanor towards Tennyson. Those acquainted with the circumstances know how Tree's promises and hope deferred played upon the mind of Coleridge Taylor in his poverty and sent him to an untimely end.

ONE OF IRVING'S JESTS.

So many stories are told of Sir Herbert, and the professional mime has made so free with his throaty utterance and startled pose, that he has grown to be a figure almost as familiar as was Toole's or Irving's, when we should have said years ago that this was impossible. One of the best greenroom yarns of him I know is one that was once told in his presence in the smoky atmosphere of the Press Club and I well remember his amusement. It related to a white horse he borrowed from the Lyceum in order to make his royal entry as Richard the Second, and when Irving asked him how the animal suited, Tree left an opening (unusual for him) by saying that the brute had no manners. It yawned, so it appeared, and Irving drily rejoined: "Ah, Tree, Tree, I always said that horse would have made a great theatrical critic." Another and more familiar yarn was of his notorious affectation of abstractedness. He went into a country postoffice and asked for a stamp, for a sheet of stamps. It was put in front of him, and planting a decisive finger on one in the middle of the pound's worth, he remarked dramatically, "That one I will take." He didn't get it, and come to think of it, I don't believe he ever said it, for the story is probably apocryphal; but nothing could be more arboreal.

WEAKNESS FOR FLATTERY.

But I can add a personal reminiscence for which I can vouch, for I have the documents. It fell to my lot once to interview him about his scheme of a school of acting, and few things in his life, even his crusading in America on behalf of the present war, so carried him away as this plan for converting all our stage-struck frailty, male and female, into imitation Trees, or at least a wilderness of shrubbery. In my article I casually mentioned that Garrick had brought Shakespeare to our stage and made him popular; Kean had introduced the art of "drama by flashes of lightning," as Byron said, and Irving had lifted to perfection the neglected science of stage production, whereas Tree had now added his quota to our theatrical progress by this project of an acting academy. He was not its originator, by any means, but let that pass. Tree in those days employed a capable and plausible factotum who acted for him in literary and other capacities much as the late Bram Stoker used to act for Irving, and this master of diplomacy carried out his chief's behests by making a considerable requisition on my disposition to oblige. He said Mr. Tree was inexpressibly charmed with the proof, and especially with my judicious tributes to his great predecessors. Instead of saying, however, that whereas they had done such and such a thing, he was about to do something else, would I mind saying that he had done all that they had done and more, and was now about to crown his unexampled career with this colossal achievement or something to that effect? The appeal was irresistible in its comic audacity. The factotum altered it as he desired, but I was careful to remove my signature. It remains a curious and instructive instance of the length to which the theatrical temperament will go in its appetite for praise, even praise of the homemade order.

TREE AND THE CABMAN.

Let us follow on with a story or two from other sources. For years Tree's friends have told of the time when he used to live right away in the West of London—long years before he built His Majesty's Theater, and capped it with that sumptuous sanctum high up in the dome, where he used to hold dazzling receptions, or brood and carefully prepare those equally-dazzling impromptus of his. Well, one midnight after the play he engaged a cabman to drive him westward, and in reply to Jehu's queries simply said "Right on." By stages they got as far as Hammersmith, Broadway, and the cabby, concluding he had a madman on his hands, or else a man with a wager on his mind, woke him from a reverie with the peremptory demand whether he had a home and where? Tree, thoroughly aroused, fired up indignantly, but his indignation took a curious form. He surveyed the whipster with scorn and asked, "Why should I tell a man like you where my beautiful home is?" Cabby gave it up; it was too early in the morning for conundrums in esthetics, so he took himself off with his fee, and Tree departed for his home, which was miles away, well content with this flash of inspiration. Asked in later years if the yarn was true, he said if not it ought to be; but I believe it is.

He had a power of withering repartee and sarcasm which came in handy now and then. At rehearsal once a juvenile actor with obsolete ideas interfered with suggestions and was told to fall back a bit, and then again. But, at the request, he pointed out that a step farther back would land him off the stage, and the sarcastic manager gaily answered, "That's right." I once heard a debater at a Playgoers' Club discussion try and pose Tree with some abstruse point on the ethics or metaphysics of the drama, and he clenched the situation with the sententous dictum, "Acting, my friend, is not a human impertinence, but a gift of God." Though this was but a variant on a saying he had used many times before, it served his purpose and left his interlocutor smothered with laughter and confusion. On another occasion, when a rabid interviewer waited upon him in his study and tried to buttonhole him, Tree made answer that he had been forestalled by a rival, but he did it in his own witty way by saying, "That man (pointing to a retreating figure) has taken your bread out of my mouth."

TYPICAL ANECDOTES.

Tree often recalled a first night some years ago, when he was reduced to a state of mental and physical pulp. At the end of the first act the brilliant and witty author entered the greenroom of the theater. "Well, and how did I get on?" the actor asked, hungry for encouragement. Scanning Tree's trembling and perspiring form, the author observed: "I see your skin has been acting, at all events."

A friend expressed astonishment that with so much upon his mind he was able to sleep at nights. "I fancy," Tree retorted, "you are confounding cause with effect. It is because I sleep well I am able to accomplish what I do."

"Again and again," remarked Sir Herbert once, "I have seen plays developed on the stage to their manifest advantage, and I am bold enough to contend that a first-class producer stands upon a level very little beneath that occupied by a first-class dramatist. The author who comes to rehearsal with an open mind, with a mind prepared to receive and act upon suggestions, can hardly fail to benefit by the fact. As an actor and producer I may be excused for claiming for actors a large share of the credit attached to any successful stage production. Let others say what they will, the artist must always have a substantial influence upon the situation; from his individuality, from his creative faculty, spring effects which authors cannot invariably determine beforehand."

Here are a few random dicta on stage aspects and affairs:

SAYINGS THEATRICAL.

There is one aspect of the stage career which, I think, is not sufficiently recognized, namely, the exercise of dramatic art as a pleasure to the player; a pleasure as great, I venture to think, as grouse shooting, horse racing, football, fly-fishing, or even bezique.

A theater must be run on autocratic principles; that it must be the work of one man, howsoever he may be assisted by capable lieutenants. Elsewhere he insisted, "My mistakes are my own. I have had the privilege of paying for them. It is of them I am proudest."

If the commercial managers of America had but served Shakespeare as they have served musical comedy he would not have been deserted in his old age.

Of a certain well-known actor he declared, "He had supreme reverence for the canons of art, but"—laying special emphasis on the last word—"he had no more personality than an Abernethy biscuit. He was one of the all-buts of life." Of a second—and one intuitively feels how faithful is the presentment—"His look is of one who feels himself unworthy to tie his own shoe strings."

GENERAL PRECEPTS.

If you give, give gladly; if you forgive, forgive with both hands.

Flattery makes the great little, the little never great.

Humor, he averred, is the onion of the human salad; it should be only half suspected.

Every man has the God he deserves.

There are people who are too ready to treat God as if he were a minor royalty.

In art I am a socialist; my impulse is to give whatever I have of value to the multitude; and the greatest of all multitudes is posterity.

Peace to his ashes! There are many greater performances of "Hamlet" than his where for many a year to come we shall think we see his overdressed figure sneak in with a characteristic sweep of the eyes, and kiss unobserved the hem of Ophelia's gown or lay a flimsy nosegay in her open grave. These were tricks and graces he never learned to deny himself, and much must be forgiven him because he loved the stage, or at least the footlights. He would have been inexpressibly gladdened had he foreseen that he was going to have his death occasioned by the same kind of accident as the late King Edward—a fracture of ligaments at the knee and a fall downstairs in consequence. But at any rate we have to mourn in him the sublimation of the Vincent Crummles type of actor-manager as Dickens held it up for sympathy and laughter, and whatever else Tree was or failed to be, he was a prince in the art of entertainment.

SOMEWHAT PERSONAL.

The same sermon he preached there sixty years ago was delivered at Cape Girardeau recently by Dr. J. C. Maple, but there was none among the congregation, save the doctor himself, who had heard it before. Dr. Maple's first pastorate after he had been graduated from college was at Cape Girardeau. For his first sermon he chose for his text, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." From the yellowed manuscript he gave the same sermon in the First Baptist Church, of which he is now pastor emeritus.

Traveling nearly 5000 miles to enlist in Uncle Sam's war service, Henry J. Volker, recently of Ossining, N. Y., has just returned there and joined the Engineer Corps. Volker, who is the son of Prof. James Volker of Ossining, was at Cerro de Pasco, Peru, a hamlet 14,000 feet above the sea level, when news that the United States had declared war reached him. He hurriedly made his way to the lowlands and then by railroad and steamship reached home.

The oldest and most vigorous centenarian in Florida, Maj. James Monroe of Jacksonville, only surviving son of President James Monroe, celebrated his one hundred and first birthday recently. A small pension from the State, which he gets for having served in the Confederate army, is Maj. Monroe's chief support. His home, a dilapidated houseboat, is drawn up on the bank of the St. John's River, in the heart of Riverside, the most exclusive residential section of Jacksonville. Maj. Monroe wears his years lightly. He is sprightly, works in the gardens of the wealthier residents of the Riverside section, and is a favorite with the children, for whom he has a constant fund of stories relating to the Mexican War, the Civil War and ante-bellum days. He has been married three times and has lost five sons fighting for this country.

The Rev. F. C. Gonzales, pastor of the Fountain Park Congregational Church, St. Louis, will spend two weeks of his vacation harvesting on a farm in Northern Iowa. He has suggested that, because of the shortage of farm help this way of spending a vacation might well be adopted by all clergymen possessing or wishing to attain good health. Already Dr. Gonzales has planted an acre in St. Louis county to potatoes, corn and beans.

Lord Donoughmore, who was a member of the commission which recently made report on the operations in Mesopotamia, is the sixth Earl of Donoughmore. Educated at Eton and New College, Oxford, he early took an interest in politics, and from 1903 to 1905 held the position of Undersecretary of State for War. He was chairman of committees, House of Lords, in 1911.

Vacations as War Gifts.

[Kansas City Star:] A Christmas gift to their country of one week of the holiday vacation by the students of the big State schools is proposed by W. A. Brandenburg, president of the State Manual Training Normal.

President Brandenburg has suggested in a letter to Gov. Capper that the opening date of the big schools be set back a week next fall. The week taken off at the beginning of the first semester would be made up by shortening the holiday vacation.

"The opening can easily be postponed without injury to anyone," President Brandenburg says. "Our institution is scheduled to open September 11. We can put the opening off a week just as well as not. Hundreds of students will have a week more to do useful work for their State and country at a time when their services will be needed. And I do not believe there is a loyal student in the State who will not be willing to cut his Christmas rest time just half in two as his offering to his country."

"Typhlography."

HOW BLIND ARE TAUGHT TO READ.

FRENCH SCIENTIST INVENTS EASILY-LEARNED SYSTEM.

The Braille Method Valuable but has Two Drawbacks—Not Easy to Learn—Dr. Cantonnet of Paris Describes the Advantages of the Newest Method.

[Dr. A. Contonnet, opthalmogist of Cochin Hospital, Paris, in La Presse Medicale:] Typhlography, cr writing for the blind, was made at first by printing the usual characters of the alphabet in relief, but in continuous strokes; this was the first process used, that of Abbe Valentin Hauy. Braille was the first to recognize that the fingers of the blind are not sufficiently sensitive to the continuous stroke, because this continuous sensation does not awaken the attention as when the disconnected stroke is used—that is, the stippled or dotted stroke; in effect, at each point of departure the finger receives a new sensation, which thus arouses the attention.

Braille writing has rendered immense service and it may be stated that his is the method which has enabled the blind to emerge from the intellectual night which aggravated so much the physical darkness in which they are plunged.

But the Braille method has two drawbacks. In the first place, it is a conventional writing; it must be mastered, and the study of it, far from easy even for the man in possession of his sight who may have some learning, it relatively very laborious for the blind man, especially for the blind soldier of this war, plunged suddenly into darkness, and who, in the majority of cases, is an unlettered rustic.

In the second place, Braille is written from right to left and read from left to right. The above difficulty is added to those resulting from the conventional character of method. Braille is thus difficult to master, proof of which lies in the fact that more than half of the war blind are incapable of grasping it. Some of these, to be sure, learn a little about it while they are at the school of "re-education," but little by little they drop the use of it when they return to their homes and end by forgetting it entirely.

It is difficult for the war blind to master Braille—the case of those born blind and those who gradually lose their sight is somewhat different—this apprenticeship is much more difficult for those who can see; and yet these are guided by their vision and it would seem that for them the task must be much easier; but the man who can see is a rich man in the sensorial sense—he will give well of his compassion and his money to the blind, but they are few indeed with the power of sight who, in the midst of their affairs, will make that sustained effort which is necessary to the mastery of Braille. There are a few philanthropists in every city who, possibly, have taken the trouble to tackle Braille, but it ends there.

MUST HAVE MEANS OF WRITING

Now, presently, the blind soldier must be able to return to his village, there to take up some trade or vocation whereby he may add to his pension. He must then be able to correspond both with his clients or customers, and with those who supply him with raw materials. Now among all these eventual correspondents not one, or scarcely one, will know Braille, even admitting that the blind soldier knows it himself, which, as we have seen, is not so in the majority of cases.

Therefore, while recognizing the great benefits of Braille, we must needs conclude that it does not lend itself in practice to an easy correspondence between the war blind and their more fortunate fellows.

Hence I have been conducting a research, with the encouragement of M. Brieux of L'Academie Francaise, for some means of contriving a writing in relief, in dots, and in the familiar characters.

I have arrived at an extremely simple process. I have had a copper reglet constructed at slight cost which permits of sixteen letters or signs on a line. (My disinterestedness in the manufacture of this reglet permits me to say that it is set up by the Foucher establishments, No. 62 Boulevard Jourdan, Paris, Fourteenth Arrondisement, now manufacturers of the Braille planchette.) Each letter comprises three grooves, in each of which three points or dots can be punched; thus, there is for each letter a maximum of nine possible points; by the arrangement of the points pricked all the letters can be traced out, also punctuation marks and numerals. The letters are all capitals except the B, the N and the Q. Each numeral is indicated by as many points as there are units in the numeral (one dot for No. 1, two dots for No. 2, etc.; a symbol (three slanting dots,) meaning "numbers begin," is inserted in the text before the numerals or mathematical symbols start; a similar sign, but inclined in the opposite direction, meaning "numbers end," indicates that mathematics have concluded and ordinary writing begins again.

An extremely short training period is quite sufficient to learn this process of typhlography:

To write: My reglet is put in place over the Braille board; a sheet of tough paper is inserted between the frame and the undulated metal plate and the writer begins to punch with the marker the dots necessary for each letter in the three grooves corresponding to that letter: when these letters have been drawn the writer then moves to the next line; when one line is finished the following line is traced without moving the reglet, for the latter allows for two ranks of grooves, permitting the writing of two consecutive lines. This done, the reglet is removed so that the next two lines can be written, and so on.

READING THE TYPHLOGRAPHY.

To read (reading for the man with sight.)—He reads from the side of the paper where holes have been made by the marker; he reads, then, from left to right, in the sense in which the text has been written. But he has an advantage over the man who must read from the side of the projections; these are found, of course, on the under side of the paper. If, then, the reader turns the paper over to see the projections, he reverses the meaning of the writing and thus falls back into one of the inconveniences of the Braille writing. To avoid this it suffices to look at the projections of the letters in a mirror: two negatives equal an affirmative, and we recover the sense of the writing and are able to read from left to right. It is a case of rea mirror.

(Reading for a blind blind man cannot, for a goo avail himself of a mirror, still be able to correct the of the letters. There is a ple way of doing this. It necessary to slip the punctu under the Braille tablet; the neath face of the paper wi remain the underneath fac the finger of the blind read the projections from l right; that is, in the sense i they were written.

If now we wish to establ short parallel between Braill ing and my method we arr the following conclusions:

First: Braille has the adv of being already known ove whole world. The Braille regl mits twenty-three letters to and so it would require tw three-quarters sheets to wri my process what Braille ca on two pages. Braille havin one medium of three and points to letter, while my p requires a medium of four and half points, can be writte read more rapidly than my by a subject equally well tr

"Secondly: But if my proce the inconvenience of requiri use of a little more paper, written and read a little les ly. it has, on the other hand advantage which seems to me mous. It permits, with an ap ticeship of ten minutes for can see, and an extremely sho prenticeship for the blind two hours at most,) an easy spondence between the blind and anyone else. The insig price of my reglet is anothe vantage. It will no longer b rare philanthropist who corr with the blind man; anyone will can correspond with him out being scared off by a te prenticeship. These brave men have given the most preci their senses in our defen thus be able actually to corr with their fellows and equa only with a few rare initia

I must insist upon the fact extreme rapidity of trainin this process of typhlography.

I add that my process Braille writing are perfectly istent, and that Braille wil be an extremely valuable for the correspondence of the between themselves; it among other things, the wri music: I am just beginning search to the end that my may perhaps be extended t cal notation.

Want Half Million New Members, Two Million Dollars for Benevolences, and Recruits for Ministry—A Propaganda of Pilgrim Principles.

CONGREGATIONALISM has hitched its wagon to the pilgrim year. Taking advantage of the fact that 1920 is the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the pilgrims at Plymouth, the denomination which gives allegiance to the religious ideas brought over in the Mayflower is now in the midst of what it calls the "Tercentenary Programme." A substantial sentimental and material advantage will be derived by the Congregational churches from the popular interest in the tercentennial of a historic event that bulks large in American [illegible]

Were it not for the war the forthcoming event would already be figuring largely in American thought. The State of Massachusetts and the town of Plymouth and the Mayflower descendants and the Congregationalists all have commissions at work for the proper celebration of the occasion. The Red Men will erect a statue of Massasoit, the friend of the Pilgrims, upon Cole's Hill. Plans for a national exposition at Plymouth have been abandoned; but it is expected that a great memorial hall will be erected in Plymouth where national conventions may be held. Plymouth Rock itself will be taken from its absurd canopy and the surroundings will be made more natural and closer akin to the original conditions. Some sort of memorial will be put into the Church of the Pilgrimage and Cole's Hill and its grounds will be more suitably improved and beautified.

AT THE PILGRIM SPRING.

There is a literal pilgrim spring that is shown to visitors to Plymouth, but the plan of Congregationalists—and the scheme is already in operation—is that all of the churches shall drink anew of the spring of the spirit of the pilgrim fathers—and pilgrim mothers, for no tercentenary article or discussion would be complete without the old saying that "while the pilgrim fathers endured the rigors of the wilderness, the pilgrim mothers had to endure the pilgrim fathers as [illegible]

This does not apply to preachers only. All sorts of ingenious methods have been devised for the retelling of the pilgrim story to all ages and classes of the church membership. Historical pageants have come into vogue. The material is being used in Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Societies. A large body of literature has been built upon it.

ADVENTURERS FOR CHRIST.

A striking editorial in The Congregationalist stresses this first item in the tercentennial programme, making one thing: "They were adventurers. They were not reckless adventurers and freebooters, but adventurers in the highest sense of the term. They were willing to turn their backs upon familiar and endeared scenes, and relationships, and to go forth, not knowing whither they went, but, because they had the vision of a free church in a free country, knowing to a certainty why they went.

"Oh, that this adventuring spirit would take possession of hundreds of our churches! 'Would that some holy purpose to dare something great for Christ would pierce the crust of conservation and open up new channels of service.' The [illegible] is often the enemy of the progress in the church life of today. It shrinks from new methods and new undertakings because 'we always did it in the old way.' We admit that a change might be desirable, but we postpone to a more convenient time beginning the effort to bring the change about. If that cautious temper had prevailed at Delfshaven 300 years ago we should not have heard of the Mayflower, and we should have been celebrating at this time something else than its arrival at Plymouth."

MORE MEMBERS AND LEADERS.

There are about three-fourths of a million members of the Congregational churches in the United States at the present time. As the second item in the tercentenary programme it is proposed to add not less than half a million new members by the end of the year 1920. This would put Congregationalism into the million member class, along with Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Disciples, and, recently Episcopalians. Of course the working out of this ideal includes an apportionment of increase among the local congregations.

All enlargement calls for increased leadership, so the official programme stipulates, "Third, that large numbers of our young people of character and ability be led to commit themselves definitely to a life work of Christian leadership through the ministry, or other forms of distinctly Christian calling. The obligation of our churches and missionary societies to provide fields of service, significant in opportunity and free from needless denominational competition, with adequate salaries and reasonable provision for disability and the needs of old age, is recognized as an essential part of this appeal.

MEMORIAL MILLIONS.

"Fourth, that before December 31, 1920, the churches of our fellowship attain an annual rate of giving from living donors, through our missionary agencies, of not less than the two million dollars contemplated by the apportionment plan.

"Fifth, that as a memorial of the Pilgrims there be established a permanent fund to be subscribed before December 31, 1920.

"The Commission on Missions will recommend to the national council of 1917 for final decision the amount of this memorial fund, and also the objects to be benefited by its income."

NEW DENOMINATIONAL IDEA.

Since this programme of Congregationalism has behind it a big historical anniversary, which is also being kept in civil life, it gives a natural impulse and uplift to the life of the church. The plan is in consonance with recent developments of religious progress made by large units. Denominations as a whole set for themselves great goals, as witness the current keeping of the quadricentennial of the reformation by all Lutherans; the five-year programme of the Baptists; the united missions programme of the Presbyterians; the $5,000,000 plan of the Episcopalians for a ministers' pension fund. All these are evidences that the era of parochialism is passing.

None the less the Congressional tercentenary programme makes provision for the largest expression of the interest of the local church in working out amid present conditions the genius of the Pilgrims. Some individual congregations have mapped out forms of community service which they deem an appropriate keeping of the anniversary. Those qualities of religion which the Plymouth pioneers especially represented will find modernized expression in many parts of the land. There has scarcely been a time in the life of the nation when the virtues of the Pilgrims were more seriously needed than now, or, one may truthfully add, none more genuinely exemplified.

Big Oats Crops.

[Kansas City Star:] Some exceptional yields of oats are reported in Republic county, Kansas. Frank Carlson, near Kackley, had a field that made ninety-four bushels to the acre. Joe Elliott, near Republic, reports a yield of seventy bushels. Jess Sothers, near Scandia, comes next with a fifty-three-bushel yield. The A. M. Poage farm in the same locality yielded forty-one bushels, while Dan Robertson, another Kackley farmer, reports forty bushels.

Last Week's Question and the Answer

Last week's query: "Who was the first prisoner of war?", is answered in Genesis, Chapter 14, in the description of the defeat of the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah. In Verse 12 the capture of Lot is told:

"And they took Lot, Abram's brother's son, who dwelt in Sodom, and his goods, and departed."

A Hymn of Liberty.

Thou corner-stone of nations,
Hewn by the people's will;
Strong watch-tower on the ramparts;
Bright beacon on the hill;
The cries of men in bondage
Rise up again to three,
Stand forth in power and glory
And arm for liberty.

As sweeps a mighty river
With currents deep and wide,
Thy many million children
Press united to thy side.
On sword and pen and plowshare
They pledge anew to thee,
To carry on the standard
And fight for liberty.

With holy ardor glowing;
Each son for thee aspires;
Upon their lonely altars
Thy daughters keep the fires.
Their eyes have seen the vision,
A world redeemed by thee,
Where free men own it happy
To die for liberty.

As Thou Wilt.

[This poem by Evelyn Dithridge was judged to be the best of 500 entered in a competition held by the St. Louis Art League.]

If in the sheltering circle of my arms
No little child of mine shall ever rest,
Nor I may feel the touch that thrills and charms
Of helpless, searching lips against my breast.
Yet for the sake of that beloved child
Of whom my dream is ever, night and day,
Teach me the mother spirit, tender, mild,
That from no childish need can turn away.

And if the love that I had held so sure
Grow dim and distant till it vanish quite,
Grant me that changeless love that shall endure,
Strong and sufficient for earth's darkest night.
Take from my heart all bitterness and pain
Until these futile, selfish strivings cease;
Use Thou the life I should but spend in vain,
And in the joy of service grant me peace.

Gulliver.

Old Mr. Gulliver once had a funny time.
He met peculiar people in a most peculiar clime.
The Lilliputians tied him as he lay in slumber deep;
They never could have done it if he hadn't been asleep.

Old Mr. Gulliver, when he began to wake,
Was very much astonished as he gave himself a shake.
It cost him some annoyance to untangle all the threads,
And put a little caution into Lilliputian heads.

Old Mr. Gulliver was like your Uncle Sam.
A lot of little fellows thought they had him in a jam.
But when his eyes were open to the mischief they had done,
He simply stretched his muscles and he had them on the run.
—[Philander Johnson in Washington Star.

"Hymn for Airmen."

The following "Hymn for Airmen," by M. C. D. H., appeared in the London Times and was set to music over two years ago, by Sir Herbert Parry:

Lord, guard and guide the men who fly
Through the great spaces of the sky;
Be with them traversing the air
In darkening storms or sunshine fair.

Thou who dost keep with tender might
The balanced birds in all their flight,
Thou of the tempered winds be near,
That, having Thee, they know no fear.

Control their minds with instinct fit
What time, adventuring, they quit
The firm security of land;
Grant steadfast eye and skilful hand.

Aloft in solitudes of space,
Uphold them with thy saving grace.
O, God, protect the men who fly
Through lonely ways beneath the sky.

Part of "A Hymn for Those Who Fly," by T. H., in the Aeroplane of August 22, 1912:

Lord of the last eternity,
Thou, by whose breath the worlds suspire,
Who rul'st the elemental three,
The air, the water and the fire,
O keep within thy gracious care
Thy servants flying in the air.
God of the wind, by Thy dread laws
Preserve their path, that in their wise
They, traversing the airy floors,
May give Thee glory in the skies.
O keep within Thy gracious care
Thy servants flying in the air.

Christine.

I suppose that where she is a hundred suns are shining,
And glorious birds are preening in a garden,
And there, perhaps, a breeze with perfume in it
Murmurs 'mid the blossoms where a linnet
Sings of Heaven.

There, I think, there must be lovely flowers—gold and blue ones—
Flowers in a garden, where little pebbled paths play hide and seek,
And poppies sleep and rose-buds peek
From the garden.

Ah—I know there must be fountains playing,
Always fountains playing, with their waterdrops displaying
Glistening opals in the eastern sun;
And sinking brooks that tremulously run
Through the glade.

There an orchestra is sighing all the arias of love,
And a thousand stars are clustered in the lambent blue above.
Such a paradise her presence makes,
That where she is sweet beauty wakes—
Such a maid.
—[Lewis P. Mansfield, in Boston Transcript.

Getting Even.

[New York Herald:] The Canadians hate snipers. Secluded perhaps half a mile from the trenches, where they could not be seen, the snipers would pick off the men. The only way the score could be evened up was by retaliation. This they accomplished in rather a novel way. The trenches then were only thirty-five yards apart, and a Canadian officer installed a phonograph on the parapet and set it going. Soon German heads bobbed up along the line, only to be met with a sharp fire from the Canadians.

Jiffy-Jell

The Supreme Dessert
Fruit Flavors in Vials

Jiffy-Jell is an extra-grade quick gelatine dessert. It is made by Otis E. Glidden, the famous gelatine expert. It is made with Waukesha gelatine—a very rare grade which costs twice as much as the common. It comes sweetened and in color, ready for instant use. The dessert is made in a jiffy by simply adding boiling water.

Unique Flavors

The flavors are made from the fruit itself. Not one is artificial.

They are highly concentrated, so they make a rich, fruity dessert. For instance, half a ripe pineapple is used in the flavor for a single Jiffy-Jell dessert.

All flavors come sealed in glass vials, so they keep their freshness until used. A Jiffy-Jell dessert tastes like fresh crushed fruit. You have never known anything like it.

8 Flavors in Glass Vials

Lime—for Salad Jells

MANY REPTILES OF CALIFORNIA.

The Horned Toad is Really a Lizard and the Terrapin a Mud Turtle, While the Water-dog is Merely a Salamander.

People call it a "horned toad," and it is really a lizard; people call it a "California terrapin," and it is really only a mud turtle; people call it a "water dog," when it really ought to be called a newt or a salamander, or, still more correctly, notophthalmus torosus.

Thus is popular error overthrown by Prof. Joseph Grinnell, director of the University of California museum of vertebrate zoology, and Charles Lewis Camp, in an account of the homes and haunts of the 116 species and subspecies of amphibians and reptiles native to California, just issued as part of the seventeenth volume of the University of California Publications in Zoology.

People who do not like rattlesnakes may regret to learn that six different kinds infest California—the Pacific rattlesnake, found from the Mexican boundary to 8600 feet high in the Central Sierra Nevada and commonest on chaparral slopes and in open country where ground squirrel burrows abound; the Texas rattlesnake of the Colorado Desert; the red rattlesnake, which inhabits rocky hillslopes in the extreme southwestern corner of the State; the tiger rattlesnake of the desert ranges of Inyo county; the pallid rattlesnake of the Colorado and Mojave deserts, and the sidewinder, or horned rattlesnake, which lives in the sand dunes of the Colorado and Mojave Desert.

California is rich in other strange and interesting serpents—the worm snake of Death Valley; the California boa, found between the Arroyo Seco, Mt. Wilson, and the Colorado Desert; the rubber snake (sometimes called the two-headed snake,) which ranges from the Yosemite to Northern California, dwelling in damp canyons and on forest floors; five kinds of garter snake—the marcy, Pacific Coast, elegant, California and western garter snakes—the banded burrowing snake, of which only two specimens have been found in California—in Owens Valley and at Fort Yuma; the desert burrowing snake of the Mojave and Colorado deserts and Eastern San Diego county; the Texas ground snake, of which only two specimens have been found in California—near Blythe Junction and near Heber; the sharp-tailed snake, which hides beneath stones in hilly country near the seacoast in Northern California; the western ring-necked snake, which lives in masses of dead leaves and beneath stones in shaded canyons, all the way from San Diego to Shasta county; four kinds of king snake—the coral, Boyle, black and California king snakes—the long-nosed snake, which lives in rodent burrows and in open country in the San Joaquin Valley and elsewhere in the State; the spotted night snake, which lives among the rocks, from the San Francisco Bay region to San Diego; the patch-nosed snake, which lives on sparsely-covered, arid hillsides in Southern California; the western yellow-bellied racer, which prefers grass lands and wet meadows, almost anywhere in California except the southeastern deserts; the red racer, the California striped racer, the Nevada striped racer, the faded snake, which lives in open, flat county in Southern California; the western gopher snake, found from end to end of California, except west of the desert divides, but not much in the coast regions; the desert gopher snake, which ranges the length of the State in the arid regions east of the desert and the Great Basin divides, and the California tantilla, of which only three stations have been found in California—near Fresno, near Mojave and near Los Angeles.

The turtles of California are four in species—the Pacific mud turtle, sometimes known as the California terrapin, which can be found in most of the streams on the Pacific watershed, from end to end of California; the desert tortoise, of the sandy stretches or the rocky hills of the Mojave Desert; the Arizona mud turtle, of the Lower Colorado River, and the Pacific leatherback turtle, native of the tropical Pacific and Indian oceans, of which two specimens have been captured at Santa Barbara and one off Point Loma, in San Diego county.

When it comes to newts, salamanders, frogs, toads, lizards and skinks the amphibian population of California is enormously varied. Of frogs there are the California, Sierra Nevada and Sierra Madre yellow-legged frogs, the western and the Nevada spotted frogs, the Oregon and the California red-legged frogs and the leopard frog. Then there are two species of the tree frog nyla—the Pacific tree frog, which dwells in rank vegetation and on trees in damp forests and in the burrows of various animals, from the edge of the desert to the Sierra Nevada timber line, and the Arizona tree frog, which lives on boulders and canyon ledges from the Santa Monica Mountains to the Mexican line.

As for toads, there are the great plains, arroyo, Rocky Mountain, California, northwestern, Nevada, spotted and Colorado River toads, and the Yosemite Park toad, found as high as 11,000 feet, in the meadows and lake margins of lofty Sierra passes. The American bell toad has been captured only a single time at an elevation of 5000 feet on Craggy Peak in the Siskiyou Mountains. The western spadefoot toad lives in open country from San Diego northward to San Luis Obispo.

Among the newts and salamanders are the Pacific Coast newt (commonly known as "water dog") abundant along the streams of the Pacific drainage; the Mt. Lyell salamander, of which only two specimens have been found, at an elevation of 10,800 feet, in Lyell Canyon, Yosemite National Park, in heather irrigated from surrounding snowbanks; the Oregon, yellow-spotted, Del Norte, arboreal, rusty, Shasta, island, garden, slender, tiger, long-toed, marbled and British Columbia salamanders and the Farallon salamander, a species of which exists nowhere in the world except on the South Farallon Island, offshore from the Golden Gate.

Then there are the banded gecko of the southeastern deserts, the desert iguana and lizards almost beyond counting.

Of all these varied creatures only the turtle is used by the white man for food. Yet the aboriginal inhabitants of California esteemed many of these amphibians and reptiles as dainty morsels.

His Great Achievement.

SAM DRANE LEFT WORLD A MEMORY OF LINCOLN.

THE death of Sam Drane, a year ago, would have passed unnoticed, but today his passing is of interest to the film world. Sam Drane registered on the screen just before he registered his last on earth. His registration was something worth while, for he created but one character, that of Abraham Lincoln, and that will live in many minds for many a day.

All his life Sam Drane had read and studied the life of Abraham Lincoln. All his life he took pride in having people point him out as the man who looked like "Honest Abe." Hawthorne writes of a man who studied the marvelous stone face for so many years that he borrowed something of the dignity and character of the face. Perhaps Drane unconsciously took on something of Lincoln's nobility of character.

When Winston Churchill wrote his famous novel, "The Crisis," he made the character of Lincoln stand out with conspicuous interest. The importance of getting a suitable Lincoln grew manifest as the scenario was being prepared for the big Selig drama. Colin Campbell and Col. Selig were in despair. They hunted the four corners of the globe for an actor who could look and act like Lincoln. When hope was all but gone Sam Drane in Draneville, Va., came forward and offered his services.

Partly because they were pressed for time and partly because Colin Campbell was impressed with the man's sincerity, Drane was given his big opportunity. He gave the screen a Lincoln so startlingly lifelike that even a closeup failed to disturb the Lincoln illusion.

After the picture was made Drane went back to Virginia to wait until "The Crisis" was released. Impatient as he was to see his faithful impersonation, he was convinced that his life-long ambition had been realized, too, for he had ever cherished a hope to live a life like Lincoln. Then Drane was taken sick. He couldn't get up again. He couldn't wait until "The Crisis" was put together, for another voice called him home.

There will be many of Sam Drane's friends who will sincerely regret that he could not have lived to have seen the one great work of his career, and while patrons at Quinn's Rialto this week will be commenting on the great work of the man who plays the part of Lincoln, they will ever have the sadness and greatness of the man in their memory. Sam Drane was great in that he was unknown. He was great in that he was unknown while he lived, and he is great because he has left the world a living picture of America's greatest memory.

CALLS THEM BY NAME.

Canary and Cherry, Flu Flu and Mary—Variety is the Spice of the Nomenclature Used by Fox Star for Her Gowns.

Virginia Pearson's gowns, which she has never gone to the trouble of counting, have been to her a great trouble, as well as delight. The trouble has been greatest when the drift of events causes a change of maid.

The famous William Fox star appearing at Miller's Theater this week in "Wrath of Love" never knew how essential experience is in a maid until she tried to get a new one to bring her a certain garment. Now that Miss Pearson's present maid has been with her for some time she is personally acquainted with every one of the innumerable gowns in the star's wardrobe.

Miss Pearson's system of designating these creations is more than novel. She doesn't number them; she names them. And when each new one is added to her collection she and the maid have a little christening party. After dubbing the dress some suitable name, which distinguishes it from others, it is always referred to by that name.

Although most of them have been worn in her various film dramas, it is questionable if anyone would recognize them from the names. Here are a few: Peach, Canary, Rippling Water, Cherry, Devil, Patriot, Tango Tea, Flu Flu, Salt and Pepper and Black Mary.

Odd to say, "Black Mary" is Miss Pearson's favorite gown. When asked to describe it she said it was like a night gown. But the reason she likes it so well is that she designed and made it herself out of cloth which was imported from France especially for her.

KOSLOFF HAS FAITH.

Noted Russian Ballet Artist Says His Country will Triumph as a Democracy—He Points Out the Peculiar Kinship with America.

In the ultimate triumph of democracy and the faith that is in the Russian people Theodore Kosloff, the famous ballet artist, who is sojourning in Los Angeles this summer, has the utmost confidence.

"My people will triumph over the difficulties now so threatening to the republic," he says optimistically. "There is a peculiar kinship with America that cheers me. The discovery of America and the evolution of the Russian ballet were simultaneous.

"And the two have kept pace equally. In America were wars, in the beginning, the rearranging of life and the establishment of new government and foundations. Thus with the ballet there were struggles, new foundations to be built, new forms, inventions and creations to be searched for that went even beyond democratic America into anarchy. And then came a time when each should learn of the other. America sent her commercialism to Russia and in return Russia sent her pulsating are in the ballet to America. The two have tempered each other and now political as well as artistic Russia has taken the place of the anarchists. Despite seeming differences, Russia is very like America. Cool culture guides and governs America; in Russia warm temperament of Asiatic blood sways affairs. That is why her arts, politics and life are so different from all the nations. But there is kinship, and, when you come to think of it, Russia's advance has been wonderful. It is now five years since her art revolutionized the world and five months since her politics astounded the world. From an absolute monarchy to a socialistic republic!

"I don't know what is to come, but I am proud and glad for Russia—for her art and for her friendship with America. And I feel certain she will ultimately come through the present storms one of the really big nations of the earth."

Couldn't Wait.

plain rough and tumble. Gerrard had at least the satisfaction of seeing Fairbanks adorned with a badly-bruised forehead. He himself is attending to a wonderful black eye and a set of sore knuckles.

Of course, he was slated to be beaten in the picture, but as he slipped out of the scene he was heard to murmur something about meeting all comers.

Twin Troubles.

Harrish Ingraham, while directing Baby Marie Osborne in "The Child of M'sieu," a Lasalida production, is also interested in the temperament of a new Buick roadster.

Buster Couldn't Stay Away.

Buster Collier, the clever son of William Collier, the comedian, is expected shortly at the Morosco studio. Buster is to appear with Jack Pickford and Louise Huff in a forthcoming production.

Rosie Rises.

Rose Carter, who has already won the admiration of Triangle-Keystone patrons as a member of the comedy studio's bevy of shapely bathing girls, was promoted to stardom this week and will play supporting roles in future Triangle-Keystone comedies under the direction of Reggie Morris.

Joey Sang New Tune Then.

Little Joey Jacobs, the three-year-old Triangle-Keystone star, like every other little fellow of his age, frequently gets into mischief. His mother brought him out on the Triangle-Keystone lot the other morning dressed in an immaculate white linen suit. A "dummy" keyboard for a "break-away" piano had just been painted and was lying on the floor of the set. Josey promptly sat down on it, transferring the black keys just north of middle C to his trousers.

Then Mrs. Jacobs arrived and the impromptu scene ended with mother playing on the black notes.

Sends Tipperary to Junk Heap.

Though Harry McCoy, Triangle-Keystone director, may not go to France to fight in the trenches, he is nevertheless destined to be heard of around the world, according to his friends. In other words, he has been tunnelling under Tipperary, so to speak. McCoy has been spending his spare time on a patriotic song which it is said is a winner.

Staged This for Fun.

Not all of the capers of Triangle-Keystone comedians are confined to the screen. Even away from the camera's eye, Ray Griffith and Lloyd Bacon, who have a Mutual Admiration Club in which the membership is limited to two, just can't make their comedy behave, but spend most of their spare time "framing" jokes on their friends.

The other day they called up one of their actor friends who was out of a job and Bacon said: "Hello, this is So-and-So of the Triangle-Keystone studios. I heard you were at liberty and would like to talk to you about a contract."

The incident was forgotten until one morning last week when they were dumbfounded to see their friend on the Keystone lot in make-up.

"Hello," Griffith said, in suprrise, "are you working here?"

"Yes," the player answered, "the engaging director called me up and told me he wanted to have a talk with me. I came over this morning and he gave me a contract without asking any questions."

It's a poor joke that doesn't work both ways.

His Own Afternoon Shadow.

Here's the latest one on Slim Summerville, Keystone comedian.

A crowd was gathered around watching the making of a street scene in a comedy when Slim darted into the camera lines.

"My Gawd!" ejaculated a bystander, "is that all one man?"

Safety First Note.

Triangle-Keystone Director Harry McCoy came on the lot the other morning proudly displaying a trench hat that was sent to him by one of his friends "somewhere in France." As a thing of beauty the steel hat doesn't live up to the Paris reputation for beautiful millinery creations, but as was explained in the letter accompanying the novel piece of headgear, it serves as a protection from flying shrapnel. The hat was sent to Harry by Corp. George Grant of the Field Ambulance Corps in France, and the Triangle-Keystone director is wearing it to work in, declaring that it is also good protection from the "break-away" vases and brickbats that sometimes miss their mark in the filming of a comedy.

Was it a Tooth?

Pearl White, star of the Pathe serial, "The Fatal Ring," is thinking of starting a museum. From admirers all over the world she is receiving strange and often very interesting souvenirs. Live animals, such as snakes, lizards, dogs and cats are among them. But the most interesting one, so to speak, is the one she never got.

She got a letter the other day from a British soldier in the trenches at the front, who speaks of enclosing a very interesting keepsake, which he has just secured from a German prisoner, in exchange for a pack of cigarettes. He doesn't say what it is, and now Pearl is burning up with curiosity, for you see there was a printed slip enclosed saying, "Enclosure removed by the censor."

Everbody's Doin' It.

The lure of the motion pictures is certainly irresistible. Otis Turner, Fox director, says so, and he should know.

In the new picture in which Gladys Brockwell is shortly to appear under Mr. Turner's direction, it was necessary to take a scene in front of a church. Assistant Director Ralph Theodore went out to scout for a suitable location, and found a church that would just suit the scene. Approaching the minister, he asked permission to use the exterior of the church for a scene in the Brockwell production. There being no objection, the day was set, and then the minister thought a while and said:

"I would rather you take the picture the day following.

"Why?" asked the director.

"Well," admitted the minister, coyly, "I am—ahem—very anxious to appear in it myself."

No Cut-up is Clara.

Clara Williams refused to give an eastern film the privilege of designating their product the Clara Williams Shaving Soap.

"Not that I am against shaving or soap," says Clara, "but as statistics show that 65 per cent. of the men shaving themselves cut their faces on an average of one shave out of two, I don't want my name to be in their minds at the time. Can't you imagine how they'd cut me, after that? Psychologically it is all wrong. No, sir, they don't name any shaving soap after me with my consent!"

Narrow Escape for Doris.

The sprightly and athletic Doris Pawn, who plays opposite Willard Louis in the latter's first comedy for William Fox, under the direction of Charles Parrott, had a miraculous escape from suffering severe injuries or death while out on location. Miss Pawn, who is a dare-devil horsewoman, was mounted on a spirited horse, and was told to ride down an embankment full speed onto a road in front of the camera.

After the situation had been explained to her by the director, Miss Pawn guided her horse to the top of the mound, and at the given word started down the hill. When she should have made her appearance a few seconds later, there was no sign of her. Parrott ran into the pathway and there found Miss Pawn lying on the ground, the horse having stumbled and fallen in such manner Miss Pawn's legs were pinioned beneath him. A call brought several of the assistants, who lifted the horse, releasing the girl. A hurried examination by a physician, who was summoned, disclosed the fact that Miss Pawn had sustained severe bruises on her hip and thighs and she owed her escape from broken bones to the fact that when the horse stumbled she fell on soft earth, thereby breaking her fall. After several days of attendance by a physician, Miss Pawn was again able to continue in her part of the picture.

Show the Lariat, Too!

If you don't believe this one, you can go out to Universal City and see the lariat that did the deed. At any rate it is claimed the deft hand of Pedro Leon, one of the cowboy aggregation at Universal City, saved the leading players of the company directed by Ruth Ann Baldwin from possible death and injury a few days ago.

The four-horse team attached to one of the old-time stages which was carrying the players to a mining camp ran away while descending a steep road. Something had frightened the horses and they increased their speed so suddenly that the occupants of the coach were thrown from their seats by the jolt that resulted.

The driver of the coach used all his strength to hold the animals back, but he failed utterly in his efforts to keep them in check. They rushed madly down the road.

Leon, who is one of the world's best riders and rope-throwers, was occupied nearby with another of the companies which was engaged in making scenes for a western picture when his attention was called to the runaway coach. Leon chanced to be mounted on one of the swiftest horses of the Universal ranch, and had his lariat with him. Spurring his horse up, Leon dashed to the scene, coming up with the coach as it reached the bottom of the hill. Swinging his lariat over his head for an instant, he let it go and landed it successfully, encircling the quartette of horses with a precision that could not have been more effective if the animals had been standing still. They stopped as suddenly as they had started, but of course Leon was dragged from his horse.

Jimmy Young Flits Back.

James Young has returned from Chicago, where he went to complete arrangements with W. K. Spoor for the production of "Hawthorne of the U.S.A." in film form. Young will begin active work on the photoplay at once.

Negotiations are under way between Mr. Spoor and the First National Exhibitors' Circuit for the purchase of the film by the latter.

Sings—But Doesn't Have To.

While any voice at all is of course superfluous in picture work, yet Kathleen Clifford, playing the lead in "The Twisted Thread" at Balboa, has not parked her lovely vocal accomplishments, but appears often on the stage at Long Beach and in Los Angeles on behalf of charitable enterprises.

More than this, however, Miss Clifford has a remarkable accomplishment, being nothing less than

Bullock's 11th Clearance

The Rainbow!

—Brilliant and distinct—of the sun of Bullock's 11th Clearance

"The One Sale of the Year"

—radiant upon showers of Opportunity—

—And the Pot o' Gold is REAL—It is tangible; it is true; it is the great, big, beautiful VALUES—that are here, there and everywhere all through the store—VALUES that are to make Monday a Great Day in the assemblage of great days of which August at Bullock's is to be composed.

—Did you ever see anything like it?

—Did you ever see such real joy, such glorious enthusiasm, such genuine approval of a sale?

—Did you ever see such numbers of buyers in attendance at a sale? And mustn't something of it all be due to the character of the sale itself—its difference—and its PERSONALITY?

—Bullock's Clearance is regarded as seriously by Bullock's, and guarded as carefully by Bullock's as are the standards and policies of the business itself.

—Indeed Bullock's Clearance has grown to be as important a part of the business as the building of Regular Stocks and SERVICE—So important a part of the business—so strong and big and wholesome a part of the business—

—That it should be considered rather

---An Institution

—Than a Sale—An Annual Institution, if you please—A Super-Sale—that dominates, not a day, not a week, but an entire month—the month of August—THE MONTH OF NOW—and that dominates because of your Knowledge of it—and your Faith in it—for there are thousands with you who also know—and believe—as the days just past have proven and the days to come will prove—

—There are VALUES—VALUES—VALUES—so many, many of them—that it seems almost futile to attempt the telling—and as though one should merely say—

—"No matter what you want, come to Bullock's for it Monday, and if you do not want anything come to Bullock's, anyway because— —of the great unusualness—and the large numbers of offerings—many of them so entirely unexpected as to be almost incredible—all of them measuring up—to the gauge mark of quality set by Bullock's"—

—And yet we have printed several pages—of items—Perhaps they may give you some more definite idea—

—No matter what else you may do—This One thing Do do—plan to be at Bullock's—Monday—for

In very truth it seems as though the flow of

"This Merchandise Niagara"

—Remember every section of the store is concerned, and come.

IN THE SUNSET GLOW.

BY FRANCES MARIAN MITCHELL,
Pasadena, Author of "Joan of Rainbow Springs," Etc.

"LAWS-A-MASSY, Nat, what be you doing? It surely did give me a turn not to find you loading up the mesa wheat."

Nathan Whitman looked up from the harness he was mending, and a slow smile crept up from his grim mouth to his troubled gray eyes and rested there.

"Well!" insisted the plump, elderly little woman, whose breath was coming quick and hard from her climb over the ridge between her home and the home of the man mending harness when he should have been busy loading his mesa wheat.

Nathan Whitman got slowly to his feet. He was a big, broad-shouldered man, straight as an arrow in spite of his sixty years, and he towered high above the bird-like little woman anxiously studying his rugged face.

"There was no use in me loading up the mesa wheat, Sally," he said slowly. "And there's no use in me going on with the threshing. Renfro's going to foreclose the mortgage and——."

"Surely not, Nat!" exclaimed the little woman, almost dropping the covered tray she had carried over the ridge to the man.

Nathan reached out for the tray. "Don't know what it is," he chuckled, his gray eyes twinkling, "but I can't afford to lose none of the good things. We'll talk after I am plumb full of good things I wouldn't have spunk enough left to kill a flea."

The woman's black eyes danced. "You can't guess what 'tis today, Nat. You couldn't guess if I gave you all day."

The man sniffed at the fragrance creeping up to him from under the snowy napkin. "Sally!" he cried, wonder giving way to certainty. "It can't be blueberry pie way out here in Californy—and 'tis too."

Lifting the napkin with a little dramatic flourish, the woman grumbled happily, "You do beat all for smelling out what things be."

The man looked beyond the little bird-like woman—beyond the hills of California—and the years slipped back into the past, one by one, until more than thirty of them were between this day and another day Sally had baked blueberry pie for him. She had been Sally Phelps then, not Sally Middleton, and her name was to be Sally Whitman when he came back from the war.

One by one the years closed up the gaps between that day and the present day. The first year recorded a short furlough at home during which he recovered from a flesh wound and spent wonderful golden hours with Sally planning for the little home to be theirs when the war was over. The only golden days of the next two and a half years for Nathan were the love letters which Sally wrote him. Then the young soldier was wounded in the head and was in the field hospital until the war was over. When he finally was able to return to his old home, he found that he had been reported dead and that Sally—his Sally—had been married for more than a year to his cousin, Ralph Middleton.

"She loved you with all her heart, son," the young soldier's silver-haired mother told him. "Folks say that old man Phelps never give Sally no peace until she promised to marry Ralph. The Phelpses lost all they had in the war, and Ralph promised to give them enough to keep the old folks the rest of their days when Sally promised to marry him. That's why she married him, son."

The young soldier's mother died a few weeks after the young man came home to her, and the heartbroken son went to California and homesteaded a section of government land.

Two years later Ralph Middleton and his wife and their three little children moved to California and took up a section of land just over the ridge from Nathan Whitman.

The year after Ralph Middleton died, Nathan Whitman asked Sally to keep the promise she had given him when she was Sally Phelps. Ralph Middleton had gambled away most of his fortune before he moved his family to California, and since he came to California he had borrowed money of the man he had so wronged until Nathan Whitman was compelled to mortgage his place to save the home of the sweetheart of his youth, and the overworked little woman whose youth had been sacrificed as it had because of the greed of the man she married to save her father and mother from want, was willing to keep the promise of her girlhood as the man whose love had never faltered was eager to have her keep it. She told her children how she wanted to keep the long ago promise—told them all of the story that they did not already know—and found in them more of the selfishness of their father than there was of her unselfishness.

More years passed. Sally Middleton kept her children together, and Nathan Whitman lived on alone in his roomy, comfortable house just over the ridge.

Before young Ralph Middleton married and went to Salinas to live, and before young Sally went to Salinas to teach school, all three of the children made life a burden for her because of her neighborly kindness to the man to whom they owed their home. The two older ones gone, the younger, easier-going son, Philip, said nothing to his mother about her neighborly kindness to the man to whom they all owed so much, but he would not give his consent for her to marry the man who had always loved her, and she decided to leave Philip alone because he was so like his father.

The years were all relived by the time he was again sniffing at the day's food offering, before the woman ceased her visioning of the years that lay between this day and that other day she had baked blueberry pie for Nathan Whitman.

"It's blueberry pie, sure as I live," declared the man, trying to make amends for his long silence.

"We be two plumb foolish old fools," trembled the little old woman. "Two plumb foolish old fools," she repeated fiercely, thrusting the tray into the hands of the man.

"Couldn't make that a mite better, could you?" grinned the man, crowning the big wedge of blueberry pie with a wealth of whipped cream from the squat blue pitcher he found cuddled up by the pie dish when he lifted the snowy napkin. "If we be two plumb foolish old fools, though, I reckon there's nothing more to he said."

The woman's lips quivered, and the man noticed, with a sharp pang in his heart, that the plump shoulders were drooped more than usual.

"He always can eat—no matter what happens," sniffed Sally, when he had finished the last of the blueberry pie, but the light in her eyes took all the sting from the words.

"I always will eat what you fix, Sally-bird—would if I was dying," retorted the man, with the look in his eyes that had always been there for Sally.

Sally smoothed her stiffly starched white apron over her neat brown print dress—the kind of brown dress that always made Nathan compare her to a little brown wren, and, truth to tell, there never was a more bird-like little woman than was Sally Middleton.

"Sally came home last night," young Sally's mother announced abruptly.

"Pshaw now! What made you bring me the pie, Sally? She'll nag you and nag you about it. You never said nothing 'bout the way she and young Ralph carried on 'bout your bringing me things to eat every day, but I heard 'em once just before young Sally went to Salinas to teach, and—well—I can't stand to have you nagged, Sally-bird."

Sally's softly rounded old cheeks flushed with as lovely a color as had been theirs in the long ago—a delicate, rose-flush that young Sally might well have envied.

"Jane Lowe gave me the blueberries last night, Nat. She brought them back from Ohio with her last week. They're the very first blueberries I've laid eyes on in more than thirty years."

"I was wondering where you got them, Sally-bird."

"Nat," faltered the little woman, laying a work-worn hand on the great, broad shoulder nearest her. "Tell me what you be going to do if Renfro forecloses."

"I was making up my mind about that, Sally, when you brought the blueberry pie. If I had money to fight him I would, because he hasn't given any of us a fair deal. The five years Tom Renfro has been in Surprise Valley have been mighty bad for the vally folks, Sally. He's going to foreclose on all of us this year, and——."

"You lost your place over us, Nat," quivered the woman, her eyes bright with tears. "And the children are going to take from me the place you saved for me."

"What do you mean, Sally?" The man's voice rang out sternly. "Aint the place deeded to you? How could they take it from you?"

"The place is deeded to me and the children, Nat. Don't you mind Ralph would have the deed made out to the four of us when you insisted on the place being in my name when you loaned Ralph that last thousand dollars?"

"Yes, I remember that, Sally," he answered grimly. "But I can't figure out how they could sell you out even so."

"They are all of age, Nat, and—well—they've done it. And—and I came over to tell you that I am ready to—to——."

"To what, Sally-bird?"

There came a gleam of youthful fire in the little old lady's eyes that made the man smile tenderly.

"You know what I mean, Nat Whitman," she snapped. "I be going to keep the promise I made you more'n thirty years ago. That's what I be going to do."

"Sally! Sally!" The man's voice was infinitely tender. "Sally-bird! My Sally-bird! I'm sorry the children did what they did to you, but, thank God for you at last."

"They told me I'd have to go to Salinas and live with Sally. They won't give me a cent of the money the place brought—they—they say I'm incompetent and they would have me declared so if I tried to force anything by law. They—they said they were going to take me clear away from you, and——."

"Don't tell me any more, please, Sally-bird. They are your children and I want to keep on loving them because they are your children, and I know there is a heap of good in all of them, but they just don't know what real love means. They think they love you, but—" he broke off suddenly, his rugged face becoming strangely old and stricken with pain. "Sally!" he cried hoarsely. "Sally, I ain't got $20 to my name."

"I've got two hundred they don't know nothing about, Nat. We'll have that to start on. Philip is going to get married this coming Sunday—never told me a word about it until last night—that's why they sold the place. Sally wants me to stay with her, but I've been bossed enough in my life, so—so——" she broke off with a silvery little laugh—"so, I'll just boss you the rest of my life."

The big man laughed happily. "It'll seem good to have you bossing me, Sally," he said simply.

"We be two plump foolish old fools, Nat. That's what we be," trembled the little old woman, then her glance fell on the harness the man had been mending when she found him. "What were you doing with that old harness, Nat?" she asked quickly.

"Mending them up for Bess and Rock, little woman. Renfro gets all the other horses, and——."

The woman's head was tiptilted to one side like that of a pert robin with a crest of snow.

"Was you going away without telling me, Nat Whitman?" she interrupted sternly.

"I reckon I was a plumb foolish old fool, little woman, to think about it, but there's a section of right good government land over in Priest Valley. It has a good two-room shack on it. We could go over there and homestead it together, Sally, but I do hate to take you to a place like that, and——."

"We be two plumb foolish old fools just like I said, Nat Whitman, but we'll homestead that place together. I'm going back now to young Sally, and bake Philip's wedding cake while she talks Salinas to me."

The little old woman's silvery laugh came down to the man looking after her with a tender reverence in his gray eyes as she disappeared over the ridge.

"God bless you, Sally-bird," he said softly, as he turned back to his harness mending.

Half an hour later a stranger on the horse of the man who had held the mortgage on his place since the death of Cyril Sims, his uncle, five years before, drew rein in front of Nathan Whitman.

An hour after the stranger left him, Nathan Whitman climbed to the top of the ridge dividing his place from the ranch Sally Middleton's children had sold away from her.

"Sally! Sal-lee! Sal-lee!" he hallooed, until at last Sally heard his call.

Watching Sally hurry up the hill to him, the old man's heart throbbed so wildly it all but suffocated him.

"Be ye sick, or what?" panted Sally, drawing near the top of the hill.

"Neither, Sally-bird. I wanted you —that's all." The old man covered the space between them with one tremendous stride, and, before the excited little old woman could protest, she was up in his strong arms and half way down the hill.

"There," he breathed tenderly, when he reached his mesa wheat acreage. "You shall stand on your own dear feet and hear the wonderful news. Listen, Sally-bird! Listen! We don't have to go over into Priest Valley and start all over again. This place is ours, Sally—ours!"

Sally left the shelter of his arms and studied him anxiously.

"You didn't get overhet or—or anything after I left you, did you Nat?"

"With joy, yes, little woman."

"With joy!" Sally studied the shining-eyed old man questioningly.

"He's coming back at sunset with the preacher, Sally. We're going to be married then. I've had the license ready more'n eight year now, and —."

"Nat" trembled Sally. "Oh, my poor dear Nat, it's all been too much for you!"

The man smiled down into the troubled black eyes, and his voice rang out with that in it which banished all the woman's fears.

"The Tom Renfro we have known was not the real Tom Renfro, Sally. He was an impostor, and before that a traitor to his friend. Him and the real Tom Renfro had been pals a number of years up in the big-tree country of Oregon. When the real Tom Renfro was notified of the death of his uncle the impostor one got the lawyer's letter on account of the real nephew being in the hospital between life and death on account of a timber accident in which he had his head injured until he didn't know anything that was going on for weeks and weeks and weeks. The man we've known as Tom Renfro played the part of being the real nephew so cleverly that he might still be doing it if the real Tom Renfro hadn't came to Suprise Valley last night and made him give an account of himself before he let him off scot free. The real Tom Renfro came half an hour or so after you left me, Sally," he continued huskily. "He brought my mortgage back to me and tore it into pieces right before my eyes. He said he had counted up the interest I had paid to his uncle and to the impostor, and that it covered the mortgage itself, with interest at 6 per cent. He would have it that I was square with him. Think of that, little woman. He—he's freeing Surprise Valley, Sally-bird, for he's tearing up every single mortgage held by his uncle before the false Tom Renfro came, and all of them held by the impostor Renfro. Say, but he's some man, little woman! It—it took me a long time to get it all through my head, but when I did and found he was coming back at sunset to ask me some questions about wheat harvesting—some of the neighbors bragged too much about what I know about farming—I asked him to bring the preacher and the school teacher. He—he knows the school teacher—knew her back East. They're engaged to be married soon as she finished this term of school. She wrote him about there being a Tom Renfro here in the valley, and that was the first he knew of his uncle, Cryil Sims, being dead. Seems like God must have sent Sue Goodman here to Surprise Valley to teach this term of school, doesn't it, little woman?"

"Tell it all over, Nat. Seems to me I must be dreaming."

The man repeated the wonderful story, and at last the woman comprehended it all.

"But I can't be married in this brown calico dress, man dear," she protested, when she did comprehend.

The tender eyes twinkled.

"Of course you can, Sally-bird. Next week this time you'll have a brown silk dress and heaps of things. We'll get them in Los Angeles. We're going there for a real honeymoon, and for you to hear Billy Sunday. Don't you mind how you've been wanting to go to Los Angeles this summer ever since you found out Billy Sunday was to be there this year. Well, we're going next week, and we're going to stay until the Billy Sunday meetings are over."

"What about the mesa wheat and the rest of the threshing, Nat?"

The big man chuckled.

"Think I'm going to haul wheat before we have our honeymoon, Sally-bird? Not so you could notice it, I'm not. I'm going to hire that wheat hauled. I'll sell enough on the ground to give us plenty of money to go on, and we'll wait until after Philip is married before we start to Los Angeles; but we shan't wait a day longer, and we're not coming home until after the meetings are over; and not then if you want to stay down there longer, just sightseeing—with me."

Through tear-misted, but wonderfully happy eyes, the little old woman looked from the bulging grain bags on the mesa above the roomy vine-covered white house that was, at last, to be home for her, to the winding valley road, and she saw a man on the big black horse the impostor Tom Renfro always rode. Beside the man on horseback there was a young woman in a high-wheeled cart beside the white-haired minister so loved by everybody in Surprise Valley.

"They are coming, Sally-bird!" The man's voice rang out triumphantly.

Sally turned until she could look into the true, steady eyes of the man who had loved her so long and faithfully.

"I'm ready, Nat," she said simply. "For the Lord surely must have sent the right Tom Renfro to Surprise Valley just when Surprise Valley most needed him."

"Sally!" The deep, tender voice quavered a bit. "Do you mind if we're married out here, with the sunset glow all about us, and—."

The black eyes flashed with youthful fire, and the lilting, silvery laugh rang out with the sweetness of a meadow lark's call.

"I'd rather it would be up here in the sunset glow, Nat. In the sunset glow—that's a right proper setting for us."

BECOMING METROPOLITAN.

The Horse Car no Longer in Vogue in New York City.

Jim Cusick, who's been driving horse cars for forty-two years, retired yesterday. So did his jaded nags, George and Dick. And with them there disappeared from the tracks of the soon-to-be-abandoned Bleecker Street and Fulton Ferry Railroad Company, in the old Greenwich and Chelsea sections of the city, New York's last horse car.

Public Service Commissioners, city officials and newspaper men were passengers on Jim's car for its final trip. Each paid a fare, the total receipts being $1.55, constituting the biggest day's business in many months. On July 17 Jim's car carried only two pasengers, which meant only 10 cents for the company. Being the only car on the line its and the company's receipts during recent years have been: $178.80 in 1916 and $103.60 in 1917. Because it costs $1.50 to carry each 5-cent pasenger it was determined to close the line.

The moving pictures that were taken of the car's last trip probably will show Jim in tears as he stepped from the rickety front platform when the car was returned to the stable after having been driven from Broadway and Bleecker street to MacDougal street, to West Twelfth street, to Hudson street, and to Fourteenth street and Ninth avenue. This was a distance of bit more than a mile.

Jim Cusick, 64 years old, quit being a teamster to drive a car when he was 22. He told Frank Hedley, general manager of the New York Railways Company, who made the last trip with him yesterday, that he never regretted having stuck to the same job, and he further said:

"Mr. Hedley, I hope you'll turn my two hosses, George and Dick, out to pasture for the rest of their days. You know they've worked hard for the company, just like I have."

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR WHY IT INCREASES

It has been proven by the world's greatest authorities that so-called hair removers stimulate and increase hair growth after each removal, because they only remove hair from the surface of the skin, just like a razor.

The only common-sense way to remove hair is to attack it under the skin. DeMiracle, the original sanitary liquid, operates on this principle. It alone contains certain ingredients which give it the power to rob hair of its vitality. It does this by absorption.

DeMiracle works equally well for removing hair from face, neck, arms, under arms or limbs to prevent it from showing through stockings.

Insist on the genuine DeMiracle. It is the only depilatory that has a money-back guarantee in each package. In 60c, $1 and $2 bottles at all toilet counters, or direct from us in plain wrapper on receipt of price.

FREE booklet mailed in plain sealed envelope on request. Write for it today and read it before you make another application of any depilatory. DeMiracle Chemical Co., Dept. G52, Park ave. and 129th st., New York.—[Advertisement.

RUSSIAN NOVELISTS HAPPIEST WHEN FULL OF GRIEF AND WOE

Gorky Continues His Biography Into the Second Volume—Demetra Vaka Writes of Observations and Adventures in the Balkans, Showing How Europe's Powers Brewed the Great War at the Treaty of Berlin—Other Books of One Kind and Another.

"In the World."

WE SOMETIMES wonder what the Russians would do if their lives were not full of misery; and no doubt they would be quite unhappy. That much misery exists and that many of those who write have gone through bitter distress is not the complete explanation of their novels deep dyed in human woe. Neurosis is in the blood of the race; somewhat like the Irish, they can't be serious without tragedy; but the Irish are romantic even in their sorrow, while the Russians grovel rejoicingly in the harrowing details of realism. That they write down things that would send American purity societies camping on domestic authors' trails has long been commended among us as "daring to tell the truth;" whereas it may be the truth, but there has been precious little more "daring" in it than in Mrs. Porter's gushful "Pollyanna." What we call "daring" is merely the literary norm of the Russians.

Many, if not most, of the Russian novels are to our eyes monstrosities of horror and designedly so, taking to some extent among our "intellectuals" the place that the dime museums of our youth had for the farm hands who crowded, in awe-stricken, to gaze at the waxen masks of notorious murderers, the hideous hairy babe created with pig bristles, glue and papier mache, the cancerous breast on the beautiful maiden, the waxen tableaus of the glassy-eyed murderess pulling her knife from the bloody throat of her faithless lover. We might as well export the dusty relics of those museum days as examples of our "art" as for them to export to us the maundering despair and howling agony of their novels.

"In the World," Maxim Gorky's second autobiographical volume (The Century Company) one finds all that is expected, and this is, no doubt, to be followed by another volume telling of his student life. This has to do with his wanderings and jobs, of which he had many. And since it seems hardly possible that he took down exhaustive notes at the time, one is, we believe, entitled to feel that Gorky has drawn from the imagination rather than the memory for the detailed conversation through which he largely tells his story; and having drawn on the imagination, he has simply written a novel around himself.

It is graphic, in most parts it is extremely depressing, which marks the Slav's highest goal (an "Irishism" if you like;) and in scarely anything has this pre-eminent master of the morbid succeeded more vividly than in this tale across which move a multitude of typically half-crazed characters, brutal, unmoral, unbalanced by poverty, drink or sin—perhaps by all. But Gorky has been at no pains to make himself out as a hero; and though the book has been written around his life, he has handled his part in it with artistry. The one and the only feature that gripped us is the, almost casually told, story of his introduction to good books, his yearning for reading, and how he was thwarted and abused for it.

"The Heart of the Balkans."

The war grew out of the Balkans. Some writers, with fine vision and fervor, in the robes of Jeremiah have predicated this war as the swelling cumulative vengeance of the Almighty upon Europe for the infamous treaty of Berlin which smothered the ambitious urge of small, obscure nations, divided races, and gave Christians over to the rule and massacre of infidels; and all in all created a witches' caldron into which each of the great powers added a venomous portion of the brew that has bubbled into the great war.

Demetra Vaka (Mrs. Kenneth Brown,) too, has seen this vision; and it vaguely overshadows the background of "The Heart of the Balkans" (Houghton Mifflin Company.) Few have so clear a right to address the English reading world on that tumultuous borderland between the Occident and the Orient, or even on the Orient itself, as Demetra Vaka, born of a Greek family that held a position of some influence under the old regime of Constantinople and who in her girlhood traveled through the Balkans with her brother while he was on official duties; all of which experience, combined with a felicity of writing in an alien tongue—not so rare among those who come to our language rather late in life as might be supposed—contributes to "The Heart of the Balkans" an interpretative value not in the least superior to the charm of its style.

The wildness of Albania and bloody stubbornness of Montenegro are known in a general indefinite way by almost everyone; but this author shows explicitly the warlike consecration of every man, woman and child in those tiny, barren, mountainous countries so long and desperately in arms that even nature has taken notice and seeks to compensate by a birth ratio of five man-children to each girl. Otherwise each of these obscure Spartan states would soon become the home of Amazons.

Referring to the diplomatic cruelty inflicted upon the Balkans, Demetra Vaka says: "The frontiers of Montenegro were drawn by the men who made the treaty of Berlin. . . . To find out to what extent the treaty of Berlin was unjust—even infamous—one has to study these frontiers. They were delineated not for the purpose of delimiting the various countries to their best advantage, and for their future welfare, but to further the political intrigues of the great powers. Serbia and Montenegro were deliberately separated, and between the two Serb peoples the Turks were thrust. That was done to please Austria, whose interest it was to keep Serbia and Montenegro apart, and to keep them constantly harassed by the Turks. England acquiesced, because it tricked Russia and humiliated her—and at that time Russia was the savage bear who dominated Albion's fears."

Savage peoples—perhaps; poverty-stricken, but indomitable, tempered to the rigorous virtues, and "it is impossible to describe to what extent the life and honor of a woman are secure among these Black-Mountaineers. To them, to harm a woman is to destroy the spring of life, to sin against God Himself."

The author knew Serbia before the assassination of Alexander and Draga—murder, she implies, as nearly justifiable as bloody violence can be—and then as now, or until the war broke, "the shadow of Austria was black and menacing even then; and the treachery of Bulgaria, whom Austria was ever using as a weapon against Serbia, was feared everywhere. To these anxieties was added the old, old fear of Turkey. They were, indeed, a trapped nation, surrounded by enemies, governed by a degenerate pair, and helpless through poverty. Yet with it all they remained chivalrous, and their attitude toward women had some of the charm of the age of knight-errantry."

Bulgaria she found the Prussia of the Balkans; cold, efficient, dreaming of war and conquest, bragging of "the day."

The book, being based on personal experiences, contains a number of interesting incidents and adventures; and it is in these particularly that the author's very decided charm is strongly felt.

"Henry Thoreau."

"Henry Thoreau As Remembered by a Young Friend" (Houghton Mifflin Company) is another contribution to appreciation that has been steadily rising about the Thoreau pedestal and has a decidedly unique value—to some people it will be a surprise—in being written by Edward Waldo Emerson, son of Ralph Waldo Emerson. Thoreau was more than an intimate of the Emerson family. Mr. Emerson says, "He was to us children the best kind of an older brother. He soon became the guide and companion of our early expeditions afield, and, later, the adviser of our first camping trips. I watched with him one of the last days of his life, when I was about 17 years old."

"Henry Thoreau" is a book of reminiscences rather than a biography, though the author touches all of the important events in Thoreau's life and has given new facts and interpretations of Thoreau's indifference to the college curriculum, to his father's pencil business, to work other than surveying and such manual labor as he seemed to enjoy and which brought the small income necessary to his simple living, and to the sedition for which he was jailed during the Mexican War.

"The Adventures of a Woman Hobo."

Ethel Lynn, M.D., was not a woman "hobo," but people insisted on calling her that while she and her husband were making the trip from California, part of the time on a tandem bicycle, part of the time in the wagon of a peddler, and part of the time in box cars. They had little money and her health was bad, so they started to go "back home," stopping here and there to work for a few days, talking with farmers, bums, constables, being arrested, abused, and now and then falling in with Samaritans, having a few adventures and many troubles. Mrs. Lynn tells the story with the best of good nature, and shows herself to be quite discerning, with a strong tincture of irony in her inkpot. "Adventures of a Woman Hobo" (George H. Doran Company.)

"The Shield."

"The Shield," published in Russia by the Society for the Study of Jewish Life (in which no Jews are allowed membership) is made up of articles by prominent men of that country and translated by A. Yarmolinsky (Alfred A. Knopf) with a foreword by William English Walling. Among the contributors are Maxim Gorky, Leonid Andreyev, Vladimir Korolenko, Fyodor Sologub, Vladimir Solovyov, Count Ivan Tolstoy and Michael Artzibashef, all of whom are known to English readers through translations. As with one voice they cry out for justice and equality for the Jews. In this foreword Mr. Walling points out that "without exceptions the anti-Semitic organizations were supported by the pro-German party, the money that was alone responsible for the pogroms was furnished by these same organizations, and now this party and these same organizations are forever overthrown."

"The Story of the Pullman Car."

Joseph Husband in "The Story of the Pullman Car" (A. C. McClurg & Co.,) reviews the rise and development of that industry, which has done much to eliminate the inconvenience of travel by rail. George Mortimer Pullman was a man with an "idea" and stuck to it. By experiments he found that the public liked luxury and was willing to pay for it rather than choose plainer comforts at a more moderate price; and no expense was lacking from that time on to fit the cars out with the best available. Mr. Husband traces the history of the sleeping car, the rise and fight for survival of the Pullman company, and describes the great industrial center which is now devoted to making and operating the cars.

"Franklin Spencer Spalding."

John Howard Melish's biography of Bishop Spalding (The Macmillan Company,) is composed largely of letters in which the western bishop has recorded in his own words something of work, adventures, and frequently amusing incidents that came to his attention, among the miners, Indians and Mormons. Bishop Spalding's father was bishop of Colorado; but the most important of the son's work was in Utah, where he attracted much attention in work against the Mormons — opposing rather than fighting them. Bishop Spalding was very well thought of, even by the Mormons; and few "sky pilots" ever attained to anything like this influence among the miners.

"The War After the War.

Isaac F. Marcosson in "The War After the War" (John Lane Company,) has one particularly significant chapter from which the book takes its title, calling attention to the economic alignment that will be maintained when peace is made; and warning is given the United States that we had better get ready—good and ready—to play an aggressive part. The other chapters, dealing with various phases of the war, reveal that our incomprehensible distrust of French business men has done much to cause ill-feeling; show something of the tremendous cost of maintaining the war; give an account of Lloyd George and his rise to power, and of Sir Hedley Le Bas, who conducted the great publicity campaigns for recruiting and floating loans. Mr. Marcosson writes so the man who runs may read—and enjoy the information.

"The Modern Milk Problem."

J. Scott MacNutt, whose insignia to speak with authority on "The Modern Milk Problem" runs, to wit, Lecturer on Public Health Service, Department of Biology and Public Health, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; formerly Health Officer of Orange, N. J., and a member of the Board of Examiners of Health Officers and Sanitary Inspectors of New Jersey, etc., claims that it is possible to obtain a safe, suitable milk for every purpose, and goes into detail as to how this should be done, after explaining how, why and to what extent it is not done. The basic danger, he believes, after reasonable sanitary precautions are observed in the handling of milk, arises from the fact that city milk companies buy from many farmers, many herds, and quantities of milk are mixed together so that a large supply of pure milk may be infected by a few quarts that is dangerous. Rigid inspection and co-operation are the basis of his recommendations. The publishers, Macmillans, state that to their knowledge there is no other book covering the same field.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

"The Editor."

A weekly magazine of interest and value to literary workers, to beginners as well as to veteran strugglers, is "The Editor," published at Ridgewood, N. J., and edited by William R. Kane. Interviews with successful authors frequently appear, but a regular department that seldom if ever fails to be worthy of attention is "The Experience Exchange," in which various authors relate their success and rejections and speak open-mindedly of the treatment given by magazines. This feature is of exceptional value, for though most editors are courteous and considerate, the quick, sharp publicity calling attention to those who are not does much to keep the few unscrupulous magazines from finding victims. Another department that the struggling author may find profit from watching is "The Literary Market," topped by the slogan that "There is a place somewhere for every good manuscript."

California Supplies Light Fiction.

In "The Editor" of July 25, Wyndham Martyne, editor of the Parisienne, is quoted in an interesting article taken from the New York Tribune Magazine as saying, "I get a great deal of sentimental verse from nice old ladies living in the Middle West, and the bulk of our light stories come from California. We hardly get any from the South and almost none from New England. Californians seem to be the only Americans with leisure to write frothy, clever stories. Foreigners seem to understand our light magazines; in fact, some of our contributors are titled people. Very serious-minded persons often write light stories as a sort of recreation. An enormous number of lawyers write short fiction for us. You'd be surprised at the men who write how terrible their wives are!"

"Millard's Review."

Thomas Millard, for many years a resident and student of the Orient, and author of that remarkable compendium and exposition of oriental intricacies and dangers titled "Our Far Eastern Question," has recently founded at Shanghai a weekly known as Millard's Review. It is published in English, and typographically excels beyond the point of comparison the usual English publication attempted in alien lands. But to the articles and editorials Mr. Millard brings not only mature observation and keen analysis, but a pleasing style. At this time when Europe is attracting all of the world attention, though epochal events are developing and breaking in the Orient, Millard's Review may be of exceptional value to those who wish to have insight into what is going on in the Far East.

"Architecture."

Charles Scribner's Sons announce that they have recently purchased Architecture and that this magazine, which has been so long essentially the leading publication for the profession, will have in future the full benefit of their organization, years of experience, and unsurpassed equipment in the production of a high-class magazine. Architecture will be conducted in the best interests of the architectural profession, and it is hoped to still further increase its usefulness and value through the co-operation of every member of it. It is intended to make its illustrations and letter-press of the highest practical and artistic interest in the development of American architecture.

Donald Hankey.

Donald Hankey's "A Student in Arms: Second Series," just published by E. P. Dutton & Co., contains a good deal of biographical matter which gives delightful glimpses into the life and nature of the man whose former book, "A Student in Arms," has appealed tremendously to many thousands of readers in England and the United States. Like the first volume, the new book consists mainly of articles and sketches written at the front, many of them while he was actually in the trenches. But they are different from most war books in that they portray the spiritual atmosphere of the life in the British lines rather than the facts of combat. Now that the war is beginning to have a personal meaning for Americans, these books will speak a message straight to the heart of every man or woman who has a relative or a friend who has gone or is likely to go across the ocean to the battle zone. For they show how fine and earnest is the spirit of the men already there and what is their attitude toward their surroundings. Mr. Hankey was killed in action in October last year. Before enlisting, at the beginning of the war, he had been running a boys' club in South London and trying to find the best means of putting into their hearts the desire for a better manhood. Previously he had had a varied life, in Mauritius. But after six years in the army, he gave up military service, was at Oxford for a time and then decided to study for church orders. The boys' club and the mission work at Bermondsey, South London, were a part of his training and held him until the war came. He was 32 years old when he died.

"Helen of Four Gates."

North England, in the cotton mill region, is the scene of "Helen of Four Gates," a novel of Poe-like, eerie imagination and power. It is written by a woman who has spent nearly the whole of the twenty years since she was eleven in the mills. But the story is concerned mainly with the "Four Gates" farm and the people upon it. Of the little mill town near which the farm lies the author writes, in the first chapter: "It was a bowl in the hills. The towns round about spat away for themselves those who were broken, or those who would not bend. They became tramps. They fell into this giant spittoon of sober sorrow, drunken mirth, where the man who was not wanted took the woman who was not wanted, where they toiled together, drank together, fought together, recognizing no law but necessity." The novel was published in England a few weeks before its appearance here and has called forth a chorus of high praise from the leading English critics and authors. Even Thomas Hardy came out from the seclusion in which he lives to speak of its unusual power and its promise of genius.

BOOKS OF FICTION.

"Anchorage."

Florence Olmstead has the faculty of being able to tell a story without seeming to be aware that she is doing any such thing. There is a calmness and variety of soft humor with something big and important to the foreground in her books that, without making them caviar, appeal to few people more than to many.

"Anchorage" (Charles Scribner's Sons) has a definite enough plot, but one loses sight of it almost entirely because of the clear and effortless characterization of Harriet Sterling, the capable maiden of more single years than a girl might wish to own; of Paul Osborne, the crippled poet; of Hilda, the young girl who marries him; while such minor characters as Louisa, Jimmy Bridges and Bill Splinters are a source of perpetual delight.

The plot has to do with a variation of the triangle that has been called "eternal:" Hilda, a cousin of Miss Sterling, and Paul marry and disarrange the agreeable companionship that the elder girl and Paul have long enjoyed; then, through a vague incompatibility Hilda and Paul are unable to be happy together. So the fortunes of each are changed by Hilda's determination to act definitely and decisively, and a solution which perhaps might be called "happy"—though perhaps not in the way surmised—is found.

"Those Times and These."

Judge Priest reappears in many of the stories that Irvin Cobb has in "Those Times and These" (George H. Doran Company,) and though he is the same character that has endeared himself to many, the Judge has a part not nearly so interesting as in those in which he was first introduced. Mr. Cobb, whether conscious of it or not, seems to be writing on the premise that the well developed plot is no longer necessary. It is no longer necessary if Mr. Cobb wishes to be nothing more than entertaining; but it is vitally so if he cares to leave the reader with a permanent sense of gratification.

In the present volume with humorous intent appears an "Abandoned Farm," which has as much comedy in it as anything Mr. Cobb has done; and there is amusement to be had from "Hark! From the Tombs." "Ex-Fightin' Billy," an incident in the life of Judge Priest, seems rather strained and pointless, and "Mr. Felsburg Gets Even" shows decisively how well Mr. Cobb can write without needing much of a story, for the irrelevant preliminary is, we would say, the best piece of writing in the book. As a master of that quality called "atmosphere," Mr. Cobb has his head and shoulders in pre-eminence: "The Family Tree," though it does end in a strain of comedy, illustrates this in a way that one who reads will not soon forget.

"Cecilia of the Pink Roses."

Katherine Haviland Taylor's "Cecilia of the Pink Roses" (George H. Doran Company) is a Pollyannaish story with a streak of comedy in it. A Family of tenement dwellers become millionaires through a priest's interest in a brick that the father has developed; and the story has to do chiefly with the "culturing" of Cecilia at a fashionable boarding school, and the romance that follows when the aristocratic young man, whom all the girls desire, picks her out as the one in whom he is most interested.

The author tries, with a degree of success, to mix pathos and comedy, which is so dear to fictionites; but for all of her effort, has not totally destroyed the charm of Cecilia, who, if not quite so "good," not quite so obsessed with the tearful memories of her dead mother, not quite so obviously tender to her father, would be nearer like a human being.

"Where Your Treasure Lies."

Holman Day unfailingly gives good measure in his tales, with love and adventure enough to serve some prolix authors with material for half a lifetime; and though "Where Your Treasure Lies" (Harper & Bros.) is something of a rambling story told in the first person by Ross Sidney, it never gets far from the central theme of his love for Celene Kingsley, daughter of Judge Kingsley, who is a crabbed old Shylock.

Young Sidney, finding the village too hot for him after he has divulged the swindle his uncle prepares in a horse trade, runs away and becomes a diver but after beating up the manager of the company and being blacklisted, returns to his native village, poses as a man of affairs, makes good the bluff by a stroke of clever business, then leads the crabbed judge clear across the country to locate wily swindlers who have relieved him (the judge) of $10,000.

Later Sidney, not without adventures, most of them amusing, is hired as a diver in a treasure hunt, and the last half of the book is somewhat complicated by the appearance of another girl, who becomes Celene's rival.

Mr. Day is a leisurely and entertaining writer, lavish with incidents and careful in drawing and sustaining his characters.

WITTY BIOGRAPHY.

Edward Bellamy Partridge, author of "Sube Cane," has contributed the following autobiographical sketch:

It happened just before breakfast on the 10th of July, 1877, and that's so long ago I don't remember much about it except that a man with a gray mustache cuffed me on the ear and said, "Wake up there, youngster! You're alive! That man over there with the sheepish grin on his face is your father."

I didn't want him to be my father; I very much preferred the thing on the mantelpiece that said, "tick-tock;" so I put up a big howl. At that my father said:

"What is it, Doc, a prima donna?"

"No; it's an orator," the doctor replied.

My father grunted disgustedly. "Well," he said, "since you've got it here I suppose I'll have to take it; but I told you I wanted a girl."

"You'll have to take that up with the order clerk," laughed the doctor; "all I attend to is the deliveries."

A few days later when the nurse took me out of doors and I discovered that I had been born in Phelps, N. Y., I was pretty mad; I had intended to be an F.F.V. or at least a California native son. I tried to explain matters to her, but she couldn't understand my language, so I gave up trying and got even with her by having an attack of colic. After I became a little older I found that I was not the only one who had been deceived; several of the neighbors' children had also been born in Phelps.

But it was years before I recovered from the aversion I had felt for girls from the moment when my father had been disappointed in me because I wasn't one. I think it must have been fully eight or nine years before I ever fell in love with one of them. However, after the ice had been broken I did very well, for there has never been a time since when I have not been in love with several.

I knew I was a writer as soon as I was born; but I have had an awful time proving it to other people. My mother never would believe it; she knew I was destined to be a great minister. She said that nobody who had ever heard my voice could doubt it. But my father said that the voice had nothing to do with it, or our vegetable man would have been a better preacher than T. De Witt Talmage. He said it was the brow that told the story. Then he called her attention to the fact that I had a brow just like two uncles of his who had been noted judges.

My mother admitted that I had a very promising brow—she said it ran from my eyebrows to the back of my neck, just like Bill Nye's—but that she had never heard of any important judicial decisions that Bill had rendered.

That sounded to me like a good argument, but my father sent me to law school just the same, and after I had passed the bar, he gave me elbow room in his office. I waited around there for the next ten years expecting every day to be made a great judge. But nobody ever mentioned the matter. However, I was frequently mentioned in comparison with judges. My Uncle Egbert often said that I had a head on me like old Judge Bissell's left leg. I felt greatly complimented by this statement until I happened to make the acquaintance of old Judge Bissell. For I noted at once that his left leg was made of hickory and had been ever since the Battle of the Wilderness.

Then I knew I was a writer!

So I slipped off out to California where I could be undisturbed, and began to write short stories, which I sent to some of the best magazines in the country for the sole purpose of making them still better. But the editors misunderstood my motives—and returned the stories. And for three years I remained unappreciated — very much unappreciated; I might almost say that I was rebuffed. But I tried to be very patient with the editors, and told them over and over again that I was a writer, but they simply couldn't believe me. However, one day in a moment of aberration, Mr. Harper's brother accepted one of my short stories..

He will probably tell you that he "discovered" me. But he didn't! I called his attention to the matter myself! I had known for years that I was a writer. However, it is not important who did the discovering; the important part is who it was that was discovered. But Mr. Harper's brother discovered only that I could write short stories. It took Mr. Penn of the Penn Publishing Company to discover that I could write a book.

When I sent the manuscript of "Sube Cane" to him, he read it over, and then wrote me a letter informing me that I had written a book. I ought to have been indignant, for I had known for weeks and weeks that it was a book. But I was easy with him. I said:

"Certainly it's a book, and a mighty good book, and a mighty funny book, and a mighty true book. I know it's funny because I saw a great deal of it happen to Gizzard and Biscuit and the other boys; and I know it's true, because a great deal of it happened to me."

FIFES AND DRUMS.

FIFES AND DRUMS: Poems of America at War. George H. Doran Company, New York.

The "Vigilantes" are American authors; some of them the most prominent in the country and some scarcely known outside of their own families, for the organization is democratic and open to all patriotic writers and artists. The purpose is "to arouse the country to a realization of the importance of the problems confronting the American people." "Fifes and Drums," a collection of militant verse celebrating America's entrance into the war, is the first of a projected series of Vigilantes books.

For the most part the verse shows more determination and enthusiasm than qualities that one many consider fitting to the hour. Many of the poems are boiling with hate, with rage; and some are occasional verses that seek to explain; a few are fittingly satirical, fewer still aspire to lofty intensity, and of that number two or three are worthy of extreme commendation.

The modest lines slipped unobtrusively on an obscure page as a kind of prelude, signed "H. H." (Herman Hagedorn) are among the very finest in poetic expression, in mood and vision.

Surely the time for making songs has come
Now that the Spring is in the air again.
Trees blossom though men bleed; and after rain
The robins hop; and soon the bees will hum.

Long was the winter, long our lips were dumb.
Long under snow our loyal dreams have lain.
Surely the time for making songs has come
Now that spring is in the air again.

The Spring—with bugles and a rumbling drum!
Oh, builders of high music out of pain,
Now is the hour with singing to make vain
The boast of kings in Pandemonium!
Surely the time for making songs is come!

Marion Couthouy Smith in "The Song" has lifted war verse to unusual heights by an original treatment of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," stanzas of which are incorporated with such as:

My country—oh, my country! Clear-sighted then and strong
A shield for the defenseless and a flame against the wrong,
True to the ringing echoes of that mighty marching song
That still is sounding on.

My country—oh, my country! The old brave call has come;
Too long your steps were lagging, too long your soul was dumb;
Tune now your waking pulses to the throbbing of the drum,
While God is marching on.

And these lines, too, from Cale Young Rice's "Processional" are written with the flaming spirit of the noblest passion:

Not for vengeance, hot in the heart,
Now do we swing to war;
Not for a weak mistrust lest peace
Is a shame strong men abhor.
Not for glory—for, oh, to kill
Should be a sacred wrath;
Not for these! But to war on war
And sweep it from earth's path!"

Among the satirical verses Wallace Irwin contributes two in his inimitable vein, and particularly to be recommended is his "Ode to Tonsilitis," praying that the "nymph of the swollen throat" will woo Robert La Follette "with wreaths of asthma and bronchitis." Another satirical poem timely and pointed is Lee Wilson Dodd's "Omniscient Mr. Fall or the Whole Truth About the War."

Amelia Josephine Burr's "Fall In" is a splendid invocation to the young men of America; and Marion Couthouy Smith's "To the Mothers" is also very fine and distinctive.

But the blatancy of Blanche Shoemaker Wagstaff's "America, to Arms!" the fierce adjectivism of George Sterling's "The Binding of the Beast," the Kaiser abuse in Edith M. Thomas's "Black Flag," the fury and roar and hysteria in other pieces interspersed through the book, much resemble the literary mannerism of patriotic German publicists, who seem to have but two passions, hate and boastfulness.

The Bride's Garter.

[San Francisco News Letter:] Another interesting wedding of the week was that of Miss Lucille Rose and Harold D. Padgett, which was solemnized at All Saint's Episcopal Church on Wednesday night.

It is not often that the guests at a wedding are permitted to look at the knee buckle of the bride, but in this case the bride permitted the trophy to be handed around among the guests, for the buckle is of historical significance and never a San Francisco bride went to the altar in an heirloom more hallowed with tradition. "Hallowed" is not a word often used in connection with a lady's garter, but in this case it is not a misnomer, for this little circlet of silver and diamonds was first worn by Dolly Madison when she became the bride of President Madison, and since then generations of young girls have carried out the family tradition of wearing it as the treasured mascot of wedding finery.

THE PLACE.

A Vicissitudinous Vacation.

BY LANNIE HAYNES MARTIN.

This is not a knock on seaside vacations, far be it from me to disparage an adventure out of which I got more excitement, experience and comradeship than anything else I ever tried, but it is just a little, unvarnished narrative which may make some town-tied treadmillist feel a little less resentful over his vacant lot.

And I am not knocking the place, for I am not telling the location—you will have to discover it for yourself as we did. There were six or eight of us and we had been on a week's house party to one of the near-by beaches and had such an enjoyable time we concluded we wanted to spend the rest of the summer together, so we started house hunting. On account of the size of the party and its unanimous aversion to gregariousness in sleeping quarters, we had to have a large house, and large houses, we found, at the beach are expensive and we could not afford to pay the $150 or $200 a month that the agents asked for the kind of house we wanted. Then we heard of The Place. Three of us went down to look at it, and although I am visionary and optimistic and impractical and unsophisticated in the ways of the commission agent, it was not I, I am thankful to say, who decided (Oh! Johnny—on the spot and no questions asked!) to take the house. It was the man of the party who did that, but I must confess that it certainly looked good to me with its big living-room and fireplace, its five bedrooms and sleeping porch, and besides, a closet well stocked with linen and a pantry with enough dishes to supply three Boos cafeterias on the Fourth of July, there was a cuckoo clock, an encyclopedia, a fireless cooker, four Bibles, a shower bath, a cocktail-shaker and no family portraits. And all for $25 a month!

So we moved down—typewriters, trunks, hat boxes, two hammocks and a cat! For the first two or three days we, who had all of our lives pushed a magic button, turned an enchanted lever and waved a wizard's wand for our lights, water and heat; we who had "no tradesmen" traditions in our families and not even a speaking acquaintance with an electrician, a plumber or a match manufacturer, learned the importance of all of these in the scheme of things. We carried water—from a neighbor's hydrant—we cut wood (it had first to be found on the beach and dragged home,) and at night we studied the stars. Then the solar plexus of that outlying appearance of a place, where we seemed to live, woke up and vibrated to the extent of sending out a manana Moses who gave us water and an overalled, Edison-god who said "let there be light," but gas there was none, and we had to be our own Prometheus for that spark without which we could have neither ham-and, nor divinity fudge. We had to take our choice between cutting wood for a coy, reluctant-to-be-wooed wood stove, and rehabilitating a decrepit, old oil one, which meant coming up to town for new wicks and taking the thing all apart and cleaning it. This we did and finally got two of the three burners so that they smoked and sulked and went out by turns, but did heat the food to a sufficient temperature that it would finish itself in the fireless cooker, which was our only culinary comfort.

It was just as we got the department of the interior pretty well organized and regulated that the foreign foes attacked us. Our mammoth refrigerator, the pride of our household and filled with everything from salads to sauterne, was attacked and taken by the ants, not just ordinary, shoo-awayable, timid ants, but vicious, persistent, aggressive, strategic ants, and the grocer kept no ant paste! The mice besieged and occupied the pantry, in spite of the diligence of Gen. Thomas Cat. The fleas contested our territorial rights to the beds and the mosquitoes Zeppelined us by night and by day, continually, until we were frightful objects to behold.

The exterior annoyance was bad enough, but pretty soon we began to notice alarming interior symptoms, nausea and a feeling like fire in the veins. We held a family council. It was a very serious situation we had to meet. We all knew that mosquitoes carried the germs of several deadly maladies, were we infected with malaria, typhoid, anthrax, or Asiatic cholera? We decided to call in a physician. He looked us over carefully, and with a deliberate silent slowness that was exasperating, finally said: "What have you been eating?" Beefsteaks, potatoes, rice and lettuce did not seem to account for anything. "Any strawberries?" he asked. "Only a few," we told him, fresh fruits were hard to get and we had been compelled to resort to a box of oranges. "Aha! Oranges, eaten many of them?" "Oh, yes! Orange juice for breakfast, orange and banana salad for lunch, orange souffle or sherbet or pies for dinner, orange—"

"That will do," he said. "My friends, I will have to give the mosquitoes some credit, there is considerable evidence that they have been here, but you are all suffering from that inconvenient though harmless old-fashioned malady known as the hives!"

There was the beach for consolation—the loveliest stretch of the smoothest, whitest sand ever seen, the blue, beautiful, warm, wonderful water and the ocean bed as level as a floor for fully half a mile out, and the salt water so good for the hives! And it was then that we heard of the stingarees. It was a new specimen in the menagerie of our misery, but as we had not yet seen one we did not think so very much about it, only when we would step on a sharp shell or a piece of oozy seaweed would wriggle out from under our feet, which was about every other minute. But one day a little girl right near us was stung, and the next day a man, and then we sadly packed up our beautiful new bathing suits and the witching waves knew us no more.

But all of these calamities are counted as nothing compared with the one big horror that finally vanquished us. The house, the entire place, was haunted! And this spectre, unlike any other self-respecting ghost, did not leave its carcass entombed in a vault, but carried along with it the corpses of all its dead ancestors. It was not just an ordinary offense to one's olfactories, there was something horrifying, weird and ghastly like an unclean spirit carrying a decayed psychic aura about it. It was a presence that surrounded, stifled and terrified you with the suddenness of its coming and the unescapable inevitableness of its fury. There was every sort of speculation among us as to its nature. Some were of the opinion that we were located near the cemetery site of all the deceased felines in the world, others were certain that the Germans were landing with gas bombs, and then we rushed to the real estate agent. He sniffed a little and said, "That? Oh, that's just the potash factory!" We all took violently to cigarettes, the only antidote discovered, so far.

But there was one joy at The Place. It was the postmistress. It was she who told us what to put on our mosquito bites, where to buy dressed rabbits, how to avoid stingarees by scuffing your feet, how to feel cheerful when you had the hives and a smoky oil stove at the same time. She brought our mail, gave us the use of her telephone and loaned us everything from a frying pan to the morning paper. And, benefaction beyond all measure, she finally found a party to whom we sublet the house! And now we hear she has gotten out an injunction against the potash factory, and is having an ordinance passed to abolish mosquitoes by using coal oil on the breeding places. She is an optimist, a meliorist and a transcendentalist all in one; and when these things shall have come to pass and pests are swallowed up in vacancy then we shall go back to this Paradise of the Pacific and start a gas company!

ST. PAUL'S HAY CROP.

Mowing Machines and Pitchforks at Work in Parks.

[St. Paul Pioneer Press:] St. Paul has been harvesting a municipal hay crop.

Scores of men with mowing machines, horse-drawn rakes and pitchforks have been at work cutting the hay, loading it on the big hayracks to carry away and piling it in stacks to cure.

They have sweltered under the July sun, working in a pleasant atmosphere, the clover, fresh-cut hay, birch, willow and grass scenting the air.

Not on any city farm or in the open country outside the city does St. Paul harvest its municipal hay, but right in the cultivated pleasure spots—the parks.

Como and Phalen parks each year yield tons of good hay. Wheelock parkway—the interpark boulevard route—is being gone over this year with the mowers and rakes and the automobile roads and side lots of the Phalen-Vadnais chain of lakes will yield tons of hay for the city.

Even the submarine hay crop, which is floating to the surface of Lake Como in a small-sized Saragossa Sea, will be gathered and dried.

Commissioner Hyland regrets that the grass crop of outer Summit Parkway, cut continuously by men with lawn mowers, can't be obtained by the city. It probably will be gathered, however and fed to the animals at Como.

These, by the way, enjoy probably the only large park space where the city doesn't cut the grass.

The buffalo will assure the interested citizen who peers through the fence on a Sunday afternoon that there is no need of cutting grass on his front lawn. He does the necessary cutting, aided by the deer and elk, which share the animal park. The animals consume hay, put up by the city and stored in barns at Como, in the winter.

Twenty big stacks of hay put up in Como Park last year were used to feed the city's horses and animals there and an extra quantity from the Phalen Park crop was required before the pastures provided grass.

The excess of the city crop will be condemned by the park department, turned over to the purchasing department and advertised for sale. This year's crop is expected to net the city $1000 more than a year ago.

Part of this money, however, will go to pay the employees who act as municipal harvest hands. Years ago St. Paul adopted the plan of John D. Rockefeller on his Pocantico Hills estate, using a flock of sheep as lawn mowers at Como and Phalen Park. This is no longer practical here.

Another hay crop will be cut late this fall if warm weather continues, park officials predict, in which case St. Paul, they say, may be the first city to make money through intensive farming.

And while the city government carries on its official farming on the park hay fields, St. Paul citizens by scores are doing their bit on vacant lots and vacant blocks throughout the city. Hay prices range from $6 to more than $17 a ton, and the home-gardening citizen, contemplating the luxuriant growth on his neighbor's lot, dreams of quick fortunes to be made from the idle, but hay-bearing soil of the vacant lot.

Few, however, actually realize more than the $6 minimum price after hiring the cutting and calling for the hay dealer's wagon. "Too many weeds," is the usual verdict.

Rifle's Day Not Over.

[Frederic Coleman in Saturday Evening Post:] The overwhelming position in the war picture occupied by the big guns, the machine guns and Lewis guns, the importance of trench mortars, hand grenades, bombs, rifle grenades, and other accessories of trench warfare, make some men think that the day of the rifle as an important adjunct to success in battle is well-nigh past.

Such is not the case. Those of us who can remember the brave advances of the Prussian Guard at Ypres, when they marched in battalion formation right up the Menin road, straight at our trenches—on one occasion, if not more, marching to almost sure death at the goose step—knew the value of accurate, rapid rifle fire. So do these Prussian guardsmen, if any of them are still alive. Not many of them were left when the broken waves of gray were swept back, like leaves by an autumn wind.

The rifles did most of it. Machine guns we had, to be sure, but wofully few of them. Those that we had were overworked to a point that made us wonder, not when they jammed but when they worked long without jamming. The rifle, in the hands of a man who can shoot straight and shoot with great rapidity, is a wicked weapon still; and the value of cold steel, though it is not a subject on which men who have seen it used love to dwell, has not, so far as I can see, changed greatly, if at all, in the three years of grim war in Europe.

Bird Starts a Fire.

Fire destroyed the barn of William Huff at Middle River, Minn. The blaze was caused by a bird, says Mr. Huff, which carried a twig, one end of which was aglow, into the hayloft. Not far from the barn a brush fire was burning. The nesting bird carried a twig, which had been burning in the brush fire, but which was thought to have blown away from the immediate vicinity of the fire, to the barn. Two valuable horses were burned to death.

SPECIAL NOTICES—

COMMON SENSE BEAUTY TALK.
It is neither climate nor age that plays havoc with the skin, it is not knowing how to care for it. The fine dry weathered skin should not have the same care the coarse pored oily skin should have, though it's this climate, whether the skin is dry or oily a cleansing cream and an astringent tonic is needed. The ingredient in the KEY TO BEAUTY (witch hazel) toilet preparations are guaranteed chemically pure and will not encourage the growth of hair. Your money is cheerfully refunded if you do not find them all I claim at my office or B. Jevne Company. Mail orders filled. Cream, 50 cents and $1 sizes.
BEAUTY'S GREATEST BLEMISH is the disfiguring hair growths, ill-shaped brows, warts, moles and birthmarks, all of which can be remedied skillfully and painlessly, leaving no scars. Free consultation on the care of the skin.
ANNA M. BERGERON, Skin Specialist, 820-21 Haas Bldg. Located in Los Angeles 12 years.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR, MOLES AND WARTS PERmanently removed, without scarring, from face and body. FOREWARNED

IS

AN HONEST PROPOSITION.

If you are DOUBTFUL or SKEPTICAL as to what a genuine PSYCHIC-PALMIST can do, bring this statement, and Mr. P. H. KEAN, M.P., will give you a thorough test of his PSYCHIC knowledge absolutely free of charge. KEAN will offer suggestions and give help to all who are in trouble and suspense concerning their personal affairs of life. Scientific Palmistry will reveal to you your weak points, strong characteristics, future possibilities, what you are best fitted for in life, etc. Do you know that 98 per cent. of the successful men and women of today in the affairs of life, such as business, love, marriage, etc., are guided psychically either through the development of their own intuitive force or through the aid of a Professional Psychic? The day of Psychic Phenomena as a fad, fiction and experiment has passed. The reliable Psychic-Palmist of today is consulted on the material affairs and obstacles of life with the same degree of feeling and confidence that you would consult your lawyer, doctor, banker or broker. Psychology as a science today is to the human being what the government weather bureau is to the community, and KEAN is to Psychology what Edison is to electricity. Forget what you are or were, and begin to plan what you may become. This is your hour; make the most of it. Delay is your worst enemy. When you lose your time it is gone forever. You can't regain it. Knowledge is power. Knowledge opens the door that ignorance would forever close. Life is not half so bad as some people would make you believe, so do not lose hope because the day seems dark and the affairs of life are mixed. No matter how complicated your condition may be, KEAN can and will aid you. Know the truth. Know in time what to do and how to do it. KEAN points the way. KEAN'S best indorsement is an interview with KEAN. KEAN'S fees for readings are within the reach of all. KEAN can only be consulted at his residence, 2408 South Grand Avenue, Los Angeles. Hours, 10 to 6 daily. Closed Sunday.

WANTED—

I don't believe in advertising for a position. My advice to a young man would be—go find it; but I have discovered that a few gray hairs which are becoming to a man of 50 can't find it so easy.

To the business men or house of this city, beg to say I have lived here 23 years, 8 years with one firm and 13 with another. I resigned in both cases. I have seen much of the world, good judge of human nature, sold goods off and on for 30 years, and have had considerable experience during that time handling accounts. My address will compare with the average man, not tardy, but active and a good hustler; in fact, my past will bear the closest investigation, business or otherwise. GUARANTEE every used car sold with a real written guarantee that is worth real money to you and give you liberal in addition and that we have been in the automobile business for nine years and have hundreds of satisfied patrons to refer you to, and that we have an excellent stock of used cars to select from, you are almost certain to purchase from us.

You owe it to yourself to at least investigate

EARL V. ARMSTRONG, INC.,
So. Calif. Distributors for the "Chandler Six."
Phones: 60895 or Main 3459.
Dept. No. One. Dept. No. Two.
1136 S. Olive st. 1034 S. Main st.
Closed Sundays. Open Sundays.

FOR SALE—CHANDLERS, BOTH TOURING CARS and roadsters, including the Club model. We have 1915, 1916, 1917 and one 1918 model on hand. Our business is the sale of new "Chandler Sixes," and these used cars we are offering have been accepted in exchange on new cars and are offered for sale only after we have thoroughly overhauled them in every respect, so that we may be able to guarantee them the same as a new car. We are willing to stake the Chandler reputation on them, and you may rest assured that we have left nothing undone to give a purchaser absolute satisfaction. We are not speculators in used cars. We do not expect to make a profit on them, but we do see that you are satisfied, for we want to sell you a new car later on. If we consider a car good enough to offer for sale, we know that it is good enough to guarantee. Prices on Chandlers range from $550 to $1575, depending on the model and distance they have been driven. Anyone of them is miles ahead of any new car that you would be able to purchase at the same figure. Terms. Used Car Department, EARL V. ARMSTRONG, INC., 1136 S. Olive st. Phones: 60895 or Main 3459. Closed Sundays.

FOR SALE—STUDEBAKER, 1916, LIGHT FIVE-passenger touring car, on terms of $200 down and $35 per month for ten months. This car will be guaranteed in every respect, and if you can see any way that we are failing to back it up sufficiently for your purposes we will write the guarantee to suit you. We have thoroughly overhauled it and know it to be in the best possible mechanical condition. If you will try to see what you can get in a cheap new car at this figure and put the same equipment on it, you will find that it will cost double this amount and then will not be as good a car. There are five excellent tires, electric starter, lights, generator, demountable rims, and, in fact, everything that you could possibly need. We are not speculators in used cars; our business is the sale of new "Chandler Sixes." Used Car Dept., EARL V. ARMSTRONG, INC., 1136 S. Olive st. Phones: Main 3459 or 60895. Closed Sundays.

FOR SALE—MARMON 1916 TOURING CAR THAT is practically as good as a new car in every respect and a great deal better than any new car that you might be able to purchase at $1250. We will guarantee it fully, and, as we are not speculators in used cars, you may be assured that the price is conservative. We know it is worth more, but our business is the sale of the "Chandler Sixes," and we dispose of used cars taken in exchange at a price that will move them rapidly. The former owner of this car desired an enclosed car, and that was their only reason for making an exchange. Used Car Department, EARL V. ARMSTRONG, INC., 1136 S. Olive st. Closed Sundays. Phones: 60895 or Main 3459. Terms.

FOR SALE — BUICK ROADSTER, LATE 1915 model 25C, at $550. Terms. This car has been thoroughly rebuilt and is in excellent condition. It has never been refinished on the outside, yet its appearance is excellent and it readily shows the exceptional care it has been given. We are not speculators in used cars. If we consider a car good enough to offer for sale, we know that it is good enough to guarantee. Used Car Dept. No. 2, EARL V. ARMSTRONG, INC., 1034 S. Main st. Phone Main 3459. Open Sundays.

FOR SALE—WILLYS-KNIGHT LIGHT FIVE-PASSENGER 1916 touring car at $700. This positively is at least $200 below the market value, but we are not speculators in used cars; our business is the sale of new "Chandler Sixes" and we would rather sacrifice for rapid sales than to clog our used car department and be unable to accept additional exchanges. This car is absolutely perfect, and if we consider a car good enough to offer it for sale we know that it is good enough to guarantee. A real guarantee goes with every used car sale. Terms. Open Sundays. Used Car Dept., EARL V. ARMSTRONG, INC., 1034 S. Main st., Phone Main 3459.

FOR SALE—CADILLAC 1914 TOURING CAR AT $600. TERMS. Fully equipped in every respect. Five excellent casings, demountable rims, electric starter, lights, etc. Fully guaranteed and a real opportunity for someone wishing a high-grade used car at less than the price of a cheap new one. You will be able to drive this car a year and not lose over a hundred dollars on a resale. It should not cost you a dollar for repairs in this length of time, as it is thoroughly rebuilt. We are not speculators in used cars. Used Car Dept., EARL V. ARMSTRONG, INC., 1136 S. Olive st. Closed Sundays. Phones: 60895 or Main 3459.

FOR SALE—SAXON SIX 1916 LIGHT FIVE-PASSENGER touring car at $575. If you are in the market for a light economical car and will take a demonstration in this one, you will purchase it. We will guarantee it fully and there cannot be better value in today's paper when you consider that it is electrically started and lighted; has excellent casings, demountable rims, and is mechanically right in every respect. Used Car Department, EARL V. ARMSTRONG, INC., 1136 S. Olive st. Closed Sundays. Phones: 60895 or Main 3459.

FOR SALE—
GERMAIN'S POULTRY COLUMN.
This column contains seasonable information for the poultry raiser, and includes one BIG SPECIAL each week. Our poultry department is the largest and most thoroughly equipped department of its kind in the Southwest; it contains complete supplies for the poultrymen.
FOR MOULTING HENS.
The egg production for fall and winter depends greatly upon the care given the hens during moulting season. Coulson's No. 3 Condition Powder is specially prepared for moulting hens; it tones up their systems and digestive tracts, and increases fertility.
CONKEY'S POULTRY TONIC.
Another excellent tonic for moulting hens is Conkey's Poultry Tonic. It also produces splendid results when given to laying hens.
USE KILL-WELL FOR WORMS.
Half the diseases in poultry are due to worms in the intestinal tract; Kill-Well is not only a worm exterminator, but it is also a very effective tonic; it elimates disease and keeps fowls in a healthy, vigorous condition.
EXTRA SPECIAL.
We are offering our large stock of galvanized feeders and fountains at substantial reductions—this includes automatic feeders and fountains.
WIRE FENCING AND WEATHERPROOF ROOFING
We carry a large stock of wire netting in all standard sizes of mesh, including the graduated mesh for baby chicks. We also carry weatherproof roofing paper for chicken houses, sheds, etc.
KILL INSECTS WITH PYRETHRUM.
This powder will exterminate lice, mites, ants, and flies; why be annoyed with these pests when you can rid your place of them for a few cents?
WESTERN POULTRY BOOK.
Mrs. A. Basley's well-known poultry and turkey book is written especially for western poultrymen; Mrs. Basley is a practical poultry raiser, and has operated poultry plants right here in California, and is thoroughly familiar with conditions which prevail here. Price 50 cents.

MINING—

MINING MEN, ATTENTION!
There are so many abandoned shafts and prospects we would never undertake to enumerate them, 85 per cent. of which were the result of incompetent or unprincipled advice, whether free or paid for. Remember, mining is like any other business and will not stand too many repeated failures as a "business." Now, for the sake of the mining industry and its welfare, just come and see the 5-inch dia. cores that you yourself can make and extract. You don't need any expert. Any person who would advise you not to core your property first is no friend of yours, or the industry either. All high-grade engineers ask for the "core drill first," then diagnose the best method to obtain the best producing results. We know, because we have sold 3 machines this month to just such men. Write for circular.

MOLYBDENUM, WORTH $4000 PER TON!

Can convince any fair-minded person that this is a great opportunity to make money and with your interests safeguarded. Engineer's report, maps, ore and references. Make appointment. WM. GRANNIS, 216 Consolidated Realty Bldg.

"IF THE ORE ONLY GOES DOWN," HOW MANY times have you heard this remark? You can find out what is at 500 feet in about three weeks by using our core drill, 5-inch diameter, core weighing 24 to 35 pounds to the foot; no diamonds or chilled shot used; average cost of work, $1 per foot. Let us show you samples of work. Write for particulars.

An aged vagrant was arrested on the railroad west of Santa Barbara yesterday having in his possession an expensive handbag believed to belong to the Misses Blanche and Agnes Ely of this city. The handbag contained considerable money and jewelry and a bank book. It is charged that the vagrant, W. M. Riggs, stole the handbag from the Ely auto at Naples. He was attempting to secrete it under his coat when arrested.

Parker Burnham.

VETERAN FRONTIERSMAN AT END OF THE TRA

CAPT. PARKER BURNHAM, trail blazer in the wild and woolly days of the real West, stage driver, Indian fighter and frontier Sheriff, died at the County Hospital during an operation yesterday.

Though he was little known in the fiction of the Wild West, Capt. Burnham's name is familiar to every mother's son who helped to lay the corner-stone of the West. After more than a half-century of very active life he came from El Paso, Tex., to Los Angeles less than a year ago for a "rest."

Capt. Burnham recently finished twenty-six years of service as city jailer at El Paso. He was retired at the age of 79 years. Before his career as city jailer he mingled with many phases of typical western life. For years he was driver of an overland stage between St. Louis and San Francisco. He was recognized by President Buchanan as the fastest stage driver to cross the western plains and was commissioned to carry the President's last message to the Pacific Coast. He made the trip after fifteen days' and five hours' hard driving.

RANCH OR ROCK PILE; CHOOSE, IDLE HO

BECAUSE of the constant and ever-increasing appeal from farmers and food growers of Southern California for day laborers, Chief Butler yesterday issued a letter to all police division commanders, instructing them to give all "bos" and tramps a chance to work on the ranches and farms. Otherwise it will be the rock pile for them.

The letter, in part, follows:

"At this time, when the conservation of every pound of foodstuff throughout the nation is so important, it is of paramount importance that we, as patriotic citizens, do our duty in producing and conserving this food, and as a part of the national government, which we are, by virtue of the offices we hold, it is our duty to insist, and if necessary, force others to do their parts in these matters.

"There are, in this city, several hundred men who never work, but who hang around saloons, poolrooms and either beg, borrow or steal from the workingmen that drift into the city. ## MODERN "CAVE MAN."

Lad Has Quarrel with His Brother, Rushes Into Kitchen, Seizes Soup Bone from Stove and Belabors Younger Boy With It, Police Say.

A real "cave man" was discovered late last night by Patrolman Therkorn in the person of Ray Goebel, 13 years old, who, the officer says, resorted to the most primitive implement of warfare—a bone. The boy is said to have attacked his younger brother, Leslie, 11 years old, with a soup bone following a quarrel at their home, No. 1804 West Fifty-first street.

The boys were retiring for the night, following a healthy supper, in which the soup bone took a prominent part. Leslie struck his elder brother, Ray, it is said. Then the primitive instinct inspired the brother. He ran to the kitchen, dived into the soup pot, rescued the soup bone, returned to the bedrom and hit his brother Leslie on the head with it, according to Officer Therkorn, who took the younger boy to the Receiving Hospital. Police Surgeon Stadfield sewed up a deep two-inch laceration.

The billboard combine, which ught so desperately and persistly to prevent a decent regulation the advertising sign nuisance in Angeles, has apparently come realize the futility of longer reing public opinion. That section the Conwell billboard ordinance hibiting the erection of any new billboards in the residence districts into effect a week ago, but of the legal coercion so darkly ated at by the combine's attorneys yet come to light. In less than year the ordinance will become retroactive in its provisions and the advertising monstrosities that now literate so much of the city's residential landscape will have to go.

The fact that the recent municipal election hinged upon the billboard issue showed how deeply the ple of Los Angeles had come to on this question of the desecration of their home districts by these ting chromos. The average man ards his home as a sanctuary the all-too-wearying grind that es up his working day and is d to resent having commercial thrust into his face at every n. No residence street that is lled in by banks of glaring billboards can be said to be either restful or homelike.

Many a property that is now most inviting on account of an environment of billboards will, when the big clean-up goes into effect, become desirable in the eyes of investors. The knowledge that the billboard must go in the residence districts will undoubtedly lead many buy sites they would never wish acquire otherwise. A homebuilder might be willing to endure prospect of twelve-foot advertising signs for a few months if he knew they were coming down at a given time. The abolition of the billboard in the home areas of Los Angeles is bound to have a most favorable influence on residential estate and the people of the city well congratulate themselves on having taken so firm and uncompromising a stand against this nuisance.

The Los Angeles Realty Board has been signally honored in the elevation of one of its leading members former presidents, W. M. The selection of Mr. Garland to head the great nation-wide realty organization, with its thousands of members, was all the more gratifying to his friends and fellow-workers here because it met with no opposition at the big convention of association in Milwaukee. Mr. Garland, it appears, was the unanimous choice of the association's Nominating Committee, not only on account of his personal popularity among the real estate men of the country, but because he was a member of the Los Angeles Realty Board.

The association members have a warm spot in their hearts for Los Angeles ever since the national convention was held here in 1914, when several hundred of them journeyed to the Pacific Coast from all parts of the United States to meet as guests of the Los Angeles Realty Board. The convention afforded many of the delegates their first opportunity to see Los Angeles and Southern California and evidences have been multiplying ever since that all the visitors returned to their homes with a good word in their own communities for this city and section. Northwest.

NEW DISTRICT FORGES AHEAD.

Gap Between Hollywood and Wilshire Narrowing.

Western Avenue is Scene of Important Activity.

Improvements Include Flats, Homes and Stores.

One of the newest and most rapidly growing community centers in Los Angeles is that now being developed along and near North Western avenue between Santa Monica boulevard and Melrose avenue. The district lies in between the northern Wilshire section on the south and Hollywood on the north and has until recently been largely vacant or sparsely built-up territory. So much improvement work has been done in the vicinity in the last few months, however, that the former line of demarcation between the Wilshire and Hollywood districts in this part of northwest Los Angeles has been almost eliminated.

One of the most notable improvements of the new residential center is a group of attractive duplex houses known as Romaine Court, recently completed at the northwest corner of Western and Sierra Vista avenues, a block south of Santa Monica boulevard. The court consists of five buildings, each containing two six-room suites, and was planned and built by the owner, Aaron F. Norton. The houses are of Colonial architecture and are arranged around forecourts facing on the two street fronts. The grounds have been beautified with lawns and flower gardens and several large palms have just been transplanted on the property.

On the opposite side of Western avenue, two blocks south of Santa Monica boulevard and a like distance north of Melrose avenue, the Lilly-Fletcher Company has just completed for George Jaroumsky a series of eight flat buildings. The structures occupy an entire block of frontage and are understood to have cost over $50,000. Each contains four five-room suites. The buildings all have plastered exterior walls and identical floor plans, but vary in design. The project is one of the most extensive of its kind yet undertaken in the city.

As the result of the general building activity in the vicinity, the intersection of Santa Monica boulevard and Western avenue is becoming a center for business concerns. Alfred Z. Taft is now completing a two-story store, office and apartment building at the southwest corner of these thoroughfares. The five stores of the structure have all been leased, as have also some of the offices and apartments. The building is of brick construction and attractive design and fronts sixty-five feet on Western by 110 feet on Santa Monica. It was planned by Frank Rasche, under whose supervision it has also been erected, and is stated to have cost over $30,000. At the northwest corner of Western and Santa Monica, H. C. Canne is now completing a one-story brick store building.

WEST SIDE TRANSFERS.

Two sales of residence property in the Wilshire district are reported by Roland Belgiano. One of the deals announced is the transfer by Guy D. Sisson to Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Waterman of a ten-room house at No. 442 South Normandie avenue. The site is 60x150 feet in size. The other was the sale by Miss Frances Campbell to Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Simmons of New York, of a ten-room house at the northeast corner of Harvard boulevard and West Fourth street, for a consideration of $8000. The lot has a frontage of sixty feet on Harvard by 150 feet on Fourth.

WEST SIDE DEEDS.

Broker and Builder Reports a Number of Sales and Contracts.

S. M. Cooper reports the following sales: Ten-room house at No. 301 South St. Andrews place, lot 60x150 feet, Carrie L. Campbell to Hoyt Post, Jr., $15,000; nine-room house at No. 152 South Van Ness avenue, lot 60x150 feet, Carrie L. Campbell to R. H. Williams, $9250; ten-room house at No. 696 Westmoreland avenue, lot 50x145 feet, S. M. Cooper and John G. Bullock to Louise Heidt, $14,000; ten-room house at No. 692 Westmoreland avenue, lot 50x145 feet, S. M. Cooper and John G. Bullock to Nelle Dermont, $13,500; seven-room bungalow at No. 1501 West Forty-sixth street, lot 50x130 feet, F. J. Corcoran to Abe Goldman, $5000; eight-room bungalow at No. 309 South Hobart, lot 50x150 feet, Mr. Seccomb to Mr. LeRoy, $11,000.

Mr. Cooper has secured a contract to build an eight-room house for J. G. Tyler on Carondelet street and is now beginning an eight-room house on Seventh, near Norton, for himself. He has also purchased a lot on Ardmore between Fourth and Fifth streets on which he will build a house of twelve rooms, and a lot at Oxford and Fifth on which he expects to build a ten-room residence. He has just started a twenty-room flat on Westmoreland avenue between Sixth and Wilshire.

CHURCH CONTRACT.

The contract was let last week for the construction of a church for St. Paul's Roman Catholic parish on West Washington street near Tenth avenue. The building will be of brick and will have ground dimensions of 40x110 feet. Albert C. Martin is the architect.

CHINO'S BEET CROP.

The beginning of the harvest of the sugar beet crop in Chino has begun, with a good yield in sight, and all available men at work gathering the beets.

The American Beet Sugar Company has not found it necessary to issue a call for high school boys to assist with gathering the crop, but they are being put to work as they apply. Most of the laborers are Mexicans.

LONG PACKING SEASON.

Although the apricot season is nearing its close, the peach run in Banning will be exceedingly heavy, beginning in about two weeks and continuing for a month. The Banning cannery has purchased a thousand tons of cling peaches, the late kind, and will have the fruit shipped in from the cling peach districts. Indications are that the cannery will be operated until October 1.

BUILDING GAIN.

Building operations in July showed an increase of nearly 20 per cent. in valuation by comparison with the corresponding month a year ago. The total for last month was $1,063,808, as against $909,056 for July, 1916. The total valuation represented by the building permits during the first seven months of 1917 was $12,789,515. The figure for the same period in 1916 was $8,702,323.

ATTORNEY BUYS HOME.

Edmund B. Drake, a local attorney, was the purchaser, during the past week of a ten-room residence of colonial architecture at No. 244 South Oxford. The sale is reported by Ralph E. Ford of the Janss Investment Company, who gives the consideration at $11,000 cash. George Taylor was the builder and seller of the place.

HOTEL PROJECTED.

Among the improvements now projected in Hollywood is a three-story hotel to be erected by W. B. Glidden at Nos. 6728 to 6736 Hollywood boulevard. The building, it is understood, will cost about $35,000 and will be of brick construction, with pressed brick facing. It will cover a ground area of 83x133 feet. The ground floor will contain four stores in addition to the lobby.

A NEW WAY.

TO GET WHAT YOUR PROPERTY IS WORTH
TO CHANGE A POOR INVESTMENT TO A GOOD ONE.
TO SHARE IN CALIFORNIA PROGRESS
TO CUT THE HIGH COST OF LIVING
TO GET YOUR BUSINESS IN BETTER SHAPE TO COME TO CALIFORNIA, IF A NON-RESIDENT.
TO STAY IN CALIFORNIA, IF YOU ARE NOW HERE.

YES, AT LAST A NEW WAY AND A PRACTICAL WAY TO BRING PEOPLE TO CALIFORNIA AND TO ALSO KEEP THOSE ALREADY HERE.

HOW OFTEN DO YOU HEAR SOME ONE SAY, "I WOULD LIVE IN CALIFORNIA IF I COULD JUST SELL THE PROPERTY I OWN BACK HOME OR SOMEWHERE ELSE?" YOU KNOW AND WE KNOW HOW HARD IT IS TO SELL PROPERTY FOR WHAT IT SHOULD REALLY BE WORTH IN SO MANY LOCALITIES JUST AT THIS TIME. THE TROUBLE IS—THE [illegible] ARE OPPORTUNITIES IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA THAT WILL NOT WAIT UNTIL THAT INDEFINITE TIME IN THE FUTURE WHEN OWNERS MAY SELL THEIR EASTERN PROPERTY AND REINVEST HERE. THAT IS THE PROBLEM THAT CONFRONTS THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE TODAY.

THE SOLUTION.

WE HAVE LONG HAD THE IDEA—BUT IT WAS ONLY AFTER MUCH EFFORT THAT WE FINALLY CONVINCED THE OWNERS OF ONE OF THE BEST LOCATED SUBDIVISIONS NEAR LOS ANGELES THAT THERE WAS A PLAN BY WHICH WE COULD GET HIM THE VALUE FOR HIS SUBDIVISION BY ACCEPTING OTHER REAL ESTATE IN LIEU OF CASH AND AT THE SAME TIME GIVE AN OPPORTUNITY TO THE FELLOW WHO WANTED TO BUY TRACTS IN THIS SUBDIVISION BUT HAD HIS MONEY TIED UP IN OTHER INVESTMENTS. IN OTHER WORDS WE CONVINCED HIM OF THE TRUTH AND BENEFIT TO HIM AS WELL AS THE BUYER—IN OUR CO-OPERATIVE PLAN.

WE ARE PROVING TO HIM THAT A SUBDIVISION OF REAL MERIT CAN BE SOLD WITHOUT ANY [illegible]

WE HAVE SHOWN HIM HOW WHEN A MAN BECOMES A PROPERTY OWNER IN A SUBDIVISION AND GETS GOOD VALUE, HE BECOMES A BOOSTER, AND HIS ADVERTISING OF THAT SUBDIVISION IS BETTER FAR THAN [illegible] THAT WE CAN SELL ANY PIECE OF REAL ESTATE REGARDLESS OF WHERE LOCATED, [illegible] SOME THERE MAY BE A LOSS, BUT ON SOME THERE SHOULD BE A PROFIT, AND WE ARE BETTING THAT WE CAN MAINTAIN A FAIR AVERAGE.

THE FIRST UNIT OF SUBDIVISION, IN A TERRITORY THAT IN OUR OPINION PRESENTS OPPORTUNITIES OF POSSIBLE [illegible] HAS BEEN PLACED IN OUR HANDS TO SELL WITH FULL POWER TO ACCEPT OTHER REAL ESTATE OF MERIT, REGARDLESS OF WHERE LOCATED, IN FULL OR PART PAYMENT FOR ACRES, HALF-ACRES, RESIDENCE LOTS, BUSINESS LOTS, OR FACTORY SITES. NOTHING BINDING YOU UNTIL YOU MAKE CAREFUL INSPECTION AND INVESTIGATION OF US, OUR PROPOSITION AND [illegible] FORGET [illegible] OUR PRICES ARE RIGHT. OUR LOCATION IS RIGHT. ### ORANGE AND LEMON GROVES—

For Sale, Exchange, Wanted.

FOR SALE—WHY INVEST YOUR MONEY IN real estate elsewhere, when you can find better bargains in Azusa than elsewhere in Southern California?

Do you know that Azusa property can be bought at one-half the price charged by adjoining towns?

We have the purest and cheapest water in Southern California. We charge 75 cents for the first 15,000 gallons, all additional water at the rate of 10 cents for each additional 7500 gallons. Other towns charge from two to four times these prices. We sell electricity at 6 cents per killowatt. HOW CAN WE DO IT? Because the city of Azusa own and control their water and light systems.

We have seven churches, no saloons, best of grammar and high school facilities, and one of the most ideal and healthy locations for a home.

We have bargains in houses and lots and orange groves.

We call your especial attention to three bargains; a 11½-acre orange grove, all in bearing, part Valencias, and part navels. A 5-acre and a 3-acre part Valencia and part navel grove, all in bearing. All supplied with Azusa irrigating water at practically no cost except the cost of turning off and on.

Our customers are our best references. If these do not satisfy you, we will furnish you with the best of bank references.

PAPER DEMAND EQUALS SUPPLY.

Survey Shows Need for a Greater Output.

Requirements Growing Faster than the Industry.

Reforestation Suggested as Best Future Safeguard.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The Secretary of Agriculture, D. F. Houston, has issued the following statement:

"Conditions in the paper industry have constituted one of the most serious of our domestic problems during the last year. Due to the exorbitant prices charged for news print, the profits of the great dailies were either wiped out entirely or else reduced to a minimum, while the small publishers were brought face to face with suspension and even absolute ruin. Periodical publishers have fared no less badly, the profits of book publishers have changed to losses in many cases, and the price of paper of every kind has risen by leaps and bounds.

"The Federal Trade Commission has brought some measure of relief to the newspaper publishers. Competition has been freed from restraint, prices have been made to bear a closer relation to the cost of production, and a more equitable system of distribution has been devised so that the 'little fellows' will get their fair share of the manufactured product. But, while the inquiry of the commission developed artificial control it developed also that here is almost an equal balance between supply and demand in the paper industry.

GROWING USE OF PAPER.

"In 1914 we used about 5000 tons of news print every day. Our present use has reached 6000 tons a day, and the demand appears to be increasing at the rate of 10 per cent. a year, materially faster than the increase in population. To supply our presses with news print requires annually about 3,000,000 cords of pulp wood. To meet our requirements for magazines and book paper, stationery and business papers of all forms, wrapping papers, wall papers, cardboard, fiber board and the like, 4,000,000 cords more of pulp wood are consumed annually. Production barely keeps pace with this consumption. For instance, the estimated demand for news print for the first six months of 1917 is 888,000 tons. Against this is placed an estimated supply of 930,000 tons.

SUPPLIES.

"As if this close balance was not peril enough, there is the added fact that the United States depends upon Canada for a third of its news print paper, either in the form of finished product or raw material. This proportion is increasing rapidly. The pressure of economic conditions and lack of foresight in cutting the forests have so depleted the available private supply of pulp woods in many of the paper manufacturing States that there is not enough left to last more than ten or fifteen years. As a consequence, Canada is more and more called upon for pulp woods, and American manufacturers are showing an increasing disposition to slip across the border into the virgin forests of the Dominion.

"It is this condition of dependence that should be ended. Changes in Canadian policy might at any time cut off our newspapers from this source of supply or make it available only at excessive cost. On the other hand, our own forest resources are ample to meet all the paper requirements of the country. Aside from the waste materials produced in the manufacture of lumber and the possible growth on 65,000,000 or 70,000,000 acres of cut-over forest lands in the Northern States, the publicly-owned national forests contain enough pulp wood to supply the entire paper needs of the United States for the next eighty years. Cut intelligently, it constitutes virtually an inexhaustible supply for all time.

MATERIALS AVAILABLE.

"The forest service has estimated the pulp wood in the national forests at 300,000,000,000 feet. This means 600,000,000 cords, and for all paper of all kinds we use but 7,000,000 cords a year. There are other large supplies of pulp wood on privately-owned lands in the West. These western raw materials are much cheaper than the woods now used by paper mills in the Northeast. While pulp-wood stumpage in the Northern States costs from $2.50 to $5 per cord standing in the forest, first-class western timbers are available at prices ranging from 25 cents to $1.50 per cord. Long-distance transportation and the large investments tied up in paper plants necessarily will retard the westward expansion or migration of this industry; but unquestionably it should afford one means of increasing the production of paper to keep pace with current demands.

PAPER WOOD BELTS.

"From the standpoint of geographical location and transportation to the bulk of the paper users in the Central and Eastern States the western paper woods fall into two broad belts. The first is available to tidewater shipments from the Pacific Coast, lying principally on the west slope of the Cascade Mountains in Oregon and Washington, including vast areas tributary to Puget Sound and running up along the seaboard in Southeasterly Alaska. There are 70,000,000,000 feet of spruce and hemlock in the national forests of Alaska alone. In many respects its conditions as to abundant forests of paper-making woods, water power and direct tidewater transportation duplicate those of Norway, the leading country of the world in its paper industry. It is a safe preduction that in the last analysis the value of Alaska to the United States as a source of paper will be found to exceed the value of any other of her enormous resources—coal, minerals or fisheries.

"The second timber belt of western paper woods extends through the northern Rocky Mountains from the Canadian line into Colorado and Utah. This belt, shut off from water transportation, can hardly be considered a practical source of supply of paper for the Eastern States; but it is a logical storehouse of raw materials for the paper requirements of the Mississippi Valley. The Rocky Mountains contain a number of excellent paper woods, and, with proper development, should supply both the paper required for local consumption and that necessary to replace the diminishings supplies of the Lake States for the needs of the Middle West.

NEW VARIETIES OF WOOD.

"Extending the supply of raw materials by determining the papermaking qualities of new woods is an important factor in the problem. Tests conducted by the Forest Products Laboratory of the Department of Agriculture have demonstrated the suitability for various grades of paper of no less then twelve new or little-used woods, including Englemann spruce, lodge pole pine, white fir, and other cheap and abundant coniferous woods of the Western States. At least ten of these woods were proved good enough for news print, and papers made from some of them actually were used in editions of the New York Herald and St. Louis Republic.

WATER POWER.

Almost equal in importance to the timber of the Pacific Coast belt and the Rocky Mountain belt are the publicly-owned water powers, a second primary essential of the paper industry. Undeveloped power is there in sufficient quantity and available for exploitation and use under reasonable measures of government control. This is equally true with respect to coal, almost as important in paper manufacture as pulp wood itself. Both in Alaska and in the Rocky Mountain region the Federal government owns great coal fields of tremendous richness, abundantly able, so the experts report, to supply every national need for many years. The one problem to be faced is that of the best means of utilization. How may our tremendous natural resources be given the quickest and most effective relation to the national needs.

FOREST RESOURCES.

"The first plan is that of public sales of raw material to the manufacturers. This already is being done to some extent. During the last year national forest timber sales to lumber companies, railroads and mining companies and one western paper mill amounted to $1,795,000. This plan calls for contractual relations between the government and private capital. New mills might be erected in Alaska, the Puget Sound country or the Rocky Mountain region, under agreements with the government for a long-term supply of raw material, guaranteed under an equitable adjustment of prices from time to time. This already is being done in the case of certain saw mills. Such contracts may readily contain provisions which give the public effective control of possible industrial combinations or monopolies.

NEWS PRINT IN ALASKA.

"Experts of the Forest Service report that it is entirely practicable to manufacture news print in Alaska and deliver it to New York through the Panama Canal at a cost of not more than $35 a ton. When it is considered that recent prices have ranged from $60 a ton upward, it is evident that an excellent competitive basis exists for the introduction of western papers.

"The development of private paper plants in the West might be supplemented by the erection of mills by the Federal government itself. It is estimated that a mill with a capacity of 100 tons of news print a day can be built in Alaska for $2,500,000. Even if the output of the mill was confined to the needs of the government alone, it is probable that such a mill would pay for itself in no great length of time, while adding something to the paper supply of the nation.

"The fundamental problem is to build up paper production in the United States to keep pace with a growing demand and afford a sufficient supply at all times to hold prices at reasonable levels. To the extent that private enterprises will do this, it would appear unnecessary for the government to undertake it, particularly if the publicly-owned forests can be utilized for the purpose under conditions which give the public control of industrial organizations. In the event that private capital cannot be enlisted, however, to meet the needs of a larger paper supply available at fair prices, it may well be that the Federal government should enter the industry as a direct method of controlling the situation.

USE OF WOOD NOW WASTED.

"These are the larger aspects of the situation. There are certain direct and simple approaches, however, that call for nothing more than greater economy. The waste that now occurs in the manufacture of lumber is estimated by the Forest Service at something over 60,000,000 cords annually. At least 40,000,000 cords consists of coniferous woods, a part of which is suitable for the manufacture of various grades of paper, although the cost of assembling it in sufficient quantities to support a paper plant is often prohibitive. Experiments at the Forest Products Laboratory show that much of this waste can be utilized for the manufacture of kraft wrapping papers, fiber board and other pulp products. In the case of sawmills that cut up spruce, hemlock, etc., the waste can often be gathered and shipped with profit to news-print mills.

"The use for pulp of waste material left after lumbering recently has been introduced in lumbering operations in Pennsylvania and parts of the South. Hemlock tops and broken, defective logs are peeled in some Pennsylvania lumber camps, cut into five-foot lengths, and sold for pulp wood. From 250,000 to 260,000 cords of slab wood and other mill waste are now consumed every year for pulp. In 1908, hemlock formed 41 per cent. of the sawmill waste used, and its average value was $4.07 per cord, about two-thirds that of hemlock cordwood in the round. In Wisconsin, sawmills often sell their hemlock slabs to paper mills for from $2 to $3 per cord. This is a form of conservation that should be given speed and drive.

FORESTRY THE SOLUTION.

"So much for the immediate problem of supplying the paper requirements of the United States today. For the second phase of the problem, that of an assured future supply of paper within our own borders, there is only one solution: the practice of forestry to keep up a continuous production of pulp wood. There is nothing difficult about this solution if the latent producing capacity of the forest lands in the United States is utilized. There is no reason why the regions now supporting large paper-making plants should not do so permanently, as Norway does, if the native resources of those regions are but properly organized and intelligently used. The production of pulp woods, in fact, offers one of the best opportunities for forestry in the United States, because small, quickly-grown material can be utilized for this purpose, and because many of the fastest-growing trees, like poplar or Norway spruce, are adapted to it.

"With intelligent cutting and protection from fire, the land will restock itself. Unintelligent cutting that 'skins' the land, however, may call eventually for artificial reforestation. Denuded land can be planted with 1000 young trees per acre, nursery grown, at a cost of about $10 per acre. Some of the paper companies in New England are acquiring and protecting large areas of forest land, many of them culled or cut over, in order to insure a future supply of raw material to protect the enormous investments represented by their paper plants. In a few instances, a limited amount of planting has been done. Considerable areas of inferior pasture land, worn-out farms, and the like in New England have been restocked with trees, either through a gradual reversion to forest by natural causes or by artificial planting, because their owners have realized that these lands of low value could be utilized to the best advantage by producing wood.

POLICY NEEDED.

"In other sections, like considerable portions of the lake States, reforestation is not coming about through economic development, or is coming about so slowly that it will be far behind the need of forest-using industries for raw material. In such regions public initiative and enterprise must take the lead. Probably the greatest need is for an intelligent, farsighted administration of the forest lands now in public ownership, in one form or another, and for the addition of cut-over forest lands of low value to the public holdings, State and Federal alike.

"Practically all European countries have found that a considerable body of publicly-owned forests was essential in working out their problem of keeping up continuous forest production. The United States will prove no exception to this rule, and the building up of State and Federal forest holdings under expert, nonpartisan administration is one of the most important steps to insure a future supply of paper as well as other basic forest products.

"On the 165,000,000 acres of Federal forest holdings in the national forests, the timber is being used under scientific methods of cutting, as there is demand for it, and the lands denuded by old fires are being reforested by planting to the extent of 20,000 acres annually. Federal holdings also are being extended by purchase in the Eastern States, under the Weeks law, for the protection of navigable streams.

STATE FOREST RESERVES.

"A number of States have made valuable beginnings in this direction. Pennsylvania has acquired State forest reserves aggregating more than 1,000,000 acres, and consisting largely of culled or cut-over lands which the State has been able to purchase at low valuations. New York has extensive State holdings; Wisconsin and Michigan both have small areas; Minnesota recently has passed a constitutional amendment which will permit the creation of permanent State reserves. All these efforts, in the aggregate, fall far short of the need. Particularly in the lake States, in whose early economic development forest resources probably had the largest part, is there a general lack of an intelligent public conception of this problem and of adequate measures toward its solution.

"The right kind of land ownership is fundamental in working out the problem of a sustained supply of lumber, paper, and other essential forest products. There must be a stable interest which insures permanent forest production. This may be supplied by general economic development. Otherwise, it must be supplied by the farsighted point of view of the community, either through direct public ownership or a sufficient measure of public control to secure the results necessary.

BUILD UP FOREST.

"An immediate necessity in the accomplishment of this object is to build up the forest departments of the various States—to get behind fire protection, to push reforestation of State lands, to demand acquisition of permanent forest reserves, and to support expert investigative work in forestry. Expert classification of receded tax lands should have an important place in this development. Cut-over lands not suited to agriculture or which have but a low or questionable value for tillage should be kept by the States and added to their forest reserves, so that an aggressive public policy of reforestation may be pursued. This is one line of attack upon the vital and general problem of how to put all classes of land to their most productive use.

FOREST LANDS.

"Another thing that must be brought about is full recognition of the public interest in all forest lands. It is not enough that the State should look after its own holdings; it must extend its authority to the management of private holdings as far as may be necessary to meet public needs. We must recognize, in other words, that forest lands have, in a measure, the nature of public utilities.

"A first step in such regulation is compulsory fire protection, the starting point of forestry. Not only, however, should each land owner be required to do his share in preventing or suppressing forest fires, but the public itself should co-operate by furnishing the necessary machinery for correlating and directing this work as a whole. The State of Oregon has taken an advanced step in this direction, through a law making the protection of timbered lands obligatory upon their owners and authorizing the State Forester to protect lands whose owners fail to discharge this duty. The cost of such protection, within limits prescribed by the act, becomes a lien against the property. At the same time the State itself expends a considerable sum for a system of fire wardens upon which the entire protective organization is built up and correlated.

"In many cases, the protection of cut-over forest lands from fire is sufficient. In other cases it should be supplemented by the enforcement of simple forestry measures, such as the disposal of slashings and the regulation of cutting to make certain that the land will be left in a condition which will insure its regrowth.

TAXATION.

"With public regulation, however, should go a vigorous encouragement of private owners to keep their forest lands continuously at work and thus do away with the economic loss represented by the idleness of millions of acres of 'skinned' land. Such encouragement is justified by the community benefits afforded by the reforestation of private lands and the burdens imposed upon their owner in deferring income from them. The community may share in these burdens, as it shares in the advantages of reforestation, by applying the yield, or harvest, tax to forest lands which are properly managed so as to meet their public obligations. The owner thus will be released from the burden of annual property taxes, paying instead a tax on the returns from his property at the intervals when its wood crops are harvested. This concession, of course, should apply only to owners whose lands are kept in continuous forest production.

"A number of the States have taken progressive steps in accord with some of these suggestions. Their local forest departments furnish the groundwork for building up and expanding the forest activities of the State. The Department of Agriculture also stands ready to give aid and encouragement. Experts of the Forest Service are available to advise with State legislatures regarding forest legislation and to co-operate with State commissions or local associations of citizens in developing the forest policy of the State."

HEALTH BOARD'S LATEST PLANS.

Will Establish a Branch State Laboratory in Los Angeles Next Month.

During the early part of August a new branch laboratory for the State Board of Health will be established, to be located in the Union League Building, Second and Hill streets. The corps that will be located here will include a State bacteriologist, an assistant sanitary engineer and a district physician.

Under new regulations, the State will be divided into six districts, and a district physician placed in charge of each. The district whose headquarters will be located here will include the counties of Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Ventura, Orange and San Diego. The other counties of Southern California will constitute another one of these six districts.

Dr. W. A. Sawyer of Sacramento, who is secretary and executive officer for the State Board of Health, will probably come here next week to perfect plans for the installation of the new branch laboratory.

CITRUS FRUIT SHIPMENTS AND MARKET SUMMARY.

ORANGES.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 3.—(Office of the Fruit World, Hollingsworth Blg.) The situation on Valencias shows little change over a week ago. The Valencia deal has been going through a period of price readjustment that is always attended by many difficulties which leaves obstacles that must be removed before the market can again be placed on a satisfactory basis and the free consumption of fruit again restored. With prohibitive prices many small dealers drop out of the market and devote their attention to the cheaper-priced summer fruits that are now available. Now that prices are down to a level that insures a more uniform consumption of Valencias, these small dealers are again in the market and the situation is developing a firmer feeling with a more active demand. The fact that many of the Valencias are showing up poor color helps to pull down the general average price realized. In addition to this, considerable of the fruit is lacking in quality and while the fruit cannot be said to be frozen or heated in the true sense of the words, there is "something" lacking in some of the Valencias either as a result of the cold weather earlier in the season or the hot spell two months ago that is responsible for the poor quality of some of the fruit now being offered. Owing to the well-known "come-back" qualifications of the Valencia orange the balance of the crop remaining to be moved may show no trace of this condition, which, of course, is not general, but troublesome; nevertheless it reflects on the crop as a whole.

Reports from the East state that many prominent resort points that usually take liberal quantities of Valencias each season are not in the market owing to the poor business season. This condition is reported from many States. Valencias are used largely at the different resorts in making up a popular summer drink similar to lemonade and is becoming more generally used for that purpose each year.

F.o.b. prices at this time are on a basis of $2.50 to $2.75, according to sizes.

Reports from Tulare county state that the cloudy weather throughout the early part of July gave a wonderful impetus to the orange crop in that district with indications that the crop will run from 85 to 90 per cent. normal. The trees are in good physical condition and some sections expect to establish new-crop records where the groves have been given proper care. Where the trees have been neglected and those groves that have not been sufficiently fertilized will show a small production. Practically all fruit men of the district agree that the fruit is showing up better than at first reported. Recent warm weather has advanced the fruit rapidly. Two months ago it was predicted that the marketing season would be at least two weeks late. Now it is stated that it will be about the usual time.

In Southern California districts reports on condition of navel groves and possible yield show improvement although it is yet too early to give occurate estimates.

LEMONS.

The summer's most extensive heat wave overspread almost the entire country east of the Rockies the past week, causing severe suffering in the cities which in turn caused an unprecedented demand for lemons. As a result the market on lemons is very much excited and the highest prices in the history of the industry are being paid. In the New York market on Thursday, $13.60 was the record price recorded on a straight carload of lemons from the A. C. G. district. This price standing as the highest ever realized on a straight car of lemons.

Under existing conditions it is impossible to quote prices on lemons, the market being on a basis of what can be had for the fruit.

Late reports show that the Middle West has cooled off somewhat and that the cool wave is traveling eastward. Another hot wave is reported from the Northwest, however, and there is no telling what the coutcome will be.

Foreign lemon importers are taking advantage of the hot spell with an offering of 40,000 boxes of lemons on Thursday and another lot of 50,000 boxes to sell today which should relieve the situation in the East.

HOODOO IN COURT.

Superstition Causes Trouble in Chattanooga Court.

[Chattanooga Times:] Hoodoo doctors are busy in the criminal court and Judge McReynolds has ordered his officers to be on the lookout in an effort to detect them. For two consecutive mornings F. W. Hill, the court officer, upon his arrival in the courtroom has found evidences that the "doctors" have preceded him. Recently he was much surprised to find that the attempt to cast the "spell" over the court and Attorney-General had extended itself to the jury box. Each of the twelve seats in the box, together with Judge McReynolds's seat and bench and the table and chair which belong to the prosecuting attorney, had been "doctored." Chief Hill discovered that the seats had been sprinkled with pepper and a white crystal substance. He said he strongly detected the smell of pepper as soon as he opened the door. The matter was reported to Judge McReynolds upon his arrival a few minutes later. The janitors were closely questioned, but each said he had seen no suspicious characters in the courtroom either after adjournment of the day before or before the opening of court the next morning.

One of the strange superstitions that still is in existance among negroes, apparently of all classes, is that of "hoodoo doctors." In the case of Effie Hardy and John Grant, who were charged jointly with the murder of Lula Windham, old Aunt Dinah Williams, of hog pen fame, known among the members of her race as a "hoodoo doctor," came and sat in the court and the negroes said she waved a red bag filled with her "hoodoo" concoction and for that reason the cases against the negroes were continued from term to term and finally thrown out of court.

Officials do not know upon what case the "doctors" are operating in the present instance.

Judge Fleming said that he has had considerable experience with the "doctors" in the city court, and that they had become so bold in their operations that they would stand in front of his bench and sprinkle their concoctions in view of everybody. On more than one occasion they have been fined for contempt of court.

Officials are inclined to take a humorous view of the situation, but Judge McReynolds intimated that if his officers could succeed in locating the "doctor" or "doctors" they would be harshly dealt with. The judge did not smile when he made the comment. Gen. Whitaker did not mince words when talking about the matter and said the negroes implicated should be found and given a dose of their own medicine. Chief Hill has been instructed to keep a watch out and endeavor to find the "doctor" and report his identity to Judge McReynolds.

MOCKING BIRDS

Now Making Their Music Heard in Massachusetts.

[Boston Transcript:] New England welcomes southern invaders nowadays. They come in summer to our mountains and our beaches in ever-increasing numbers, and we rejoice in the ever-increasing neighborliness which results. Of late it seems as if the very birds were following them. The Carolina wren, a joyous little bird with a fine song, is domiciled now in Southern Connecticut, in Rhode Island, and is leisurely extending its range up along the Cape shore toward Boston. The Kentucky cardinal has been heard whistling in Massachusetts, and now come the mocking birds. One of these has simply adopted Boston and will not leave it. Boston is, of course, the home of the Symphony Orchestra and the headquarters for real music in this country, which may be the reason, for the mocking bird certainly knows good music when he hears it. This bird dwells out in the Arnold Arboretum summer and winter alike. There in spring and summer he sings most divinely, imitates all the good bird music he hears, also some of the bad, and is a well-known character. Visiting Southerners go there to hear him sing and are pleased with Boston's so genuine hospitality. Last winter a mocking bird spent part of the cold weather up near Manchester, N. H., to the great joy of New Hampshire bird lovers. One has been heard of near Bangor and one near Portland, Me. Last spring two pairs came to Quincy, Mass., and made themselves at home quite near the Neighborhood Club, in one of the city's most exclusive sections. Mocking birds are reported as nesting near Newburyport, near Brewster, in the Berkshires and elsewhere.

The reason seems to be found in the increasing numbers of the birds South, where, thanks to the vigorous propaganda of the bird protectionists, they are no longer killed, trapped and persecuted. Cardinals and mocking birds formerly suffered especially from the desire to cage songsters. Nuttall tells of one shipment of 1800 cardinals which were readily disposed of in Havana for caged birds. We have changed all that. Song birds are no longer killed for food or for fun as they once were in the South, thanks to the new Federal law forbidding it, and there is a very considerable increase in numbers. Bird life is safer everywhere and the increasing numbers readily overflow the former limited range. Visitors from the South, summer or winter, are welcome. They are all delightful folk and when they find what a fine place New England really is they tend to stay. More mocking birds may be confidently expected.

Hard to Hear Airplane at Sea.

[Scientific American:] While it is widely known that an airplane can be heard for some distance off on land, on water the lapping of the waves and the whistling of the wind through the rigging and superstructure of a vessel make it almost impossible to hear the power plant of an approaching seaplane until it is almost overhead. Hence the submarine plying the surface has slight warning of an impending seaplane attack until it is often too late to escape.

BIG MACKEREL ARE PROVIDING MUCH FUN.

In ocean fishing, by far the biggest feature has been the unusual mackerel run all along the coast; fish of large size so plentiful that one rod has taken as high as sixty-two in a morning, fifteen to eighteen-inch "cornfeds." The popular procedure is to rent a boat at Redondo, the breakwater, Newport, load up with sardines or anchovies, and row out a mile or two to where the birds show the mackerel to be, schooling on the surface, and then get busy. They will take a fly freely when biting. Many a tubful has been salted down against the high cost of living by anglers.

COMMERCIAL.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Rising costs of feed are playing havoc with egg and butter producers, and this is without doubt the main reason of the sensational advances that have been made in the chief staples of late. Yesterday almost every feed and meal in the entire miller's list was boosted and some of the gains in price were sharp. Hundreds of poultry producers claim that on account of this excessive cost of feed they cannot make any money out of their eggs if the price for the same went to $1 a dozen, and for that reason they are selling off their hens to the meat market as fast as possible, which does not help the egg situation any. As far as the dairy men are concerned, feed is costing them so much that hundreds of cows have been disposed of which has cut down the supply of milk, forcing up prices for that essential commodity and making the price that the buttermaker has to pay for butter fat almost prohibitive.

Some people believe that the egg and butter dealers and brokers are running up the price of butter and eggs through manipulation to make a fat profit for themselves. They were never further from the truth. Brokers and dealers make a percentage on the goods they handle, which as a general thing is not affected at all by the price the goods are selling for. No matter what elegant arguments are brought forward by the Anarchists and Socialists to prove that some one is making a heap of money out of the present high level of quotations for butter and eggs, when these are ferreted out the fact becomes clear that it is the price of wheat and its by-products which is behind prices that rule today, and nothing else.

The local butter situation is firm, although it is generally believed that values have about reached the top for the immediate present. Recent advances here were in sympathy with San Francisco and apparnetly was the result of heavy war orders from the government. At the moment storage butter is some 184,000 pounds less than a year ago in Los Angeles.

Receipts Saturday comprised 148 cases of eggs, 11,700 pounds of butter, 23,500 pounds of cheese, 44 sacks of potatoes, 2 sacks of onions and 1401 boxes of apples.

OLDFIELD WINS FROM HIS OWN RACING CAR.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) Aug. 4.—Barney Oldfield won three races from Ralph de Palma in a match event on the one-mile dirt track at the State fair grounds here this afternoon. In the second lap of the fifteen-mile race De Palma crashed through the inner fence, swerved out upon the track and limped into the pits with sections of the fence hanging on his car. De Palma was unhurt, and the race was started again with the Italian using Oldfield's emergency car. The time for the fifteen-mile race was 13:56:2.

GOOD REPORTS ON MOST OF SOUTHLAND'S CROPS.

Reports on nearly all of Southern California's crops continue to be encouraging. Tulare county has begun to harvest the largest and most valuable deciduous fruit crop in its history. The peach yield there is normal in spite of early indications that it would be small. Chino and other places report a good yield of sugar beets and very high prices. The Banning peach crop promises to be unusually large. The annual census report of Imperial county's assessor shows an even greater acreage in crops than had been estimated and enormous yields.

Yucaipa Valley.

INTERCROPPING PAYS.

Orchard Owners Plant Beans, Tomatoes and Potatoes Between Rows of Young Trees with Profitable Results—Big Apple Crop.

That a farmer with some training and close application can make the rich lands of the south produce a good living in five or ten-acre lots is being proved in the Yucaipa Valley.

Much of the land in the valley has been planted to apple trees, but the five and ten-acre orchards are many of them just a year or two old and will not be bearing for three or four years. With the call for a greater food production, the farmers there began to plant crops between the rows of young apple trees and the results have been so good that there is no doubt but that the practice will be continued.

Potatoes, beans and tomatoes have been planted in large quantities and this year the crops are going to be heavy. One man who planted potatoes early gathered over 400 sacks of potatoes, which were worth in the market about $1200, a net profit to him of almost $1000. He expects to double the production in the fall crop.

Beans have also been doing very well and have needed no more irrigation than the apple trees demanded. Tomato plants were furnished the farmers of the valley by the Kubias Company of Redlands and the crop from the valley alone will keep the big cannery running for several weeks.

No ground is being wasted and not only have the farmers produced more than enough garden truck to supply themselves, but they have also had some to sell. So far as can be seen, the intercropping has had no effect on the growth or strength of the apple trees and even in the groves that are now bearing, the fruit is doing well.

The apple crop in the valley this year will be a large one and it is expected that over 125,000 boxes of fine apples will be ready for the market in October and November. Because of the shortage of citrus fruits, the apple growers are assured of a big price for their apples during the coming winter. Plans are now being made for a factory to take care of the cull apples in the making of cider and apple butter.

Long Beach.

PACK MORE OLIVES.

Addition to Plant Nearly Completed—Big Pack in October Looked for—Pimiento Packing Season Starts Early This Year.

The $30,000 plant for the Curtis Olive Company on channel No. 2, Long Beach Harbor, will be completed this week. In addition to the building as originally planned, the packing corporation has decided to build a third story to portions of it.

The pimiento pack at the Curtis plant will commence about August 20. The pimiento crop has ripened much earlier than was anticipated, thus necessitating a change in the schedule of operations at the plant.

Preparations are under way for a big olive pack the first part of October. The vats for this branch of canning are now nearing completion and the sorting machinery is being installed. The Curtis Company will ship out four carloads of canned tuna early next week.

Tulare County.

HEAVY FRUIT CROP.

Big Yields of Peaches and Grapes—County's Green Fruit Estimated to be Worth One and Three-Fourths Million Dollars.

What promises to be the largest and most valuable deciduous fruit crop in the history of Tulare county is being harvested. Peaches, three months ago believed to be almost a failure, will make a 100 per cent. crop. Fruit which sold last year for $15 to $16 per ton is bringing $35. Grapes will be a 120 per cent. crop, and all other varieties of fruit except apricots—a small crop at the best in Tulare county—will show a heavy yield. Commissioner C. F. Collins estimates the total value of the green fruit at well over $1,750,000.

One of the largest land deals to be reported in the county during the past month was in the sale to Chester Dowell, Lindsay banker, of a tract of ten acres of Manzanillo and thirty acres of mission olives, situated three miles west of Lindsay.

First deliveries are being made to Porterville warehouses of the first cutting of Jimson weed. Late in the week a carload of the weed, properly cured, will be shipped to a Philadelphia drug firm for manufacture into stramonium, a much-used remedy for diseases of the respiratory organs.

Beet growers of Tulare county have been advised by the owners of the San Joaquin Valley Sugar Company and the Pingree Sugar Company that owing to the advance in the price of sugar on the wholesale market those who have their beets under contract for delivery will be granted a bonus of $1 per ton over the contract price. This will mean an increase in the value of the crop throughout the county as a whole of about $40,000.

One hundred sacks to the acre from potatoes planted between rows of young fruit trees is the record set on the Swall ranch near Tulare. The total output of the property was $5000 sacks, which were marketed at a good price for shipment to the East.

Imperial County.

ACREAGE INCREASED.

Assessor's Report Shows Gain for Nearly All Crops, Higher Property Valuation and Progress in Three Principal Cities.

The annual summary of the work of the office of Assessor Weaver of Imperial county has been completed. The totals show an increase, and the census of the crops of the valley is valuable because it shows the tremendous production that may be expected.

In one instance the figures are admittedly low, those on milo maize. The assessors had practically finished their work before the increased planting of maize was begun. The actual acreage now exceeds 100,000.

Three cities in the county show an increase in valuation—Calexico of $360,463; Brawley of $175,395, and El Centro of $56,971. Holtville and Imperial each show a loss, the former of $17,406 and the latter of $61,392.

| Total assessed property | 1916. | 1917. |

PLANS FINE HOME.

New York Woman Acquires Residence Site in Beverly Hills.

A large residence will be started in the near future in Beverly Hills by Mrs. Ricord Gradwell of New York City. The site for the projected house was purchased by Mrs. Gradwell during the past week through Richard M. Bishop, K. R. Smoot of Beaumont being the seller.

The lot is at the corner of Lexington road and Oxford way and faces the mountains. It is in the immediate vicinity of a number of the fine places in the western suburb. For it the purchaser is understood to have paid a consideration of $10,000 cash.

EXHIBIT IS GROWING.

The lease of the Metropolitan exhibit of building materials on the sixth floor of the Metropolitan Building at Fifth and Broadway has been renewed by Miss M. L. Schmidt, the manager, for another year. A number of interesting new exhibits, it is announced, will be added to those now on display, within the next few weeks. Several of the present exhibitors are now enlarging their exhibits. Among these are the Hammond Lumber Company, Lyon-McKinney-Smith, the Simons Brick Company, Frank Henry, the Buttonlath Company, the Mechanical Reversible Window Company, W. H. Steele and the Pacific Gas Radiator Company.

FLATS PROJECTED.

Work will be started this week on a twenty-room flat building for Bertha T. Kuert at Nos. 4651 to 4657 Oakwood avenue. The improvement, it is stated, will represent an investment of about $8000. A building permit was issued during the past week for a sixteen-room flat to be erected by Fred O. Ricketts at Nos. 350 to 352 West Fiftieth street.

WANTS CHANCE HIMSELF.

Ray Hatton Protests Continually Being Mauled Around.

Raymond Hatton, the clever Lasky character actor, who will be seen at the Alhambra Theater starting today, in support of Wallace Reid in "The Squaw Man's Son," has filed an emphatic protest with that organization. The tenor of this protest is that some other person besides one Wallie Reed be selected to slam him around.

Hatton goes on to say that whenever he is scheduled to be knocked down, thrown out of a window, down the stairs, through a door, etc., Reid is always assigned the task. While he has a great personal regard for Reid, Hatton asserts that he does the job too thoroughly, and instead of regarding it as play-acting takes the affairs too seriously. Consequently quite a considerable portion of Hatton's salary goes for arnica and soothing liniments.

In "The Squaw Man's Son," for instance, he is dragged through a window and thrown from a porch.

Mr. Hatton's prayer finally included the request that as he had been with the Lasky Company three years and never won a fight, some scenario writer prepare a story in which he could triumph over some fellow man, and he said that his feelings would be greatly assuaged if this fellow were only a one-armed cripple, just so he could whip somebody once in his screen career.

A BIT OF REAL LIFE.

Olive Thomas Appears in Film Story of Gotham Cafe Romance.

One of the largest and most elaborate "sets" ever erected for a five-reel picture production is used in "An Even Break," in which Olive Thomas will be seen at Clune's Broadway, beginning today.

The "set" is a reproduction of Sinot's Cafe, wherein are shown many of the spectacular scenes of Gotham's gay life, of which the heroine of the story is a part. For this "set" it was necessary to use the entire glass stage, 100x200 feet in size, and even at that the camera was placed on a platform outside the stage to obtain some of the "longshots" in the production.

Scenes were taken under the sun, as well as by artificial light. To secure certain of the magnificent lighting effects which are a feature of the picture, the company, including more than 500 players and assistants, worked all night several times. One particularly effective scene was obtained by a novel stage-lighting scheme which brings the dancers in silhouette before the camera. The dancers were rehearsed for two weeks in preparation for this and other scenes which take place in the cafe.

This production is in reality a bit out of the real life of the star, Olive Thomas, who plays the role of Gotham's gayest and most popular entertainer. She recently joined the motion-picture industry after having won recognition in musical comedy.

The story gives a new angle to the small-town girl in the big city and romance, spice, thrills and action are happily blended in the production which is written and directed by Lambert Hillyer. Charles Gunn, Margaret Thompson and Darrell Foss are prominent in the cast supporting Miss Thomas.

COTTON IS NEEDED IN GREAT BRITAIN.

TAKE STEPS TO INCREASE THE IMPORTATION.

Board of Trade Plans to Communicate with English Commission at Washington to Induce Markets to Act in Some Sort of Conformity with Liverpool.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

MANCHESTER (Eng.) July 15.—Steps are being taken to increase the importation of cotton as far as possible, according to an official announcement by the Parliamentary secretary of the Board of Trade, who recently stated in the House of Commons that tonnage for cotton imports would not be lacking.

At the conference to consider the cotton position, held at the Board of Trade late in June, the Manchester Guardian says, reports showed there was a stock of American cotton at Liverpool and in the mills of 700,000 bales, a normal consumption of 62,000 bales weekly, a present consumption of 50,000 bales a week and a present import of 21,000 bales a week.

The question of short time or stoppage of machinery was gone into very thoroughly, but it will be left in the hands of the newly-appointed Board of Control.

One of the most interesting things mentioned at the conference is the subject of the relation of this country to the United States. The Manchester Guardian understands it is planned to communicate with the British commission in Washington and also with the Egyptian government with a view to induce the cotton markets to act in some sort of conformity with the Liverpool market. The paper says:

"This is a far-reaching proposal and we have no means of judging how it will be viewed in the States, where, certainly, anything that pointed to a regulation downward of cotton prices would be very jealously criticised. It seems pretty clear, however, that regulations which tended to keep prices down in Liverpool while New York went its own way would endanger our

SWEDISH OFFICERS ARE POORLY PAID.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

STOCKHOLM, June 30.—To one who desires to make a financial success of his life, the career of officer in the Swedish army offers little inducement. The discussion attending a movement to increase the pay of officers has been pointed by the following instance, which is declared to be average and typical.

The officer in question served three years as second lieutenant without pay and five years more in the same grade at $144 a year. He was then for five years first lieutenant at $280 a year, then for seven years regimental adjutant at $367 yearly, and five years regimental quartermaster at $568 yearly.

At the age of 46, after twenty-five years' service, he became captain and received $906 a year for one and one-half years. For the next four years he received as major the yearly pay of $1405, and then became lieutenant-colonel at $1750. His retirement pension was $960 a year.

The officers cannot, of course, support themselves and buy their uniforms on their pay. They must either have independent incomes, make a rich marriage or else devote their little spare time to profit-bringing outside work.

AMERICAN BLUEJACKETS SWAP MANY STORIES.

When Unusual Number of Destroyers Return from Patrol Work in Foreign Waters Sailors Greet Each Other with Enthusiasm—Villagers Fond of "Yanks."

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BASE AMERICAN FLOTILLAS IN BRITISH WATERS, July 10.—It was like an old home week here the other day when an unusually large number of destroyers came into port and consequently a larger number of erstwhile middies, now officers in Uncle Sam's navy, came ashore. Everybody said hello to everybody else. A Georgian drawled out to a Texan, while the man from New York and the one from New England could easily be spotted by their manner of speech. Many were former navy men, who had served for a brief period after being graduated from Annapolis, but who responded to the call when the United States came into the war.

"They were putting up a dummy battleship right under my office window in Union Square when I decided to come back," explained an ensign from New York. "Every time I looked out of my window I saw that ship getting bigger. When its masts topped the trees in the park I couldn't do any more work, so I just closed my desk and offered myself. And here I am and mighty glad of it. Hello, Jack——" An old classmate from Boston interrupted to lead the New York ensign back to his school days.

"Reminds me of a lodge meeting," sang out a cheerful individual from Atlanta as he beamed on the crowd of familiar faces.

"It would be hard to find a more amiable, good-natured crowd of young men anywhere in the world. "God bless 'em," said one ensign. "Tomorrow they would go cheerfully to the duty of hunting the elusive periscope."

It is this almost boyhood enthusiasm among full-grown men that has endeared the Americans to everybody with whom they come in contact here. "Yanks," the villagers call them in affectionate admiration.

One of the pleasant surprises for the younger officers from the classes from 1906 to 1911 occurred the other day, when they met their teacher of English and marine law at Annapolis in the person of the American Consul here. "He's got a pretty good line on all of us," said one of the former middies, probably recalling an incident of boyhood mischief at school. The Consul winked knowingly. "It's mighty fine to see so many of those youngsters again," mused the Consul after he had finished shaking hands all around.

A YOUNG RUSSIAN OFFICER HONORED.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PETROGRAD, June 30.—Lieut. Lebedeff, who has been appointed temporary head of the Ministry of Marine, is only 33 years old. He served with distinction in the Japanese war, and in 1907 identified himself with the social revolutionists, and participated in the mutiny of the Brest Regiment at Sebastopol. From there he escaped abroad, and at the outbreak of the present war enlisted in the French army as a private.

Subsequently he was given a commission and placed in command of a detachment of Russian republican volunteers. Later he served a year and a half at Saloniki and was awarded the French Military Cross. He returned here in the early days of the revolution and was a collaborator of the social revolutionary organ, "The Will of the People."

M. Kerensky recently appointed him president of a commission to formulate new regulations for the naval service.

AUSTRALIA TREATS ITS OWN MINERALS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

MELBOURNE (Aus.) July 10.—The chairman of the Sydney Metal Exchange states the policy of the Federal government, with regard to metals, is that all minerals produced in Australia will in future be treated in Australia.

An exchange similar to the London Metal Exchange is to be created, and instead of metals being sold to London, they will be sold to Sydney and Melbourne.

Efforts are being made to induce Premier Hughes to fix a standard price for copper for three years.

The government has made arrangements fixing the price of zinc for ten years.

Regarding rare metals, Mr. Hughes has submitted a plan to the producers whereby the government will contract to take over the whole of the tungsten production at the world's current price.

DAWSON FAILS TO WREST TENNIS TITLE FROM MACE

Present Title Holder Wins His Fourth Southern California Championship, Outclassing His Opponent in Straight Sets—Doubles Honors go to Winne and Snodgrass, While Miss Johnson Takes Women's Event.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HOTEL VIRGINIA, Aug. 4.—Wis Mace, three-time Southern California champion in singles, today won that title for the fourth time when he defeated his old rival, Ward Dawson, in the final round by the score of 7-5, 6-4, 6-1. Mace's victory was expected and popular, although it was thought possible that Dawson would at least take a set. Mace was so steady and consistent, and his placing and headwork were so remarkable, that he was in command of the situation practically all of the time.

The men's doubles championship went to Winne and Snodgrass, the team which last year won the State high school championship for Manual Arts High School. The youngsters outlasted the Barker brothers and won the match after four tough sets, 6-1, 7-9, 6-3, 6-1.

The championship in women's singles was won by Miss Eleanor Johnson, who defeated Miss Caroline Streit in two straight sets, 6-0, 6-1. Miss Johnson's hard driving gave her the upper hand and she won the match in very short order.

The Streit sisters played each other in the finals in the ladies' special singles, Miss Gertrude Streit defeating Miss Caroline Streit, 6-3, 6-2, in a fairly-hard match. Miss Johnson and Miss Laura McVey won the ladies' doubles championship from Miss Drohm and Miss Duzan, 6-2, 6-4.

Mixed doubles honors were taken by Miss McVey and Simpson Sinsabaugh, who eliminated Miss Johnson and Harry Rogers in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3. The championship in junior singles was won by Frank Winne, who put out Bob Rager, 6-0, 6-4. The junior doubles championship will not be played off until tomorrow, as the teams had a set apiece and showed no signs of finishing the match before dark.

Owing to the fact that all "championship" events have been called off by the National Lawn Tennis Association, the Southern California titles do not go with these matches, but to all intents and purposes the

MOTOR TRUCKS BECOME MORE AND MORE NECESSARY

UNCLE SAM is going to see to it that his soldiers do not suffer for lack of modern means of transportation. After spending several weeks in conference with big motor manufacturers of this country, the quartermaster's department suddenly decided that a few trucks right now would be worth more to the country than thousands of a standard design two years from now and immediately contracted for 10,000 trucks as commercially produced at the present time. When a standard design is agreed upon, more trucks will be ordered.

At the present time thousands of army trucks are now behind the lines in France, supporting our troops. In addition there are many trucks in use as ambulances. One of the pictures shown below gives a glance at one unit of 2500 ambulance chassis at Allentown, Pa., soon to go to the front. By a coincidence, the ambulance men shown training in the center of the picture below are Pasadena men, the one at the right being Morgan Odell, an athlete of Occidental College of this city.

FIRST FORD TRUCKS DUE HERE THIS WEEK; NO RAISE IN PRICE OF TOURING CARS NOW.

BY HARVEY E. WESTGATE.

HERE are three important news items, concerning the programe of the Ford factory: First, the price of Ford cars, so far as known, will remain the same as at present for some time to come. Second, Ford trucks are now being turned out at the factory and the first one will be on the salesroom floor at the Ford branch in Los Angeles by the first of the week. Third, Ford tractors are now being made at the rate of ten a day and this will be increased to a hundred a day in the near future.

This information was furnished by the manager of the local branch one day this week. From another source it also was learned that Ford orders, given almost four months ago, are now being filled. This means that in all probability an order placed now will not be filled before November or December. It is possible they will not be filled then, but it also is possible, but not probable, that they will be filled much sooner than that.

AT A PREMIUM.

Inquiry at local Ford agencies reveals the fact that Ford cars, of all descriptions, are at a premium, right now. Cars used for a few months, or even for a year, providing they are in good condition, are selling for the price of a new Ford, or approximately that figure, in cases where the prospective buyer is in a hurry to get his car.

The arrival of the first Ford truck will probably attract thousands of people to the local branch. It is a worm-drive, one-ton truck, said to be classy in appearance and capable of the most severe tests. Because of the reputation established by the Ford cars, and the increasing demand for light trucks, capacity production, in all probability, will be disposed of as rapidly as they can be shipped and assembled at the various branches.

The ten tractors now being turned out daily are shipped to the British government. The factory has an order for 8000, and will shortly increase the production to a hundred a day, it being the intention of Mr. Ford to have the last shipment reach England by March 1.

FALSE REPORTS.

Many reports have been going the rounds concerning the part the Ford factory is to play in the war. One is to the effect that the government has taken over the entire plant, and that no more Fords will be made for general distribution at the various branches. This, of course, is not true, although the time may come when the government will avail itself of offers made by Mr. Ford.

There also has been a persistent rumor to the effect that the price is to be advanced, but as the company's announcements of this kind have heretofore been made on the first of August, and none was forthcoming on that date, the local manager insists that, so far as he knows, none is to be made.

One thing is certain, however—because of the factory's inability to supply the demand, the price of second-hand Fords has gone up and up, and almost any kind of a Ford that will run brings a good price today in the second-hand market, or a liberal allowance is made when the car is offered in trade for a new car.

THINK THIS OVER.

The present output of the factory is more than 3000 a day. This means 375 cars an hour—practically seven cars a minute. If you want to carry it a little farther, it means a car in less than nine seconds. While you are eating a twenty-minute lunch, Henry Ford's crew turns out about 140 cars. That's enough to fill several city blocks, four abreast.

The output of one day—3000 cars—would form a parade from here to Venice, if about twenty feet separated the "peace ships." But what's the use of prolonging the agony—Henry Ford is turning out so many cars that within a few years there won't be room for them on the thoroughfares.

Henry is king of the auto world, just as surely as John D. is king of the oil world. What a pair they would be to draw to if they formed a partnership.

Local Baseball.

TIGERS CLIMB OAK FRAME FOR SECOND STRAIGHT WIN

Jack Quinn, in Rare Form, is Never Threatened Until the Ninth, when a Sporadic Rally Shoves a Lone Run Across the Plate—Clinton Prough Starts Off in a Bad Way and Throws up Sponge.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

IN THE unnatural course of inhuman events the Tigers won another ball game from Oakland, making it two straight, 5 to 1. This is what is technically known as coming from behind and threatening to win the series. By taking both games today, Stovall's men can accomplish their purpose.

The Tigers looked like a different ball team. Otherwise they would not have won. Two victories in succession has done much to instill confidence in themselves, and improve their esprit de corps. Jack Quinn especially was espriting in great shape. He espritted with a spit ball that was wet and hard to see. Jack blossomed out as one of our leading espritters by holding the visitors to five hits. This is believed to be all the hits which the Oaks had up their sleeve. It is not thought that they were saving anything for the morrow.

Quinn was so effective that not an Oak flourished at the plate until the ninth, when Roxy Middleton doubled and scored on an error and a succession of outs. This double, a walk and said boot loaded up the cushions with nobody out, and with two strong men like Hack Miller and Rube Gardner arriving at the front with their war clubs, Jack's future seemed uncertain, but he was not to be beaten at that late day. Miller forced a runner at second, and Hack and Rube were both gobbled up in a double play on the latter's grounder to Callahan.

Clint Prough and Jose Acosta, a warm little number from Cuba, dispensed the honors for Oakland, such as they were. Neither man appeared to be at his best, Vernon combing their combined output of curves for fourteen swats. Chadbourne was the loudest swatter, with three hits, and others two numerous to mention gathered two apiece unto their batting averages.

Prough pulled his freight in the fifth for a pinch-hitter who fanned. That he should be taken out for a pinch-hitter who could do nothing except whiff is regarded as a serious reflection on Clint's batting ability. The Cuban then cantered forth to get what was coming to him for having licked the Tigers on Wednesday.

The combat was reeled off in an hour and a half. Stovall's men are prompt about their baseball. They do not believe in keeping the public in an agony of suspense any longer than necessary.

Roxy Middleton was the only Oakland batter who didn't seem to regard the stuff which Quinn was drawing from his gills as a deadly poison. He soaked the spitter on the nozzle for two singles and a double. The other two hits were divided between Murphy and Stumpf.

The Tigers won despite the fact that they are handicapped by an imposing array of sore thumbs. Both Gus Gleichmann and George McGinnis recently sustained painful injuries to their thumbs, which are so bruised and swollen that they look like a couple of overripe paw-paws. During the game they sit on the bench and play "Simon says thumbs up; Simon says thumbs down." Mike Simon is in charge of this exercise, which is gradually getting the stiff and battered thumbs limbered up.

A society belle caused a sensation when she brought an educated monkey out to the park with her. This is a new one. We have had dogs, goats, elephants and swarms of bees at the park, and once a canary made its nest in a guy's Panama hat out in the bleachers, but this is the first monkey to lend its presence to the brilliant scene. Animals are always welcome. The monkey seemed to have a good time. It sat on the rim of the box, ate peanuts and chirped like a bird. These chirps are believed to have spurred the athletes to greater efforts. In case this gets to be a fad, ladies bringing their monkeys out to the ball games will not be charged extra. It is felt that it would be unfair to admit bulldogs, and then draw the monkey line.

The bees have refused to leave the park. They crawled under the right field bleachers, and apparently have laid plans to make that their permanent abode. They seem peaceable and not inclined to attack anybody. Occasionally they may seep up through the cracks in the bleachers and sting the fans on the ankles just for pastime, but they will not cause any general annoyance.

George Stovall, the most-battered man in the Coast League, sustained another injury yesterday. In the first inning, Daley drove to Gardner for the third out. Pete threw his bat back to the bench, having no further use for it. The implement struck the Firebrand on the leg, causing a shower of sparks to fly from his shin bone. Pete couldn't hit Prough in that inning, but he

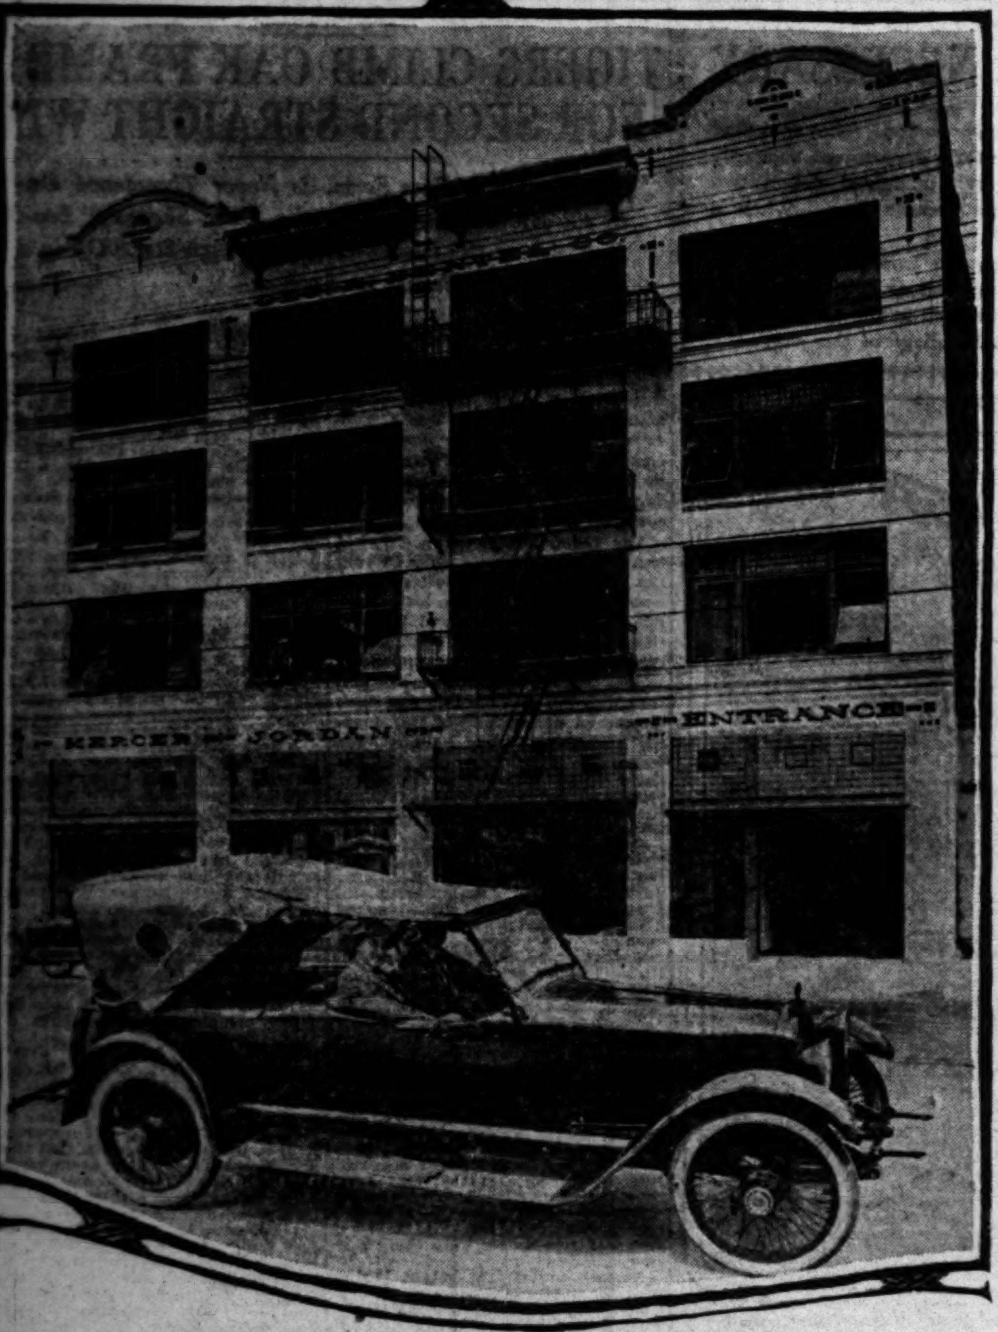
BIG STRUCTURE, JUST COMPLETED, TO TURN OUT SPEED MACHINES.



This new auto row building is unique.

No building of a similar nature, it is claimed, west of New York, has as many unique features, as the one shown above. It is now occupied by the George T. Bentel Company. In this single structure every department of automobile building, from the machinery room to the finishing room, is to be found. It houses offices, salesroom, waiting-room, garage, designing-room, a fast elevator that whisks car from the alley to the upper floors, a trimming department, paint and decorating room and a section for big blacksmith machinery. Complete automobiles, with a speed of 100 miles an hour, will be turned out in this building.

INCREASING signs are to be found on "automobile row" of a steadily growing independence on the part of Los Angeles in the motor world. Instead of relying wholly upon the East for new ideas and their execution, Los Angeles is stepping forward itself in the creation world.

Material evidence of this was emphasized last week when the George R. Bentel Company moved into its new four-story building at No. 1015 South Grand avenue. This structure, containing 78,000 square feet, is said to be the largest single building west of New York devoted to so many phases of the motor industry.

The new home not only will house the mechanical departments which filled the outgrown building at No. 1035 South Grand avenue, but will take in also the sales department of the Mercer and Jordan cars, now at Eleventh and Olive streets. A large service department for these cars also will be included in the new structure.

MOTOR STYLES.

It is the hope of Bentel to further carry on his creation of motor styles for Los Angeles, and to this end the building has been equipped from basement to roof with special machinery and facilities for motor-car designing, building and remodeling. It is possible to build an entire car in this building, it is claimed.

The first floor will be devoted to a large salesroom. Special lighting to eliminate shadows and car corners has been installed. In the rear, reached by an ample driveway, will be the "waiting-room" for motor cars, coming in and going out. But a new arrangement permits the driving of a car direct from street or alley to a fast elevator, where the auto is whisked to the upper floors. The owner may follow in an automatic passenger elevator.

The offices are on the mezzanine floor. This balcony effect is carried into the rear, where valuable storage room is thus obtained.

The second floor contains the stockroom, also the service department, machine shop, construction department with traveling hoists, pits and other equipment to decrease waste labor and increase efficiency. Live steam has been piped in for cleaning chassis. This same system is used in the paint department, for removing previous coats.

SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

In the service department have been installed several novel devices. One is for locating rattles in motor cars. This is done by a series of bumps. This brings out every squeak and rattle in a car, more effectively, it is claimed, than miles of road driving.

In the mechanical department the first of the new 22-140 series Mercers are under construction. This will give Los Angeles the credit of turning out a stock car capable of doing 100 miles an hour.

The third floor front is given over to the trimming department, where tops and upholstery schemes are planned and carried out. This space is particularly well lighted. The rear is given over to the wood shop and body departments. Here an entire body may be built. It then moves into the front end to receive its upholstery and top.

The fourth floor is filled with the painting department, which includes four steam-heated and sealed varnish rooms. Here much time may be saved by the drying-room process, which not only eliminates dust but saves much time for the owner of the car.

The heavy machinery, such as the big hammers and other blacksmith equipment, are in the basement.

FRANK GOTCH WOULD MAKE AN IDEAL "LAMP TILTER."

IF YOU can drive up to one of the garages that make a specialty of tilting headlights to conform with the new law—sit quietly in the front seat and see a big husky jump straddle of each fender and push the lamps forward, (or pound them into shape with a crowbar or sledge hammer.)—and later watch him smear grease over the glass of each lamp and finally tell you that you're all fixed up—if you can do all this and not break the profanity commandment—well, you're an even-tempered bird of the first water.

But be it known that a whole lot of people can't measure up to this standard. After watching the process from a distance, hundreds have driven away, willing to take a chance on doing the job themselves, or suffering the consequences—arrest.

Some of the big cars seem to be given a little consideration, when the lamp wreckers start their work, but what a beating up the flivvers get! Two yanks, three pulls, a push or two, and then some strong arm work with a crowbar, and the job's done. Frank Gotch would make an ideal lamp bender, especially with his famous "toe hold."

Glasses have been smashed, fenders bent, radiators "stove in," and various parts of the car banged up, until scores of drivers have decided to at least wait until the rush is over.

But in spite of the rough treatment, a sufficient number have submitted to it to make a noticeable difference in motoring around the city. Headlights properly focused, remove one of the greatest causes of accidents in night driving, and a change for the better already is noticeable. The glare still bothers when two autos approach each other on grades, and on roads that have "high crowns," but wherever the roadway is level, or fairly so, the lights as now tilted do not blind the drivers.

Few, if any arrests, have been made up to date for failure to comply with the new law.

---

One reason that lights grow brighter with increased speed is that the generator is not perfectly self-regulating, so that its electro motive force increases with its speed, which, of course, is proportional to the engine speed.

USED CARS SELL LIKE HOT CAKES.

DEALERS RAPIDLY DISPOSING OF LARGE STOCKS.

War, Advance in Prices and the Fact that More Attention is Given to Thoroughly Overhauled Old Machines, are Offered as Causes for Demand.

Second-hand automobiles are selling like hot cakes. In fact, several large dealers report they are selling as many second-hand machines as new ones. It's a case of fifty-fifty, in most instances, and those who make a specialty of second-hand cars are finding a ready market. Of course, there are reasons for this condition of things on automobile row, and the details make interesting reading.

In the first place, the price of almost every car has been advanced, at least once in the past year. Therefore those who had figured on buying a car, we will say, at $1000, finally decided to buy a used car at $600, rather than pay the new price, from $1050 to $1200. That's reason No. 1.

Reason No. 2 is found in the fact that many kinds of cars cannot be obtained now, and prospective buyers, rather than buy some other kind, have purchased used cars of their favorite brand.

Reason No. 3 is explained by war times. Many do not know just when they will have to go to the front, and a used car is good enough, at least for a few months, they argue.

Reason No. 4 might be set down to the credit of the dealers themselves, for they are learning that it pays, and pays big, to actually overhaul second-hand cars, give them a new coat or two of paint, and thereby make them look almost as good as new. Years ago an overhauling sometimes meant a few turns of a wrench, the use of a hose to wash off the mud and about an hour's work with a can of polish and a bunch of waste.

Reason No. 5 can be traced to the fact that many motorists buy a new car every spring. The year-old car is generally in good condition, and with several hundred dollars knocked off from the first price, buyers are ready to take the used car.

But whatever the cause, used cars are selling rapidly, and if the demands of the government, and the lack of railroad facilities, make it impossible to get new cars in the months to come, the used car market will get better and better.

It is not putting it too strong, in fact, to say the time may come when a year-old car will sell for as much as it cost in the first place. And, incidentally, it will be a pretty good thing for the game to have the present stock of used cars sold before the war ends, so auto row can start with a clean slate when business becomes normal again.

What a demand there would be for new cars, say several years from now, if the used cars of the present day were worn out during the war and sent to the junk man, and the manufacturers, after the war, faced the problem of turning out all the new cars people wanted to buy.

PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

An Apology—And An Explanation

We feel that we owe an explanation to the thousands of Paige enthusiasts and prospective Paige owners whose choice is The Most Beautiful Car in America, but who have been unable to secure prompt deliveries.

The Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company has not failed to keep up with its production schedule. As a matter of fact we have already far exceeded the schedule we planned for ourselves last December.

Since January 1st we have been working our huge manufacturing equipment to full capacity. But in spite of these efforts we have never been for one day caught up with the demand for The Most Beautiful Car in America.

It is a significant fact that in the month of July just closed—a period unsettled by war conditions—the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company was able to fill only 58 per cent of the actual orders placed during that month.

There Must Be Good Reasons For This Overwhelming Popularity

The explanation is plain and unescapable. This unprecedented demand for The Most Beautiful Car in America is inspired by Paige mechanical excellence.

The greatest motoring value is the sum and substance of this explanation. With its mechanical excellence, its beauty, its durability, the Paige is easily sold and—most important of all—it stays sold.

This shortage in Paige cars is not merely a local condition. It is national. If you question this statement go to your nearest Paige dealer and he will confirm it.

But there are other reasons for Paige popularity. They go back of mechanical excellence, beauty and excess values. They are fundamental because they make such things possible. We refer to the sound economic and financial policies that are the foundation of the Paige structure.

In percentage of sales increase, The Most Beautiful Car in America has outstripped all competitors between $1000 and $2000 in price for the last six months.

Paige sales in proportion to Paige capitalization are many times greater than those of any car in the same competitive field.

The Paige has built conservatively, soundly. It has no bonded indebtedness. It has been content with a a modest profit per car.

The Paige has had the money to create quality in each and every car it has built. The excess value that has been put into The Most Beautiful Car in America has won the confidence and preference of the American public.

This greater value has brought to the Paige a supremacy that has stood unchallenged during the last few months of unsettled economic conditions.

Such overwhelming popularity has made it necessary for us to apologize to you for any delay you may suffer or may have suffered in the delivery of your car.

But is it not worth while waiting for a motor car that is at once the most popular, as well as The Most Beautiful Car in America?

Motorists going from Salt Lake City to San Francisco will find that the distance there is 937 miles or 911 miles, according to which of two roads they follow.

Heretofore the general route of the Lincoln highway has been indicated by red, white and blue stripes painted around any posts appearing along the way. This system will not be used by the club. Instead, a system similar to that used on all the highways of Southern California will be employed. Each sign will carry direction arrows and mileages, and each will be of enameled metal. However, each will be distinctive in carrying the red, white and blue insignia of the highway in broad bands at the top and bottom, and a large L.

The Midland Trail, from Ely to Los Angeles, has already been posted by the club, leaving an actual distance now to be marked of 297 miles between Salt Lake City and Ely. The club's crew, in charge of D. C. Rhodes, will also revise the entire sign system of the Midland Trail, just as the organization has done on the National Old Trails route. Mr. Rhodes will be assisted by O. W. Lewis.

QUICK WORK.

A large sign is to be placed at Ely, indicating the shortest route to the Coast via Los Angeles, and also announcing that this route leads through the scenic Owens River Valley. It is estimated by club officials and civic bodies along the way that 90 per cent. of the travel over the Lincoln highway will come directly into Southern California as a result of the work which started yesterday, and which will be completed in two weeks.

Other Automobile Club activities were outlined in a meeting of the directors, officials and employees, each showing that the big organization is doing more and more to foster touring in and toward this particular section of the State.

Of primary importance in its endeavor along this line is the sign-posting system extended over the boulevards of Southern California. According to a report issued yesterday by Secretary S. L. Mitchell, the club has erected more than 14,500 signs on approximately 53,900 miles of highway, this figure also containing some of the mileage included in the transcontinental work.

BIG SAVING.

Motorists who are members of the organization have been saved $198,929 during the first six months of this year in actual cash by certain club departments.

Through the Inter-Insurance Exchange these members have been saved $60,675.99 in six months alone. Of this, they gained $45,728.55 because the club's insurance department writes insurance 25 per cent. lower for members than do the board companies. During the same period, the insurance department returned through refunds to members at the expiration of policies a total of $14,945.44.

One of the most unique and efficient departments of the organization, the theft bureau, has done yeoman service in saving club members great losses by recovering stolen automobiles. During the six months of 1917, just passed, 108 cars have been recovered and returned to their owners, saving a total in value of approximately $86,400. In connection with the theft bureau is operated the indentification bureau, free to all owners, whereby tabulated lists of identification marks are filed for reference in case a machine is stolen.

WORK DONE AT COST.

The freight forwarding department has shipped 512 automobiles in 1917 for visitors to Southern California, saving these visitors $20,480, or approximately $40 on each car, as the work is done at actual cost.

In the valuable activities of the legal department, club members have been saved an actual total of $31,376.64 in six months. This department has handled 892 claims for members involving the payment of money damages. Of this, $2197.61 was collected on such cases and $25,174.30 saved to club members in similar cases. The remainder was saved for the Inter-Insurance Exchange.

In the last six months the club has put up 2655 enamelled metal road signs in Southern California for the guidance of motorists, and the road charting and inspecting cars have traveled 6520 miles securing information data. Club cars have also covered more than 4500 miles on eastern and middle western roads.

The touring information bureau at the headquarters, and those in the branch offices, have answered 38,065 personal calls for data on highways, have answered 26,168 telephone calls and 1800 letters for information from eastern motorists planning to come west.

THOUSANDS OF MAPS.

From the map department there have been 316,983 touring maps distributed while more than 350,000 maps have been printed for distribution in the club's own printing department. The drafting department has been occupied in turning out forty-eight new maps and correcting and revising scores of others.

President Fred L. Baker, in his recent address to club officials, stated that it is the desire of the directors to increase the club membership to 15,000 by January 1, and to this end all present members and employees are working. As the membership of the organization increases, President Baker stated, so does its power for activities increase, and the more general the support given its work the more extensive that work can become.

Besides the money saving effected for members, the club has been untiring in the past in securing the improvement of all highways in Southern California and those contributing to this part of the State. The resignposting of the National Old Trails, a highway 2000 miles in length and requiring many hundreds of signs, the posting of the Midland Trail, the successful efforts for reasonable legislation and the district service in all counties for motoring interests, plus the money saved, are all paramount reasons why every automobile owner owes it to himself and the State to become a member of the Automobile Club of Southern California, the club officials argue.

LAMP FROSTING IS A SIMPLE JOB.

Lamp frosting may be done quite cheaply and conveniently. You can either frost the bulbs themselves or the lenses of the lamp and the process is carried out in the following manner:

Two ounces of sandarac, one-half ounce of mastic, twenty-two ounces of ether and sixteen ounces of benzine are made into a solution. The mastic and sandarac should be ground together and mixed with the solution of benzine and ethér.

The lamps should be dipped in the solution, which is best contained in a deep bowl.

racing, the car is credited with about 120 miles an hour. Seven per cent. interest on the cost of this car would buy two flivvers. But this car does a number of things can't do. It is predicted that when the war is over there will be a demand for the Fageols among men who have more money than they know what to do with.

Considering the fact that the meek and lowly Ford has a reputation of going anywhere and everywhere that any other car will go, and the further fact that it costs less than $500 to become the proud possessor of one of Henry's peace ships, it is only natural that a fellow's appetite is whetted for news when he hears there's a $12,000 car in town.

Twelve thousand dollars! A sum sufficient to purchase six nice little bungalow homes at $2000 each. A sum much greater than ninety-nine out of a hundred newspaper men ever accumulate. A sum, which put out at interest at 7 per cent., would produce enough each year to buy two Fords and leave a little for gasoline.

Twelve thousand dollars! Whew! What will the $12,000 car do that a flivver won't do? How much more powerful is this car than the car that sells for $1000, $2000 or $3000? What must the upholstery be like, in such a car, and wouldn't it be natural to suppose that such a boat would have a thermos-bottle body—a cooling system for warm weather and steam heat, or electric heat, for those who live in a winter climate?

NONE FOR SALE.

All of these questions, and more, suggested themselves when I heard that a Fageol—the $12,000 car, made in Oakland, Cal.—was in town, and I lost no time in asking for a demonstration.

And I got it, too; but the man at the wheel was kind enough to tell me in advance that there are no Fageols on the market—that the government has taken over all of the six-cylinder Hall-Scott aviation motors with which the Fageol is equipped. This means that you and I must wait until the war is over before we can buy one. Of course, being a newspaper man, I can stand it, but you, dear reader—if you happen to be one of the idle rich, always seeking some way to spend money—well, this news will add one more to your list of burdens.

However, here is a partial list of the things which a Fageol will do, that few, if any, cars would attempt to do; and you can be thinking them over while waiting for an opportunity to buy one:

For instance, it takes a mighty good car to make the top of Baxter-street hill in second gear, regardless of the speed. Several months ago I timed one car, and a good one, too, and it took 33 seconds to reach the top—a distance of 800 feet from Echo Park avenue.

OTHER RECORDS.

Then, along came a still more powerful car, which reduced the time to 30 seconds to the top of the 29 per cent. grade. But even this figure didn't stand long, for one of the most powerful cars made jumped out and made the top in 21 1-5 seconds.

Naturally, therefore, when the driver of the Fageol asked what I would like to see the car do, I directed him out to old Baxter street, and told him to get to the top in the best time possible. As a took me up in 22 seco as he explained, to war engine a trifle. Then he he was ready to show and power, and a few ter, with stop watch in ha him the signal.

You Must Order Now If You Want Your Maxwell at the Present Low Price!

Just nine more buying days at $665—then the price goes up to $745 at factory. And you can get an immediate delivery if you order at once.

In common with 62 other automobile makers the Maxwell Company has found it imperative to advance the price of the car.

If the price were held at its present low level it would be impossible to build Maxwell quality into the car. Quality proved by such remarkable tests as:

1. The great series of races with the S. P. "Lark," in which the Maxwell beat the 1000 horsepowered locomotive of the "Lark" seven consecutive nights!
2. The famous 22,022-mile non-stop run, in which the Maxwell gained, and for which it still holds, (Aug. 5, 1917), the official A. A. A. world's championship non-stop record!
3. The great run up Mt. Wilson, in which the Maxwell beat all former records, and for which the Maxwell still holds the Mt. Wilson speed record.
4. The Rim o' the World Hill Climb at San Bernardino, in which the Maxwell finished ahead of all four-cylindered cars that took part in the race!
5. The great series of Liberty Bond Economy runs, in which three Maxwell cars each made more than 50 miles on a gallon of gasoline!

—Actual Performance proving built-in quality. Quality you want when you buy your motor car.

But at midnight of August 15 the Maxwell price goes up to $745 f. o. b. Factory.

WHAT WON'T THEY DO WHEN ATTACKED BY FLIVVERITIS?

THIS is a local story—therefore please be advised that Henry Smith and Bertha Jones are not the true names of the couple figuring in the incidents herewith recorded. But the particulars—ah, they're the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth—and they're worth reading and thinking about.

Henry Smith worked—and still works—in a Los Angeles grocery store. His weekly stipend is $20, payable Saturday night.

Bertha Jones, now Mrs. Henry Smith, worked in a print shop as stenographer. She drew down $15 a week, and her pay day was Saturday, too.

When Henry was courting Miss Bertha he sometimes rented a flivver and took her for a ride. To be sure, $20 a week doesn't go very far, but if one lives economically, as regards clothes, drinkables, smokes and so on and so forth, it is possible to rent a small car every month or two for a day at a time.

TIMES CHANGE.

Likewise, when Bertha was earning $15 a week she had plenty of money for her board and room, and clothes, and powder, and chewing gum, and other articles too numerous to mention.

However, shortly after the wedding day arrived and the print shop knew Bertha no more, Mr. and Mrs. Smith realized that $20 would have to be spent with extreme care, minus flivver rides, if they were to get by and not owe the grocer and milk man.

At the end of one week a carefully-kept set of books showed they had broken even. The debit and credit sides of Bertha's ledger just balanced. But at the end of the second week Bertha proudly exhibited a dollar, as the total amount of cash on hand. That meant a small step towards the savings bank.

At the close of the third week, however, because of a little extravagance in the form of two movie tickets, two ice cream sodas and a trip to the beach, all of which were opposed by Bertha, the family change box showed only a two-bit piece, a nickel and three pennies on hand, and the next week would find the rent due, too.

GETS FLIVVER BUG.

"Now, if I had my $15 a week," said Bertha one evening as they sat on the front porch, "we could buy a small car, take a ride every evening, be out of debt inside of a year and have money left."

Henry winced at the suggestion of his bride going back to work, for he enjoyed coming home in the evening to a spotlessly-kept little home and finding a good warm dinner on the table, but Bertha insisted on explaining her plan:

"We can buy a little car for about $500," she said. "That will include full equipment, and $15 a week in a year amounts to $780. We will allow $5 a month for gasoline, which means that for that amount we can travel at least 500 miles, for any small car will do twenty miles to a gallon.

PROVES IT.

"That leaves $220 for tires and incidental expenses, more than we will need, for we will insure our car against theft, fire and damage resulting from accidents. What car do you prefer, Henry? I'm going to work Monday morning."

Henry argued, but it did no good. Bertha declared she would rather spend a dollar for gasoline and enjoy a hundred miles of delightful motoring in Southern California than anything else she knew of.

And Henry finally agreed.

And right then and then Bertha reached for the phone, called up the manager of the print shop, told him she would be on hand Monday morning, and hung up the receiver. Also that same evening they took a sales manager into their confidence, told him their plans, and bought a machine.

"All of which was foolish," says the man who believes in getting a home first and an auto afterwards.

Granted! But this is a true story of what a Los Angeles couple really did. Facts are more interesting and more remarkable than fiction, or good advice. And, believe it or not, hundreds of Los Angeles couples are doing the same thing.

The province of Ontario has approximately 55,000 miles of road. More than 48,000 miles have been resurfaced and are in fairly good condition. About 20,000 miles are well-graded earth roads; about 8000 miles are surfaced with broken stone, and about 19,000 are surfaced with gravel. In the city of Toronto there is one motor car to every twenty-five inhabitants.

The Heart of the U.S. Armored Car is the Wonderful King "8" Chassis

Only after the most gruelling tests of power, speed, reliability, durability and economy by the U. S. Military authorities was the King "8" chassis finally selected from the various other makes in competition as the one upon which to mount the light armored motor car body for the army.

What greater testimonial could possibly be made to the real worth and value of a motor car than this?

The King "8" chassis used in the building of the light armored motor car is identical with that employed in the manufacture of King "8" pleasure cars.

The mechanical efficiency of the King "8" has been demonstrated as superior to all others for use in warfare, and for this reason you should expect it to give superior service for use in pleasure cars and it will.

The King "8" features four handsome body styles—7-passenger touring car—4-passenger sport model—3-passenger roadster and 7-passenger sedan—each expressive of the last word in the builders' art.

If low first cost and economy of upkeep mean anything to you—you will select a King "8." Arrange for a demonstration now.

NEW INVENTION PROTECTS SPEED COP AND MOTORIST.

AUTOMOBILES, more than anything else, attract those of an inventive turn of mind, and the patent offices in Washington are fairly glutted with applications for letters patent on automobile parts or accessories, and the thousand and one conveniences which from time to time suggest themselves to motorists.

Los Angeles, in particular, is a "nest" of automobile inventors, no less than 3000 applications having been received at Washington from local citizens in the past two years. Many of these inventions are proving of value, too, and a few have already earned a national reputation because of exceptional merit.

Two unique inventions of recent date might be labeled "A tell-tale light," because various colored lights show just how fast an automobile is moving, and "An automobile refrigerator, pantry and trunk."

The lights, in the first-mentioned invention, are five in number, each different color being switched on automatically at different speeds, from ten to thirty-five miles an hour. At the latter speed a red light is turned on, and even if the driver slows up when he suspects a speed cop is following him, the light burns for a considerable time, and cannot be switched off.

The light not only gives the fast driver away, but it protects him from an unjust charge. A red light means excessive speed. The absence of this light means the driver is proceeding at a pace inside of the speed limits.

The combination refrigerator is built to be attached to the running board of an auto. One compartment holds ice and food, another holds dishes and small utensils, and the third holds bed clothing, etc. While it has three compartments, it appears on the auto as being merely a compact box-like arrangement. As it is painted the same color as the body of the car, it does not detract, materially, from the appearance of the car. For a camping trip it is just the thing.

DEALERS TO HAVE STANDARD PRICES.

If the objects of the Trade Dealers' Association are attained, and 200 members declare they will be, a standard price for vulcanizing and repair work of all kinds, in all departments, will be in effect in Los Angeles soon, to the end that one concern will not do a certain job for $2, another one charge $3 and others as high as $5.

Eight members of the organization, which is composed of tire dealers, repair shop proprietors, vulcanizers, mechanics and all who are interested in a uniform price for their work and material, along automobile row, met at a banquet table Wednesday evening to discuss plans for the future. Several previous meetings had been held and considerable interest has been manifested from the start in the objects of the association.

AUTOS RAPIDLY BUILDING UP COUNTRY DISTRIC

Time Near at Hand When Tenement Houses
Unknown—Owners of Small Country Tracts N
Drive Back and Forth to Their Work, Whil
Trees are Growing to Producing Stage.

IF ANY ONE of the scores of modern automobiles which line the streets and boulevards of Southern California today had appeared in Los Angeles, Chicago or New York City, or any other city, fifty years ago—a vehicle capable of doing better than a mile a minute—the chances are the driver would have had serious difficulty in getting anyone to take a spin with him.

In those days long rows of hitching posts lined the streets of every village, town and city, and to each hitching post, on busy trading days, was tied a horse, or a team of horses. Each street, between sweepings, was a manure pile, where flies swarmed, and every barn was a menace of health. The automobile was a dream, and a dream only, fifty years ago, and few there were who even dreamed of the modern automobile of today.

But eventually the auto came, and came to stay. Little by little, step by step, the horseless carriage of thirty years ago, which puffed along the street at five or ten miles an hour, and always drew a crowd of curious and badly-scared onlookers, was improved. Better engines were produced. Better bodies were built. Conveniences were added. Noise and vibration and clumsiness were eliminated to a large extent.

ADVANCEMENT.

In time the one-cylinder car gave way to the two-cylinder machine. The two-cylinder machine gave way to the four-cylinder car. The four-cylinder is still with us, probably to remain, but also we have the six, eight and twelve-cylinder automobiles. Cars are lighted with electricity. Beautiful creations of automobile bodies are given from half a dozen to forty coats of paint. Rich upholstery is added. Nickel and brass, and even silver is used in ornamenting the interior and exterior of these bodies. Speaking tubes, telephones, disappearing seats, ivory-handled doors and gear shifters, and countless other things which make for convenience, or please the eye, have been added. Nothing, in short, has been left undone, to make of even the medium-priced cars the most comfortable and most beautiful of vehicles.

But it is in the universal use of the car that we find the greatest amount of interest. Few people are interested in the fact that a few millionaires have high-priced "stables of cars," but everyone is interested in the knowledge that a large percentage of the people in most countries, and especially in the United States, own cars. And those who do not own and drive their own machine are looking forward eagerly to the day when this shall come to pass.

BIG PERCENTAGE.

In California one out of every twelve of the residents owns a car. If we allow five people as an average family, this means that almost every other family has a machine.

There are more than 40,000 autos in Los Angeles. More than 80,000 in Los Angeles county. More than 250,000 in California. More than 3,000,000 in the United States, and this means this nation owns much more than half of all the automobiles in the world.

However, in spite of the importance of the statement that every other family has a car for pleasure purposes, a still more important one is found, from a business standpoint, in the varied uses to which autos and trucks are put in the business world.

Every business that can be named, from the corner grocery to the largest corporation, owns one or more trucks. More ground is covered. Larger loads are hauled. Time is saved. Horses and barns and harness and manure piles are done away with. A driver delivers many times over what he formerly did. One big truck will haul what three teams of horses could not budge, and do it easily.

LITTLE VALLEYS.

Taking as an example the San Fernando Valley, one can instantly see how important has been the use of trucks and autos in its development. There's a railroad in the valley, to be sure, but a railroad, unless it has branches here and there, cannot tap a big valley and "bring the farmer close to market."

But the auto and the truck step in and do what the railroad cannot do. A truck hauls every kind of farm produce, from garden truck to wheat, from poultry to hogs, for a distance of twenty miles, we will say, in an hour. A team of horses would be weary, indeed, after making a

Cord Tires Now Made in Los Angeles.

Thousands watch interesting process.

A machine, almost as complicated as a type-setting machine, is at work in Los Angeles making cord tires. This machine, running at full speed, puts "a layer of cord" on a big tire in eight minutes. Two layers are put on each tire, of this particular brand, which is a Goodrich product. The cord is so strong that it will stand a weight of 250 pounds. Instead of being round, its is flat, and is applied to the tire edgewise. Between the two layers of cord a thin strip of rubber is placed. The picture above shows the machine in operation, applying the first layer of cord. Notice that the cord is laid at an angle. The next layer, shown in the picture below, is also laid at an angle, but directly opposite to the angle followed in the first layer. Look at a ball of white twine, and notice how each layer runs in the opposite direction, or at a different angle. This is the way this cord tire is made. This prevents the two layers from slipping or bulging, either of which would shorten length of the life of the tire, it is claimed. Because of the intense interest taken in the exhibition, arrangements have been made to keep the machines at the Broadway branch of the Goodrich Company another week.

cheaper, in the long run, to a new car every year, trading machine you have driven for months for what you can get, it until it is ready for the man?

is a question which thousands are asking, and so cer the advocates of the "new- year" theory, that it is al established practice with owners.

are the arguments in favor of Take, as an example, a selling for approximately at the end of the first year it $100, or close to that fig That means it has cost the than $9 a month to have so far as depreciation has secured the best there Generally, for the first gives little trouble. If he buys the of a car, at the same price, out $100, and he has the of driving a bright, machine, all the time.

case of a $1000 car, the might be anywhere to $500, at the end of the but it also is true that if to go to pieces a little original owner might almost this much for overhauling, etc., if he keeps it is argued, it is cheap in the long run to stand depreciation, from year to year, car and get a new one.

holds good, to a certain in the case of higher-priced A $2000 car, at the end of the may be sold for $1000 cost, and it seems a of money to let the year-old car go, but the owner, if he is wise, knows the depreciation will continue, if he keeps the machine, and eventually his $2000 property will only sell for a few hundred dollars. In addition to the total depreciation, when it is junked, must be added his cost of upkeep and repairs in general, after the first year.

This explains why so many people buy a new car each year. Many figure it's just as cheap, in the long run, and to this can be added the satisfaction of "being in style," being at the wheel of the latest model of their favorite make of car.

If you happen to be an advocate of "buy 'em new and wear 'em out," that's your privilege, and the majority, it might be aded, argue that this is the best policy.

The Common Council of Indianapolis has amended the city building code to provide that 1500 gallons instead of 200 gallons of gasoline may be stored in tanks under buildings.

The man and his wife wear dusters. In a side pocket of one door there's a whisk broom, a shoe shining outfit, cold cream and face powder. A looking glass and comb and brush have a receptacle all to themselves. In a tight-fitting box is a small drug store, containing everything from court plaster to snake bite medicine. A hammock, ready to be attached between two trees, pieces of old canvas for building corduroy roads, a power pump and a big jack are all in place.

There's a speedometer, a clock, a gradometer and a compass on the dashboard. The driver can tell at a glance how much oil he has in the crank case, the temperature of the water in the radiator, how much carbon each valve is carrying and whether the car is passing over ground containing valuable minerals.

It sure is some car, but there's one drawback—the added weight makes the engine puff to get up a 3 per cent. grade, and there isn't any more room for the new things in equipment that are coming out. The owner is not discouraged, however, and within a short time he's going to buy a new boat—one of 200 horse power. He simply must carry a full equipment or he won't be happy,

MOTORCYCLES REPLACED BY FORDS AT CITY JAIL.

One Man and a Flivver to Form Patrol Wagon "Crew," and Bring in Drunks and Other Petty Offenders—Chief Butler Says Change will Save Time, and Time is Money.

NO MORE will you see neatly-dressed motorcycle officers responding to drunk calls via the motorcycle route. No more will you see a single headlight in the distance, hear a roar of a powerful motorcycle engine, and, an instant later, see an officer dismount, lean the machine against a lamp post, line up a drunk or other petty offender, walk to the nearest telephone, call the patrol and wait five or twenty minutes for "help" to escort the man to jail.

No sir! What you will see, and hear, will be the familiar little old Ford, with a former motorcycle officer at the wheel. He will come along at a twenty or thirty-mile-an-hour gait, drive up to the curb, get out, escort his man to a place in the front seat (if he is able to sit up,) or lay him tenderly in the rear compartment if too far gone, and motor back to the station.

ECONOMICAL.

It's cheaper. It's quicker. It doesn't require one man to ride the motorcycle, another to drive the patrol and a third to assist. It leaves the patrol for more important calls, and the one man, and a Ford, answers every purpose in bringing in a drunk.

Chief Butler figured all this out some time ago, and the city now has advertised for bids on ten new Fords. All Fords are supposed to sell for the same amount, when new, but red tape requires that bids be asked when the amount is more than 30 cents.

"We'll have the Fords chugging along in about three weeks, if we get the cars," said Chief Butler. "This plan will save the city considerable money, because it will only take one man, instead of three men, to do one man's work. Of course, on murder and burglar calls, we will continue to use motorcycles, but for plain drunks, family quarrels, and all petty calls, the Ford will be just the thing."

"FULL" EQUIPMENT.

A fire extinguisher and a first aid kit will be included in the equipment of each Ford. The men who will cast their motorcycles aside and act as peace ship chauffeurs for the city will be selected with care—hand-picked, so to speak—with the object in view of having officers who are capable of meeting any emergency, when armed with a night stick, a gun and—a flivver. Chief Butler hasn't decided yet whether the regular Ford tooter will be retained, or regulation, scare-'em-to-death police horns substituted. One fact not to be overlooked is that a Ford horn wouldn't attract any attention, or scare petty offenders away, even if they heard it.

But the Fords are to be used, and such minor details will be worked out later.

TEXAS TO HAVE BIG AUTO SHOW.

Despite war conditions, every indication is that Texas will see its greatest motor show during the State fair, October 13-28. Already more dealers than ever before have filed for space, and drawings will be made soon.

The old implement building at Dallas has been converted into a motor car building, and the exposition will be held there. More than 100,000 square feet of space already has been taken.

Plans also are being considered for a used car show.

FIFTH AVENUE IS LIKE OUR BROADWAY.

According to a traffic census made by the Fifth-avenue Association of New York, the average daily traffic passing the Public Library on Fifth avenue between Firty-first and Forty-second streets between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. is 16,960 vehicles. Included in the total are 1296 motor busses. The traffic averages twenty-eight vehicles a minute.

At the point where this census was taken Fifth avenue is fifty-five feet wide, which theoretically, at least, permits the movement of six lines of vehicles.

The count showed that passenger motor vehicles composed about two-thirds of the traffic, but these included the ponderous motor busses, which are heavier than most commercial motor cars.

The Bradley Polytechnic Institute of Peoria, Ill., has opened a summer school for instruction in motor car operation, repair, etc. The course includes electric, starting, lighting and ignition systems, and engine work. Several hundred students have been enrolled.

A series of cross-country runs has been inaugurated by the Chicago Motor Club. The runs will be continued every Sunday throughout the summer.

A New, "Low-down," Four-passenger Car.

First of its kind shown in Los Angeles.

This is the new Chalmers six duplex, a low-down, racy-looking machine, with several special features. It seats four passengers, has leather upholstering, and differs from the cloverleaf type in that the front seat extends clear across the car, instead of being divided. Th is, of course, necessitates four doors.

Judge the Chalmers by Cars From Six Months to Eight Years Old

By universal consent, the longer the Chalmers is driven the better it gets. The apex of its driving utility is far in the future.

The Chalmers is a "long time service" car; not a "one year" car. It is easily proven.

Sit at the wheel of a Chalmers that has been driven 8000 to 10,000 miles; note the noiseless ease with which the gear levers shift; see how soft the clutch works and how perfectly the gears interweave; observe the delicate purr of the motor, developing its marvelous power without the semblance of effort; marvel at the sensitiveness of the steering apparatus.

You will hear no rattling of the bolts; no squeaking of fenders or body; no cracks in the chassis; no annoying noises from the doors; no flapping of loose parts. Just a strong, silent, powerful, forward impulse every inch of the way.

And this is efficient Chalmers construction. It is the construction that you expect to find in cars of exceedingly higher price; it is construction that makes for durable performance; that assures safety on the road and economy in the garage.

This, also, is famous Chalmers utility. It is the quality that has kept the Chalmers to the forefront of quality cars; it is the quality that costs you less because it is built into every car in the making; it is the quality that keeps the Chalmers out of the "one year" class and develops satisfaction in the mind of the owner, year after year, in a constantly accumulating degree.

Make up your mind, when you look at the Chalmers that you are buying a car for tomorrow, next month, next year and as many more years as you care to drive it.

"In Union There is Strength"
A. Lincoln

FROM the beginning of the Firestone business, Lincoln's advice was heeded by its founder and present head, Mr. Firestone. He saw the power in singleness of purpose, and the roots of Firestone success are laid deep in organization.

Firestone CORD TIRE

builders, having first established the standard of perfection in fabric tires, now offer this super-size Cord, the tire of highest efficiency. It has more than extra resiliency. It has a sturdiness of structure that means endurance for city use or buffeting of bad roads.

With the true Abe Lincoln policy of "pull together," Firestone stock distribution has made 11,000 employes active stockholders in the business. Thus every Firestone employe has a personal interest in giving you the right tire and service.

Equip today for the double economy of fuel-saving and lowest tire cost per mile.

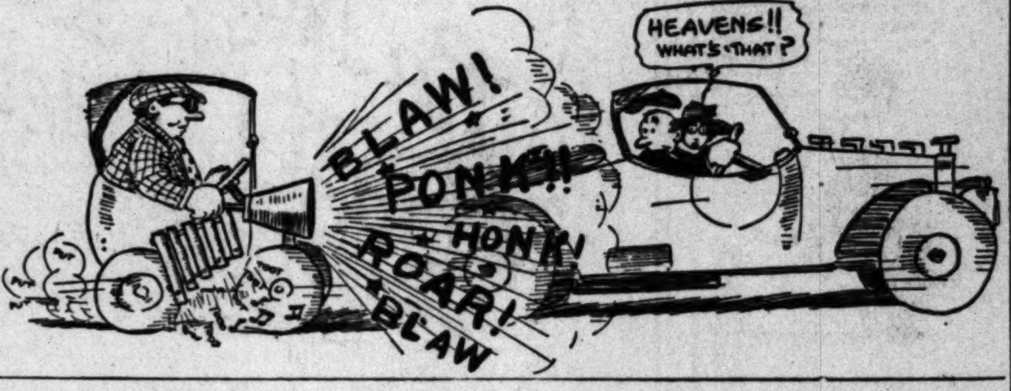
SOMETIMES A SMALL CAR WITH A BIG HORN GETS BIG RESULTS.



HEAVENS!! WHAT'S THAT?
BLAW!
PONK!!
HONK!
ROAR!
BLAW

"HUD" DURANT, superintendent of the Baker Iron Works, has been guilty of concealing a perfectly good story for several years. He has kept it in a secluded place, packed in ice, and it never would have been told if "Hud" hadn't let his foot slip one evening and spilled the beans. Here's the yarn:

Durant drove a Ford car at one time, and, among other things, discovered that owners of larger boats, for some reason or other, objected strenuously to turning out and letting him go by when he tooted the little Ford tooter. They simply hugged the middle of the road and all efforts on Durant's part to get them to move over were futile. But Durant is a schemer from Schemersville and within a week he had three different kinds of horns on that old Ford—horns which got results.

One horn was the original little squawker, which makes a noise like a cross between a tin rattle and a jewsharp. The next one was a musical horn on which "Hud" learned to play popular airs. It sounded something like an accordion, but the lower notes resembled a kettle drum. It was th third horn, however, that "Hud" did business with. Ah, that was some horn! It had one note that sounded like six steamboat wihstles rolled into one: another that was an exact duplicate of a jay town fire whistle, one of those whistles which start in at the bottom, climb the scale and then skid back to the starting point. The third note, still louder, was like unto the explosion of dynamite firecrackers, and if the driver of the car ahead had a weak heart one blast from this would send him to the hospital or morgue without fail.

Thus armed, or rather "horned," Durant went forth looking for trouble. A big twin-six was the first victim and Durant started in with horn No. 1.

"Toot, toot!" said the little horn, but the drive of the big car never even turned his head.

No. 2 was turned loose next, but even this failed to chase the driver over on his own side of the row.

Then "Hud" got real peeved and blew all three horns at once.

The result was all that he could have wished for, the driver evidently thinking the fire wagon, the police patrol and a circus band were on his trail, for he slid over toward the curb and almost stopped his machine to see what the rumpus was about.

"The look on that fellow's face when I rambled past him in my old Ford and he realized what I had pulled on him was worth three times the price of the horns," said Durant. "It worked every time I pulled it and I almost wore the big horn out chasing big cars out of my path."

Loss of oil through leakage at any point along the drive-shaft tube can generally be traced to worn felt washers, gaskets or to wear in the metal itself of the different parts. Sometimes an application of shellac at the point of leakage will add materially to preventing the oil from coming out.

WHEN IS A CAR A PLEASURE CAR.

The movement throughout the industry to eliminate the word "pleasure" from the motor car vocabulary is indicative of the rapidly broadening field of the motor car, remarks Motor Age. The proportion of motor vehicles used solely for pleasure purposes is so small that to apply the word "pleasure" to the class of cars designed for private transportation of human beings as distinguished from vehicles designed for the transportation of merchandise no longer is proper.

Time was when the motor vehicle was used wholy either for business purposes or for pleasure, but, nowadays, a touring car or roadster most frequently is a part of the business equipment of the owner. The motor car used on the farm is not used for pleasure purposes entirely. The doctor's car used to save patient's lives is not used for pleasure purposes. The touring car or roadster used on any business errand is not a pleasure car. It has been the unfortunate selection of the word "pleasure" as a definition of a type of motor vehicle that has to some extent been responsible for adverse State and Federal legislation.

Up to the present time, the word most commonly used to replace this objectional one is the word "passenger."

SHE FINDS "HEALTH" IN GARAGE WORK.

Miss Lillian Johnson of Portland, Me., was born in Gottenberg, Sweden, twety-one years ago. Formerly she was on the vaduevillo stage, but her health gave out and she took up book-keeping. This also proved too exacting, so she learned the trade of a machinist and motor repair woman.

There is nothing mannish about Miss Johnson, those who know her say. She is a pretty, auburn-haired girl, five feet four inches tall. She does all her own sewing, plays golf rather well, rides, plays tennis, swims and is, in short, an all-around athlete. Naturally she can drive a motor car, and just now she wants to join the Aviation Corps and help win the war.

FEW JOY RIDES TAKEN IN CHINA.

Few people are wealthy enough to take joy rides in China, for gasoline sells for $1.25 a gallon there. Furthermore, good roads are scarce, and who would want to bump along at about two bits a bump?

Labor is so cheap that a pony cart and driver can be obtained for 25 cents a day, however, and this explains why a large portion of the 400,000,000 population never get a motor ride. It is said the majority of the Chinese never even saw a flivver.

JULY AUTO SALES SHOW GAIN OVER LAST YEAR.

FOR those who imagine that business is going to smash, and that the demand for automobiles is decreasing, here are some figures that should cheer them up. They were taken from the books of the State license bureau for the month of July of last year and the same month this year:

In July, 1916, a total of 4404 new plates were issued from the Los Angeles office, which means that in Southern California many cars were sold in one month. This includes both new and used cars.

In July, this year, a total of 4528 plates were issued, or an increase (not a decrease, you will note) of 124 over last year. During the month 509 motorcycle licenses were issued.

It is true that a greater percentage of new cars were sold last year, but this is explained to a great extent by the fact that many kinds of cars cannot be had now at any price, as the factories are behind with their orders.

Of the total number of cars sold in Southern California in July, this year, 2362 were new ones and 2166 were used cars.

In August, 1915, total number of plates issued was only 3573.

AUTOS ARE FOE OF THE DRUG SELLERS.

Automobiles may have increased the receipts of surgeons and hospitals, but it's safe to say the physicians and drug sellers have been deprived of a part of their revenue since the introduction of the new form of outdoor amusement.

Riding a mile, or a hundred miles, in an automobile with the fresh air and sunshine as companions is good for anyone. Possibly too much fast riding isn't beneficial, but there can't be too much air and sunshine, and the man or woman who drives a car gets both.

Fishing trips. Hunting trips. Trips to the mountains and seashore. Trips to gather wild flowers and ferns. Trips through the country districts, along boulevards lined with orchards and orange groves. Ah, these trips cannot help but prove beneficial.

And surely nowhere are they so delightful as right here in Southern California, the greatest motoring paradise in the world—the home of good roads, good climate, pretty scenery and an endless variety of short and long trips always awaiting your choice.

An Akron (O.) tire company has undertaken to convert a vast Arizona desert of 40,000 acres into productive cotton fields. The company already has planted 10,000 acres, and this crop will be harvested in the fall to make tire fabric at the company's cotton mills.

AUTO THIEVES' HAUL IN JULY SETS NEW RECORD.

Nearly a Hundred Thousand Dollars' Worth of Cars Taken—Forty Thousand Dollars' Worth Still Missing. Auto Club Blames Motorists for Failure to Co-operate on a Fifty-fifty Basis.

A GENERAL indolence on the part of motorists to do their fifty of a fifty-fifty proposition is largely ascribed as the reason for a great increase in the number of automobiles stolen and not recovered during the month of July, according to a report issued yesterday from the headquarters of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

According to the club's theft bureau report there were 123 motor cars stolen in Los Angeles last month, representing a total valuation of $98,400. Of these forty-eight have not been recovered, representing a valuation of approximately $38,400.

If jewels, or good names, or lump sums of cash, to that amount, had been stolen, point out Automobile Club officials, a hue and cry which could be heard from here to the trenches would be raised, but so phlegmatic are automobile owners becoming and so sure of their luck that the stealing of thousands of dollars worth of property of this kind causes scarcely a comment.

But it is just this lethargy which is making it easy for the automobile thieves, say Detectives Powell and Lowe of the club's bureau. Every motorist, they state, believes himself immune from theft until proved otherwise—and they are being proved otherwise to the tune of about $1,152,000 a year.

Steps for the recovery of stolen automobiles have been made during the past three years by the Automobile Club—and during the past year an opportunity has been offered car owners by the club for aiding in recovering their own machines. All the car owner has to do is to fill out an "identification blank" at the club headquarters, or at any of the branch offices, and file it with the organization.

With the data inscribed on the blank, the theft bureau officers are aided about 50 per cent. in tracing the stolen car. It is the 50 per cent. that automobile owners are requested to do in order to help in securing the return of their property. Besides this, however, they are asked to park cars under lights at night, to lock them and to report any suspicious characters seen around cars or in and about private garages. Also to report thefts as soon as they happen.

But there is an optimistic side to the situation, also. Of the 123 cars taken in July there were eighty recovered, and also five recovered which were stolen previously and still outstanding. The records for the same month a year ago show that ninety-nine cars were stolen and sixty-eight recovered—an increase of twenty four automobiles taken.

In fact, according to the club's theft bureau, every year sees a steady increase in the thefts of this kind. There have been 833 automobiles stolen this year in and about Los Angeles, of which 314 have never been heard from. However, of the total number, 613 were recovered.

That the Automobile Club's theft bureau is doing yeoman service in preventing the theft of machines and in recovering stolen property is the testimony given by motorists who have had occasion to deal through it. According to Detective Powell, the bureau is now concentrating on perfecting a system for the recovery of stolen tires, the most difficult property to trace and recover.

GAS SUPPLY MAY SOON GIVE OUT.

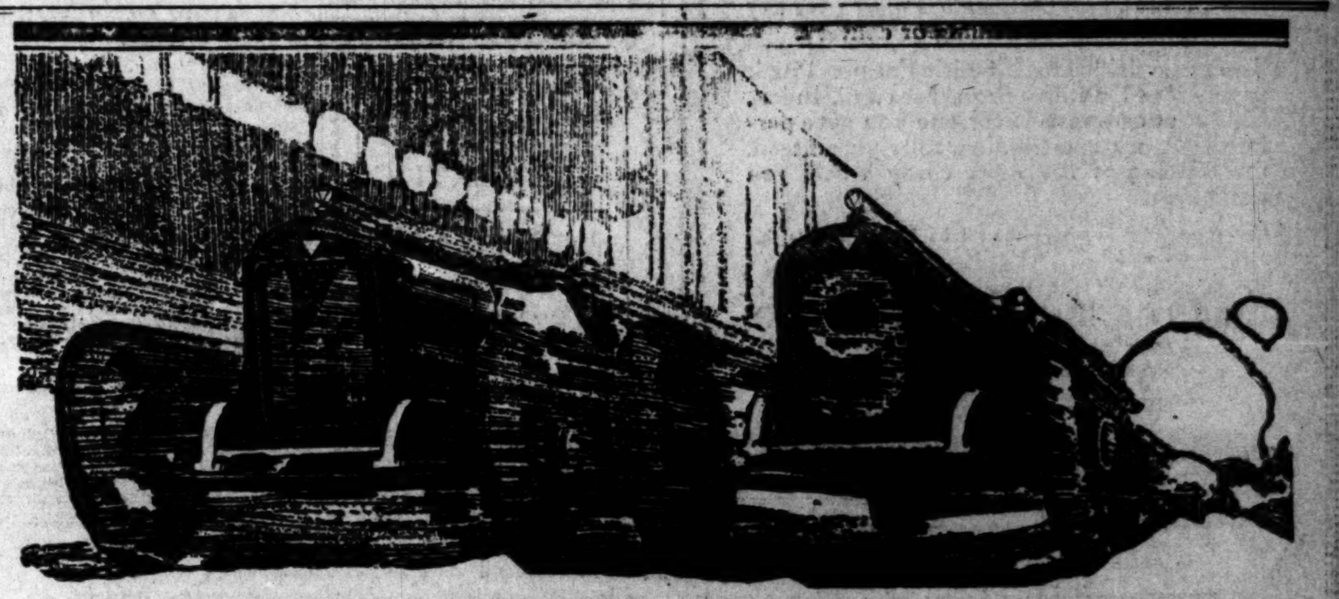
At a recent meeting of the American Institute of Mining Engineers the statement was made on highest authority that the total resources of this country in petroleum were 30 per cent. exhausted and that, based on past experience, the supply in sight would not last more than twenty-five to fifty years; but that if the motor industry should continue to increase its production at the rate it has during the last few years the supplies in sight will not last more than fifteen to twenty-five years.



Hudson Racing Records—

What They Should Mean to You

Speedway tests are endurance tests. The tremendous strains and stresses to which racing cars are put bring out the two most important qualities a car owner should demand—endurance and power.

In a few hours the speedway may show weaknesses that it would take miles of ordinary travel to reveal.

You will probably never want to own a racing car. You do, though, want a car that has endurance. You require performance not for a few but for thousands of miles. This year a team of racing cars proved endurance for the Hudson Super-Six on the speedway.

Endurance Proved on the Speedway

No team of racing cars has ever shown such a record for consistency.

In one event American speedway records for 150 and 200 miles were established at an average of 104 miles an hour.

Track records were established at Chicago, Cincinnati and Omaha. The fastest time ever recorded at Tacoma and Minneapolis was made by the Super-Six Special, and claims for tracks records will be considered by the American Automobile Association.

Here is the unmatched record of the Hudson Super-Six Specials in this year's nine championship races, held at Cincinnati, Chicago, Omaha, Tacoma, Uniontown and Minneapolis:

Twenty-two entries were made. All save one finished within the money; an accident forced that one car out.

Hudson Specials won firsts in four events; second in six; third in two; fourth in three; fifth in three; and sixth, seventh and eighth in one each.

All stock car and stock chassis records made by the Super-Six last year still stand, although many attempts have been made to lower some of them. Here is a partial list of Hudson stock performances:

Stock Car Records Also Prove Endurance

Fastest stock chassis mile—average 102½ miles per hour.

1819 miles in 24 hours, excelling all other reco[illegible] by 52%.

For 100 miles a stock car fully equipped, carrying two passengers, averaged 74.67 miles per hour.

The double transcontinental record was made by a seven-passenger Super-Six phaeton from San Francisco to New York and return—7000 miles in [illegible] days and 21 hours—a new record for both ways [illegible] first round trip across America ever at[illegible] against time.

And Now Other Cars Cost as Much as Hudsons

Cars which recently sold at $1100 to $12[illegible] almost as much as the Hudson Super-Six. Sure[illegible] records for consistent endurance and their service [illegible] owners make it the preferred car to any. Don't [illegible] prefer it to any costing $2500 or under?

Price is not now an attraction except that the certainty that present prices can be continued on H[illegible]. When present materials are exhausted there must readjustment on the basis of present material costs. [illegible] real car worth will be established and Hudson prices will advance to a point where they more nearly repr[illegible] true values.

Today you can buy a Hudson Super-Six made from materials bought last year. If you delay you must pay on the basis the present market—the market which has forced other makers to raise their prices.

Thrift—Associated with the Franklin Touring Car for Fifteen Years

WE ARE not telling you anything "new" about the Franklin Touring Car.

With the Franklin, Thrift is far from a present-day fad; it has been a scientific fact for 15 years.

The Franklin Touring Car weighs 2280 scientifically put-together pounds—minus the care, trouble and expense of 177 complicated water cooling parts.

Which mainly accounts for the Franklin having established every worth-while efficiency and thrift record among fine cars.

And you'll not find the Franklin owner restricting his touring, for he owns a car of utility, constructed fundamentally to operate on a Thrift basis.

"Claims" for thrift have had their day. Necessity demands facts.

MESSENGER BOY SWIPES BICYCLE RACE HONORS.

If YOU rang in vain for a messenger boy yesterday afternoon, charge it up to the bicycle races at Exposition Park, for there were literally hundreds of boys there, ranging from 12 to 20 years of age, and a large percentage of them were messenger boys.

Incidentally, Ralph Kingsley of the Western Union, carried off most of the plums, and persimmons, of the programme. Kingsley jumped out and won first in the one-mile race for messenger boys in uniform and then took off his suit and won first in the one-mile championship race, first in the mile tandem, with the assistance of Oscar Ziegler, first in the two-mile handicap, from scratch, and third in the fifteen-mile championship race. In several events Kingsley rode along in the rear until a few hundred feet from the tape, and then jumped out, shook up his wheel, lowered his auburn head and finished in front. Nelson of Riverside won the fifteen-mile race, Baxter and Kingsley being second and third.

Ed Walker won the race for boys under 12 years of age; Adolph Zeigler won the first heat of the mile championship; Max Flickenger won the half-mile event for salesmen; J. D. Peach beat Albert Shock in the half-mile professional. Peach is 45 years old.

The race was the second annual event of its kind given under the auspices of the bicycle jobbers and dealers.

NO KIDDING, NOW, WHY NOT HAVE A "SKIDDING SCHOOL?"

WHO will be first to announce a "skidding school?" Yes, a place where expert drivers—drivers who can send a car over a wet street without log chains on each wheel and not have it do a wiggle dance. Skidding is the cause of thousands of wrecked cars every year, to say nothing of the large number of persons injured or killed as a result of skidding automobiles.

But there are drivers right here in Los Angeles who can drive a car with smooth tires over a wet boulevard at thirty miles an hour and be in no danger at all. They know just how to manage the steering wheel, just what to do and what not to do. It looks simple, but it isn't. Some skidding rules can be followed, as soon as the driver is told what to do under certain circumstances, but other rules have to be taught—demonstrated, if you please, and on a wet street, too.

Why not have a real driving school, where skidding lessons are taught? Why doesn't some fellow who has mastered the tricks of skidding get busy and get up a class? He could select a street little used, turn on the hose and get busy. Make the car skid and then show how to "right it." Turn around on a wet street and show the pupil just how to do it. Explain emergency cases, where brakes must be put on to avoid a collision and how best to skid if skidding is unavoidable.

Skidding, as a matter of fact, isn't so dangerous if you know "how" to skid, "when" to skid and "where" to skid. But all skidding is dangerous if you don't know these things.

Nonskid tires are a great help. They prevent skidding to a large extent, but neither tires nor chains make a car skidproof under all conditions. By all means, use nonskid tires, or chains, in "skiddy" weather, but don't depend upon them entirely. If you do you are very likely to go to the hospital or morgue sooner or later.

EVANGELIST WANTS AIRPLANE SERVICE.

Rev. J. E. Naylor, field evangelist for a Kansas Baptist organization, has offered his services to C. V. Cessna, an aviator who is building airplanes at a plant in Wichita, with this proposition:

The aviator is to furnish a four-passenger airplane, fully equipped for use in traveling between towns where the evangelist holds meetings. In return the evangelist says the advertising resulting from such trips will make Wichita a household term as the home of airplanes and will likewise cause Mr. Cessna to become more widely known. The evangelist further offers to write an 18,000-word book on 'The Sunflower State from the Deck of the Airship Kansas.' "

A Dallas-to-Texarkana Highway Association has been formed. The highway will connect at Dallas with the El Paso and Amarillo highway.

Reports from Canada that an entirely satisfactory alcohol fuel has been made from sawdust, previously a waste product of the lumber industry, and which can be made at a very low price, gives rise to the hope that the oft-promised alcohol production from wood waste may in time be realized in sufficient quanties to provide an alternative motor fuel.

JACK RYAN SUSPENDED BY POWERS FOR INTOXICATION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

Tigers Climb.

had no trouble in hitting George's leg, which has many curves.

The Tigers scored in a sane and workmanlike manner, picking up one run at a time so as not to completely stampede the enemy. They counted in the second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth. This gave them five-minutes rest between each run, and in that way warded off staleness.

Jim Galloway's no-hit record came to a stop when he singled in the second. Callahan singled to right. Jim looked over his shoulder at second and saw Miller mudding the ball, and then chased to third. He scored when Moore drove into what looked like a double play, Stumpf to Mensor to Gardner, but which wasn't. Cal beat the play at second, Moore alone being retired. Stumpf threw out Quinn.

Chadbourne's walk, a sacrifice and Daley's single gave the Tigers their second in the third. Galloway resumed his riot of hitting with another safety in the fourth. A sacrifice placed him on second, Moore lined a single to center, and Jim was spared at the plate when Lane came through with a lame heave. Acosta's opening act in the fifth was to walk Vaughn, Daley and Stovall stepped in with singles, and the fourth run was in. A forceout and a stolen base landed Vaughn at second in the sixth. Snodgrass saw him there and singled him home. The score:

BOTH HEAT AND MOON HANDICAP HUNTERS.

Despite the opening of deer season in the up-coast counties Wednesday, the heat of the week-end brought hunting to a standstill. With chances about even of the venison spoiling before a buck could be brought down, due to the unusual admixture of humidity and heat, many who set forth early in the week with blood in their eye found the fishing more to their liking. Heat works against the deer hunter in every way, keeping the deer under cover, making them feed at night, and the present glorious full moon further encourages the nocturnal habit of the horn-bears.

Many veteran hunters decided to wait until the middle of the month when the usual "opening day" crowds had somewhat thinned out, and the moon had darkened, feeling that no very material reduction in the venison supply will be possible in the meantime.

Some hunters who visited the Ventura watershed were disappointed in finding their pet hunting country had been burned over. The conditions must be learned anew, for as predicted before the opening, deer will be concentrated in some sections and driven out of others where formerly plentiful.

ANGELS MUST PAY SCHULTZ'S SALARY.

Joe Schultz, third baseman recently released by the Angels, will continue to draw salary from the Los Angeles club. His claim has been allowed by the National Baseball Commission, according to a dispatch from Cincinnati. Schultz came to the Angels from Pittsburgh with an ironclad contract calling for a big salary. Los Angeles paid only part of this while he played here, Pittsburgh making up the difference. When the Angels turned him back to the Pirates, Barney Dreyfus refused to take the player or assume the contract. The case was then carried to the national commission. Schultz is now with Toronto and doing well.

FILLMORE REPORTS FOUR DEER KILLED.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HER HEALTH IS HER FORTUNE.

Marguerite Clark Goes Contrary to the Old Adage.

Though it is a very general impression that a girl's face is her fortune there is one immensely successful photoplay star who does not believe in that theory.

Dainty Marguerite Clark, second to none in screen popularity, subscribes to the fact that a screen star's health is her greatest asset. Soon after her advent into pictures, Miss Clark realized that the terrific strain of working day after day at the studio required her to be in the pink of condition at all times, so had installed in her beautiful Riverside-drive home in New York one of the most complete gymnasiums imaginable. Here she spends at least an hour every morning working the apparatus. She has become an expert on the flying trapeze, handles the "horse" like a trained gymnast, works the weight machines and lifts the giant dumb bells like a college athlete. She can now row in the rowing machine with all the grace and abandon of a Ten Eyck. There is nothing Miss Clark enjoys more than a few rounds with the gloves, heavily padded, of course, and in a regulation-sized prize fight ring, with a heavy pad to break the falls.

Miss Clark learned the art of scientific boxing and self-defense from several of the country's best featherweight pugilists in preparation for the unusual stunts in this line called for in her latest photoplay success, "The Amazons," in which she appears for a week beginning tomorrow afternoon at Clune's Auditorium. She frequently invites one of her girl friends into the gymnasium, where they put on the gloves and go at each other as if they were mortal enemies. Miss Clark is particularly enthusiastic over her impromptu sparring matches because she believes that they will keep one in condition more completely than most any other exercise.

Dawson Fails.

winners of these events are local champs, and will be so regarded.

The victory of Mace in the singles is rather remarkable, as he won the title two successive years quite a while ago, and was prevented from making it three straight by Ward Dawson, the man whom he defeated yesterday.

After going East and playing at Princeton University, Mace returned to Southern California playing an absolutely different style of game and last year defeated Simpson Sinsabaugh for the title, taking with the championship the beautiful trophy. This makes the second time that Mace has won the title two years in succession and fans are already wondering if he will make it three next year.

MARY FINISHES MOLLA AFTER LOSING A SET.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEABRIGHT (N. J.) Aug. 4.—F. C. Inman, and L. E. Mahan won the round robin doubles tournament on the turf courts of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club here today. They came through the series undefeated.

In the other important match Karl H. Behr, and N. W. Niles, defeated T. R. Pell and B. S. Prentice.

Miss Mary Browne won the woman's singles. In the final match she defeated her rival, Miss Molla Bjurstedt, national champion, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5. Miss Browne's dashing drives and her crossing shots overcame a long lead in the last set.

GARLAND AND HARDY WIN AT CHICAGO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—Charles Garland of Pittsburgh and Samuel Hardy of Chicago, recent winners of the national clay court title, won the western patriotic doubles tennis championship today by defeating Walter T. Hayes and Ralph Burdick, former western champion, in five sets, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5, 3-6, 6-3.

Miss Carrie B. Neely of Chicago defeated Miss Mary Voorhees of Evanston, Ill., for the women's singles championship and Miss Neely and Miss Evelyn Seavey of Kansas City won from Miss Voorhees and Miss Miriam Steever of Chicago in the finals of the doubles, one set going 15-13.

The singles finals for men will be played between Walter T. Hayes and Samuel Hardy.

MILK COWS WITH A GAS MACHINE.

Milking machines can be run by a gas engine. One gallon of gasoline is sufficient to milk 300 cows. Read that again, you "hand strippers," and if you're tired of your job show it to the boss. Gasoline does lots of things. For instance, a single gallon is sufficient to bale four tons of hay, mix thirty-five yards of cement, move a ton truck fourteen miles, plow three-fifths of an acre of ground, and, last but not least, it will make enough electricity to keep eight lights going in a farm house for thirty hours.

And gasoline is being used for all of these purposes and many others, in addition to furnishing power for your car. This is the gas age, as well as the electric age, and Mother Nature provided it all when the earth was formed. True, John D. has a mortgage on the gas supply, but he's still willing to sell it hereabouts for 20 cents a gallon; and if you can do more with a similar expenditure for anything else you're a ten-time winner.

SANTA YNEZ YIELDS SOME BIG TROUT.

Even the Santa Ynez, which no one would have given thought, yielded up some beautiful fish last week when that piscatorial pilgrim, Charlie Creciat, to whom fishing is as the joy of life, wandered up that way, grabbing several a foot long and some he could not keep on a line at all. They were in the deep holes and no one else was fishing. In its long, level valley, under present heat, the Santa Ynez would be about the last place any angler would pick—and the more versed in trout lore the more certain he would be to go on farther.

The Frog.

"Frog means a good jumper," the other boy answered.

"Yes," said the first one, "but I don't swaller my skin."

A Different Scheme.

KILLIFER LETS HEAVERS SUFFER, YET WINS GAMES.

—New Seraph Manager Seldom Takes a Man Out of the Game, no Matter How Hard He is Being Hit, and the Number of Battles Won by the Angels Recently Seems to Show this to be a Nifty Idea.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

WADE KILLIFER seems to have taken that apothegm, "Don't trade horses in the middle of a stream," and twisted it around to apply to the handling of pitchers.

Wade does not believe in changing pitchers in the middle of a troubled ball game unless the case is very urgent. He has never stated his belief, but it is reflected in his actions.

LET'S 'EM SUFFER.

Killifer monkeys less with his heavers than any manager in the history of this league, or any other. This tendency to let nature take its course has been one of the outstanding features of his calm and collected life. And what's more, he is getting away with it.

The percentage seems to be in favor of his system, as far as the Angels are concerned. Since he took over the club it has won twenty-three and lost ten games. During that time he has changed pitchers but four times, and two of those occasions were in Salt Lake, where no pitcher is safe. On three other occasions he has lifted heavers, not because they were being hit, but simply to sandwich a pinch-hitter into a rally.

SOME RECORD.

During the month that the Angels were home they went more than three weeks without making a change except for pinch-hitting purposes. And beginning July 8, they went through an even dozen games in a row without making a pitching or pinch-hitting shift of any kind. The first twirler to be removed for cause during the July campaign was Tom Seaton. He was yanked on July 27 in the third round because of wildness. The following Saturday it was necessary to pull Pete Standridge after he had made a mess of trouble for himself in the ninth.

And all this time the Los Angeles pitchers were not, as a rule, twirling airtight ball. They were being hit freely, and scored on with impunity. Killifer doubtless figured his club, and staked his faith on its ability to go out and get more runs than the other team.

EXPLANATION.

We never have asked him to explain the principle which governs the daily handling of his pitchers, but it is a cinch that his answer would be something like this:

"I know just about what my club can do, on an average, in the way of making runs, and this leaves the percentage in favor of leaving a pitcher in. Furthermore, there is no certainty that any change which you make will be for the better. In that case you weaken your staff for the future by using up two men in one game. Not only does it take the confidence out of some pitchers to be pulled, but frequent shifts make it difficult to work your men in anything like their regular turn. If my team is hitting in anything like its normal strength I back it to make more runs than the other club. But if it isn't hitting and therefore not scoring, it doesn't make any difference how hard my own pitcher is getting hit. We may lose many a game under this system, but if I can keep my pitchers fresh and confident these losses will be more than off-set by future effectiveness."

These are not Killifer's words, mind you, but we have a hunch that they tally very closely to what he would say.

It is not unusual to see a club proceed for a protracted period without tampering much with the pitchers—if they are going good—but the Angels' gunners have been unsteady and hit hard in a majority of their games.

Radiant Red seems to be trying something original, and getting by with it.

Just what sort of stuff a shortstop carries inside his sleeve always has been a mystery to us. That mere bone and sinew could stand the strain of playing that position does not sound probable, but is true. No man in baseball imposes a greater burden on his arm than the shortstop, with the exception of the pitcher, and even the latter does not take as many chances with it. The twirler sets himself to deliver the ball and follows a prescribed motion. The shortstop cuts loose from any angle. He may be forced to come in on a short grounder, and snap the ball to first. The only wonder is that he doesn't snap his arm off at the elbow. On the next play he may back onto the grass in left field, drag in a hard drive and throw on a line to first. This time the only wonder is that he does not throw his arm out at the shoulder joint.

The shortfielder averages more chances than any other man on the field, and puts in most of his life throwing. Yet seldom do you hear of one retiring because of an injury to his arm. Shortstops, as a rule, are long-lived. Wagner, Tinker, McBride, Maranville, Bush, Weaver, Wallace, Wright, Glasscock, George Davis—the list could be increased ad infinitum. Per contra, the mortality among the arms of the outfielders is far greater. The outer gardeners make comparatively few throws, and yet sore wings are a common ailment among them. This feature of baseball always has puzzled us, and we took it for granted that the outfielder, having a longer throw, puts more strain on his whip than the shortstop—although it does not look that way from the stand. This seemed the only logical explanation. Killifer, however, says such is not the case. Having passed through a bitter experience of his own, he should know whereof he speaks. Said Red:

"An outfielder, as everybody knows, makes comparatively few throws, and when he does he imposes no greater strain on his arm than a shortstop. It may sound anomalous, but an outfielder's arm is most likely to go back on him because he does so little throwing. A shortstop is so busy that he keeps his wing warmed up. An outfielder frequently is called on to cut loose with a 'cold arm.' It is like sending a pitcher into the box before he has limbered up his whip. This it was which put my arm on the bum early in the season. 'Charley horse' is generally supposed to be confined to the legs. But it isn't. After cutting loose with a throw home on a cold day last spring, I developed a distinct 'Charley horse' in the arm. I do not doubt that other outfielders have had the same experience, and it probably explains why you see so many of them with weak whips after they have been in the game a few years."

Heinie Zimmerman has been one of the main factors in keeping the New York Giants in front. This is the opinion of Arthur Fletcher in a letter to Fred Snodgrass. "Zimmerman is playing the best ball of his career, and has helped the team wonderfully," declared Fletcher. McGraw seems to have succeeded where all other managers failed. Possibly the fact that Heinie always wanted to play in New York, and did not care much for Chicago, had something to do with his improvement.

Failure of the Chicago Cub management to settle with the players on the last pay day occasioned no little conjecture all over the country. This couldn't have been due to lack of finances, because old John Bullion himself is back of the club. It is the consensus of opinion here that the main backers of the club delayed paying off so as to make some of the smaller shareholders kick through. The Cubs are blessed, or afflicted, with an army of stockholders, and yet one or two men are said to have been bearing the brunt of the expense. Just how correct is this version of the affair, we are unable to say. Holding up the pay may have been a punitive measure to make the athletes play ball. Weeghman has been stung so hard and often by the festive athlete that he may have decided it is a poor rule that doesn't work both ways.

"OLD TRAILS" MEET AT PUEBLO, COLO.

An invitation to members of the Automobile Club of Southern California to be present at the annual convention of the National Old Trails Road Association to be held at Pueblo, Colo., on August 16 and 17, has been extended by the big association.

Secretary S. L. Mitchell of the automobile club yesterday issued the following statement:

"It is suggested that any members of the Automobile Club of Southern California who are in the vicinity of Pueblo on the dates of the convention make an effort to attend the meetings.

"This is one of the great road organizations of the country and one with which we have co-operated to the fullest extent by sign-posting the National Old Trails from Los Angeles to Kansas City. Many noted men in the road movement have promised to be present, and Pueblo is making a mighty effort to see that the visitors are well entertained

"The Denver and Colorado Springs Motor clubs are co-operating, and programmes and detailed information can be secured at either place."

NATIONAL DIVING CHAMPIONSHIP TO BE DECIDED AT THE OCEAN PARK PIER DURING THE MORNING.

OCEAN PARK will go swim-crazy today with one of the finest programmes of outdoor aquatics ever staged on the Coast. Heading a nifty list of events is the men's national high diving championship, the first time this competition has ever been held in Southern California. At the close of this event, which takes place at 11 o'clock a. m., the Southern California high diving championship for women will be held and little Cameron Coffey will give an exhibition from the sixteen-foot board. This will be followed by a championship race on the sport fish, the first competition of its kind ever held. All of these events will be run off at or near the Ocean Park pier and will be in full view of the thousands of people who will line the beach. The men's diving championship of the country seems certain to go to either Billy Williams or Clyde Swendson, local divers, although there will be competitors from San Francisco and other cities.

Buicks for 1918 will be better than ever. This fact assures a demand that will be greater than ever for this most popular car. Buick sales totals, great as they were last year, will be greater than ever. Again we say, get your order in early, for it is impossible for the Buick factory, gigantic as it is, to keep up with the ever-growing demand for Buick cars.

REO

Reo Quality is Uniform in all Reo Models

AND REO QUALITY at Reo Prices and backed by the Reo guarantee, constitutes "The Gold Standard of Values"—each model in its class.

THERE ARE NOW SEVEN Reo Models, comprising Fours in Touring and Roadster types; Sixes in Touring, Roadster and Sedan; and the two Reo Commercial Vehicles—the ¾-Ton "Speed Wagon" and 2-Ton "Heavy Duty" Truck.

IN THIS ADVERTISEMENT we have space only for a brief paragraph pertaining to each Reo Model—lest you forget the line is so complete that you can find the car you desire, in the type you prefer, and in a Reo.

REO THE FIFTH "The Incomparable Four" is America's most famous automobile. Standard in practically its present form for now eight seasons—"going on nine". At its present price, $985, this car is verily "A gold dollar for ninety cents".

TO REO THE FIFTH more than to any other, is due the movement that is now so apparent—the return to the Four-cylinder type in all cars listing at less than $1,000.

THE FOUR ROADSTER is the handsomest model of its type you'll see on the road—at any price. And, for the present, you can get it for $985 and freight from the factory.

OF THE SIX ROADSTER the same is true, plus the extra luxury it affords the owner at the extra cost—$1385 f. o. b. Lansing.

THESE TWO ROADSTERS are of similar design and identical construction and are conceded to be the handsomest cars of the type—price aside.

FOR THE FAMILY that needs a car of greater capacity than five and yet of moderate upkeep, the Reo Six Touring Car—also $1385 for the present—knows no equal.

NO MATTER WHAT YOU PAY you cannot obtain a 7-passenger car of better design; one that represents sounder engineering; more experience; better materials and workmanship than enter into the making of this Reo Six.

THAT'S A BROAD CLAIM but we make it unhesitatingly—and you know that the word of Reo passes at par everywhere.

THE REO SIX SEDAN is the newest of all the Reo models—and therefore represents the best of Reo experience and taste.

REFINED AND IMPROVED at every point where last season's experience showed the need or the opportunity. This body is staunch in construction as well as graceful in curve and line.

AT ITS PRICE, $1,950, you will not find its equal—nor at a thousand dollars more, its superior. We state that in all confidence too.

OF THE REO TRUCKS what need we say here? The ¾-Ton "Hurry Up" Wagon at $1,125 (chassis $1050); and the famous 2-Ton Reo "Heavy Duty" Truck at $1800—each is the leader in its own class—demand greatly in excess of factory capacity.

BUT THAT IS TRUE of all Reo models, without exception.

THAT'S WHY WE SAY "Reo Quality is Uniform in all Reo Models," the uniform over-demand for all Reo models justifies the statement.

ORDER NOW if you'd have your Reo soon. Present prices are guaranteed only till December first. If you order now and specify delivery before that time, you'll get your Reo at the present price.

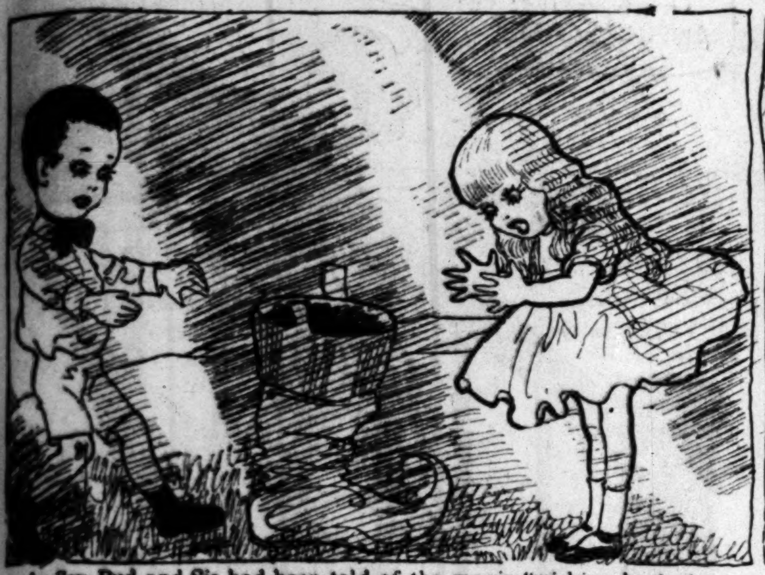
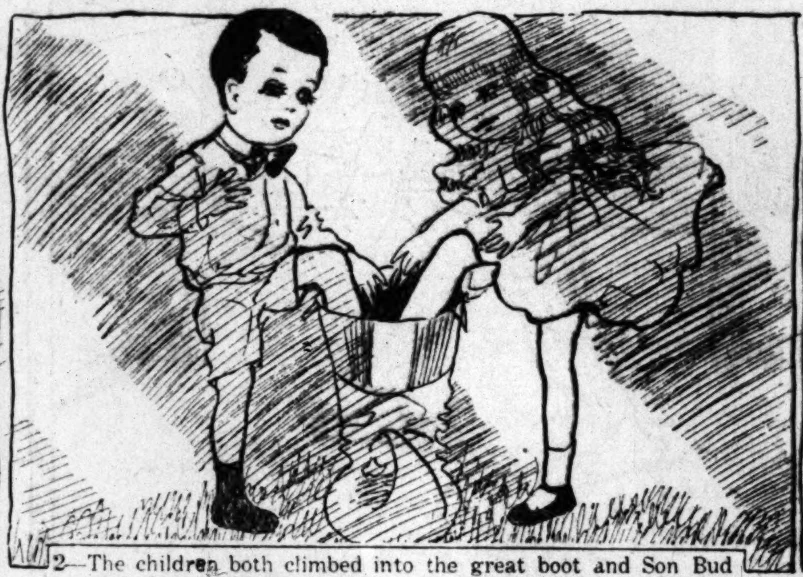
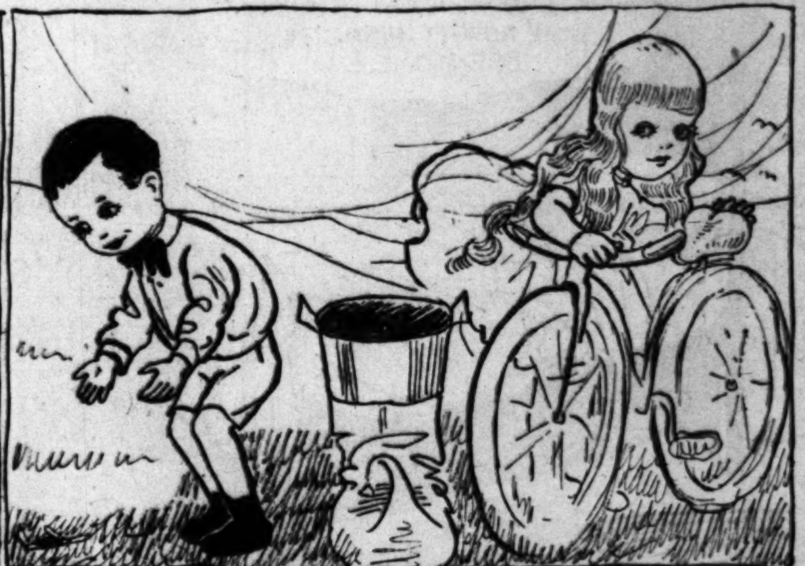
ONCE UPON A TIME BY CLYDE LUDWICK AT THE END OF THE RAINBOW.



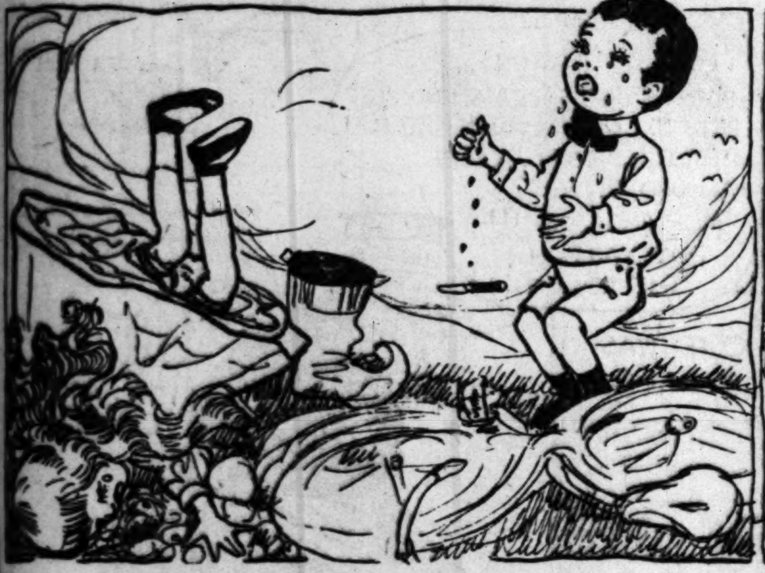
1—Son Bud and Sis had been told of the magic "wishing boot at the end of the rainbow," and went in search of it. When they found the boot it was very large and would fit neither of their feet.



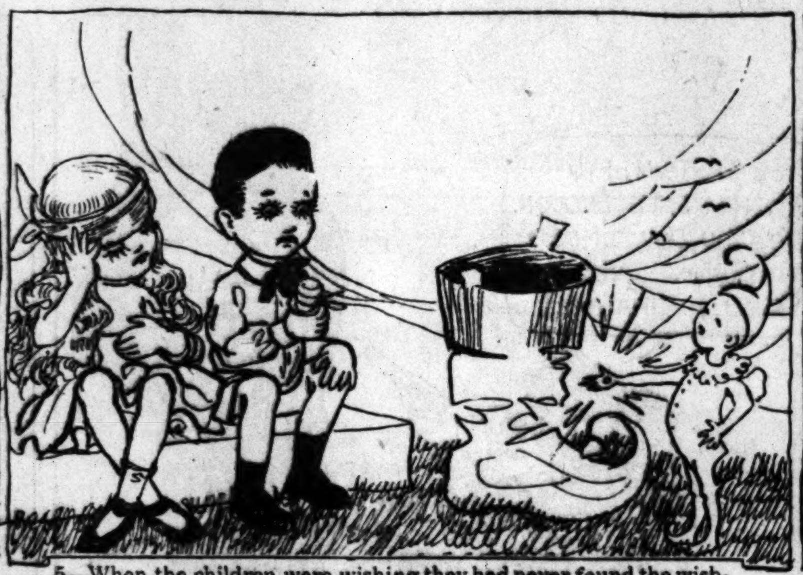
2—The children both climbed into the great boot and Son Bud wished with all his heart for a pocketknife, and Sis wished with all her heart for a bicycle. Then they said, "Wishing boot, wishing boot, tinkle toe, heavy heel, tip top, hip hop, better than a Christmas shop."



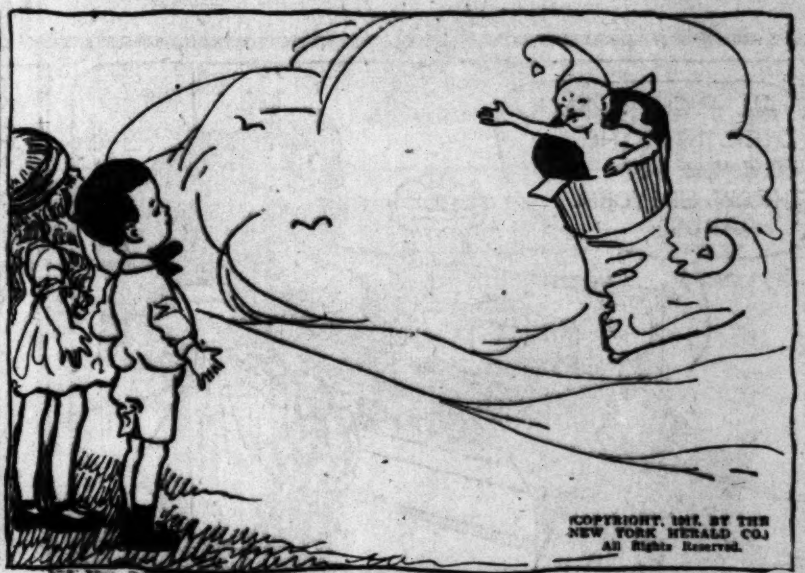
3—Behold! The mist cleared away and there was a pocketknife and a bicycle!



4—Son Bud had not had the knife three minutes when he cut his thumb, just as Father had said he would, and then Sis took an awful tumble and bumped her head on a stone.



5—When the children were wishing they had never found the wishing boot a tiny Elf came up and held a beautiful jewel out to them, and said, "I will give you this shining jewel, which is Contentment, for the wishing boot," and they were glad to make the exchange.



(COPYRIGHT, 1917, BY THE NEW YORK HERALD CO.) All Rights Reserved.

6—The Elf flew away with the wishing boot and I guess the children lost the precious jewel, for it is hard to keep. Anyway, all that about the wishing boot was just a dream. But Son Bud and Sis are content now not to have a knife or bicycle.

MR. TWEE DEEDLE.

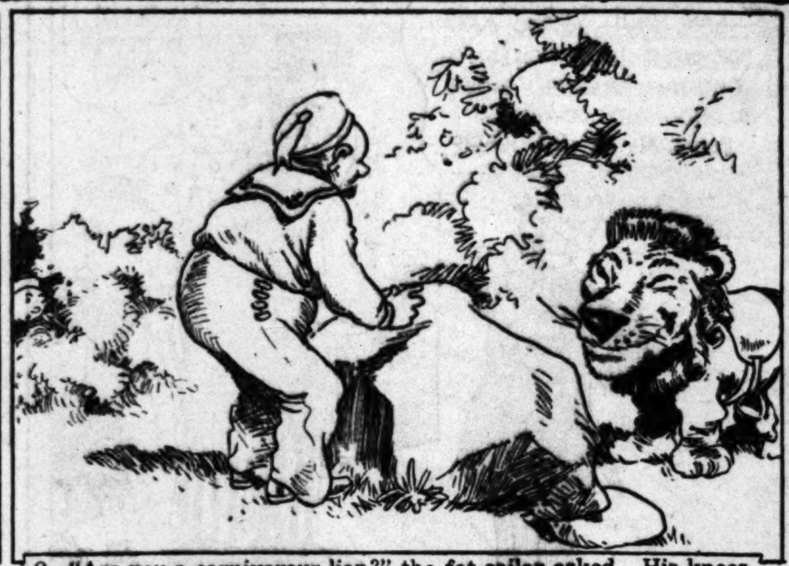
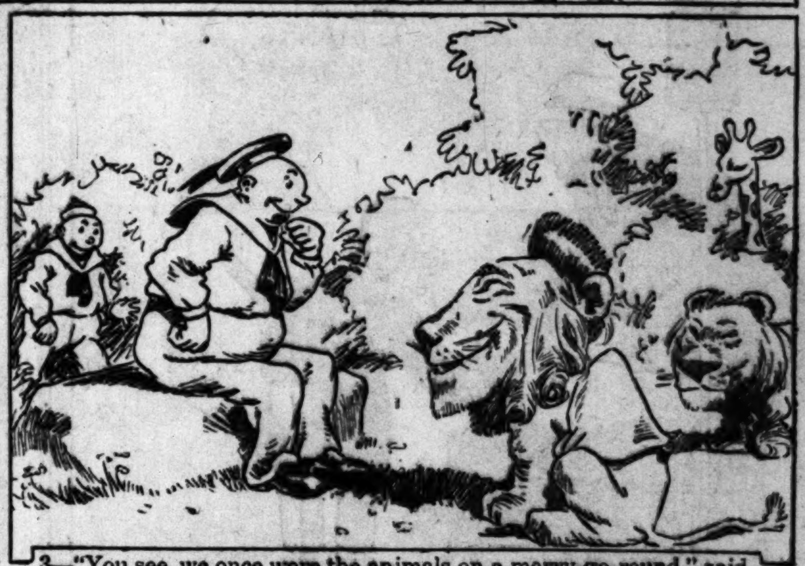
1—When our friends left the house of the Witchess after staying there all night and having a nice breakfast, they walked across the Star Plains singing a song.

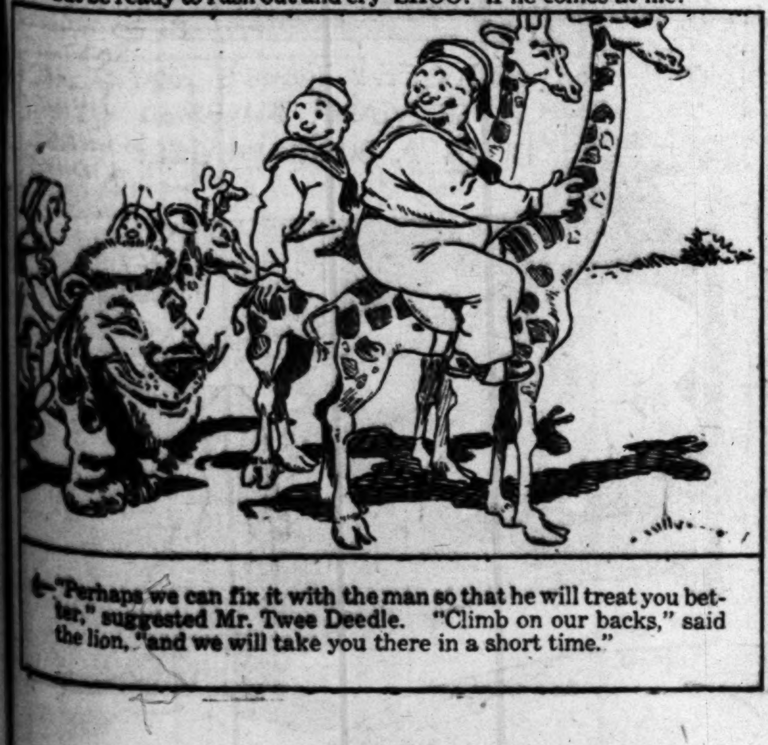
They came to a clump of bushes and heard voices at the other side. The fat sailor looked through and discovered a lion. "You stay here," he told the others, "and I will talk with him; but be ready to rush out and cry 'SHOO!' if he comes at me!"



2—"Are you a carnivorous lion?" the fat sailor asked. His knees shook just a little. "No," the lion replied, "I am a wooden lion." He smiled in such a friendly fashion that the fat sailor no longer trembled. "I am going out to see what they are talking about!" said Cousin Jim, as he walked from the bushes.



3—"You see, we once were the animals on a merry-go-round," said the lion, as other animals came from the bushes and joined him, "but we had to work all the time. The man would never let us have a day off to romp in the fields! So yesterday we decided to strike, and we left the merry-go-round!"



4—"Perhaps we can fix it with the man so that he will treat you better," suggested Mr. Twee Deedle. "Climb on our backs," said the lion, "and we will take you there in a short time."

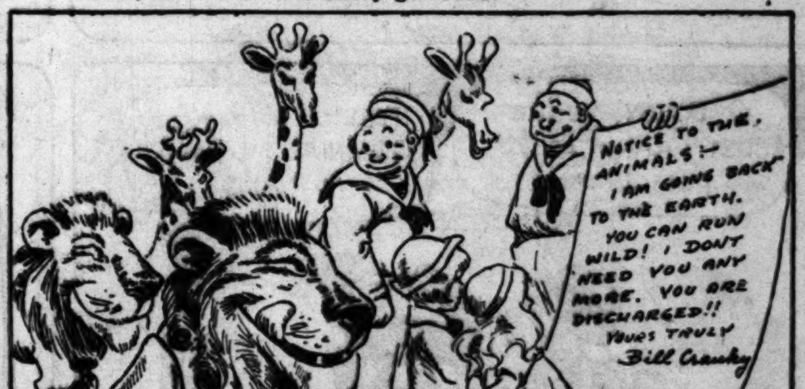
JOHN GRUELLE

5—So each of our friends climbed upon an animal's back and raced across the Star Plains until they came to the merry-go-round. The man had gone and they found a note which he had written for the animals. All the animals had a hearty laugh when they read the note.



NOTICE TO THE ANIMALS:— I AM GOING BACK TO THE EARTH. YOU CAN RUN WILD! I DONT NEED YOU ANY MORE. YOU ARE DISCHARGED!! YOURS TRULY Bill Cranky

6—"Now we are free!" cried the lions, "and we can be wild animals!"

"I hope you will not be ferocious wild ones!" Dolly said. "Indeed not!" the animals all replied in chorus. "We will be tame wild animals, but we will be wild animals just the same—just as flowers are wild!"

"We know you will have a delightful time!" Mr. Twee Deedle said, "for those who are free are happy and those who are happy are always good!"

NAMING THE VEGETABLE BAG

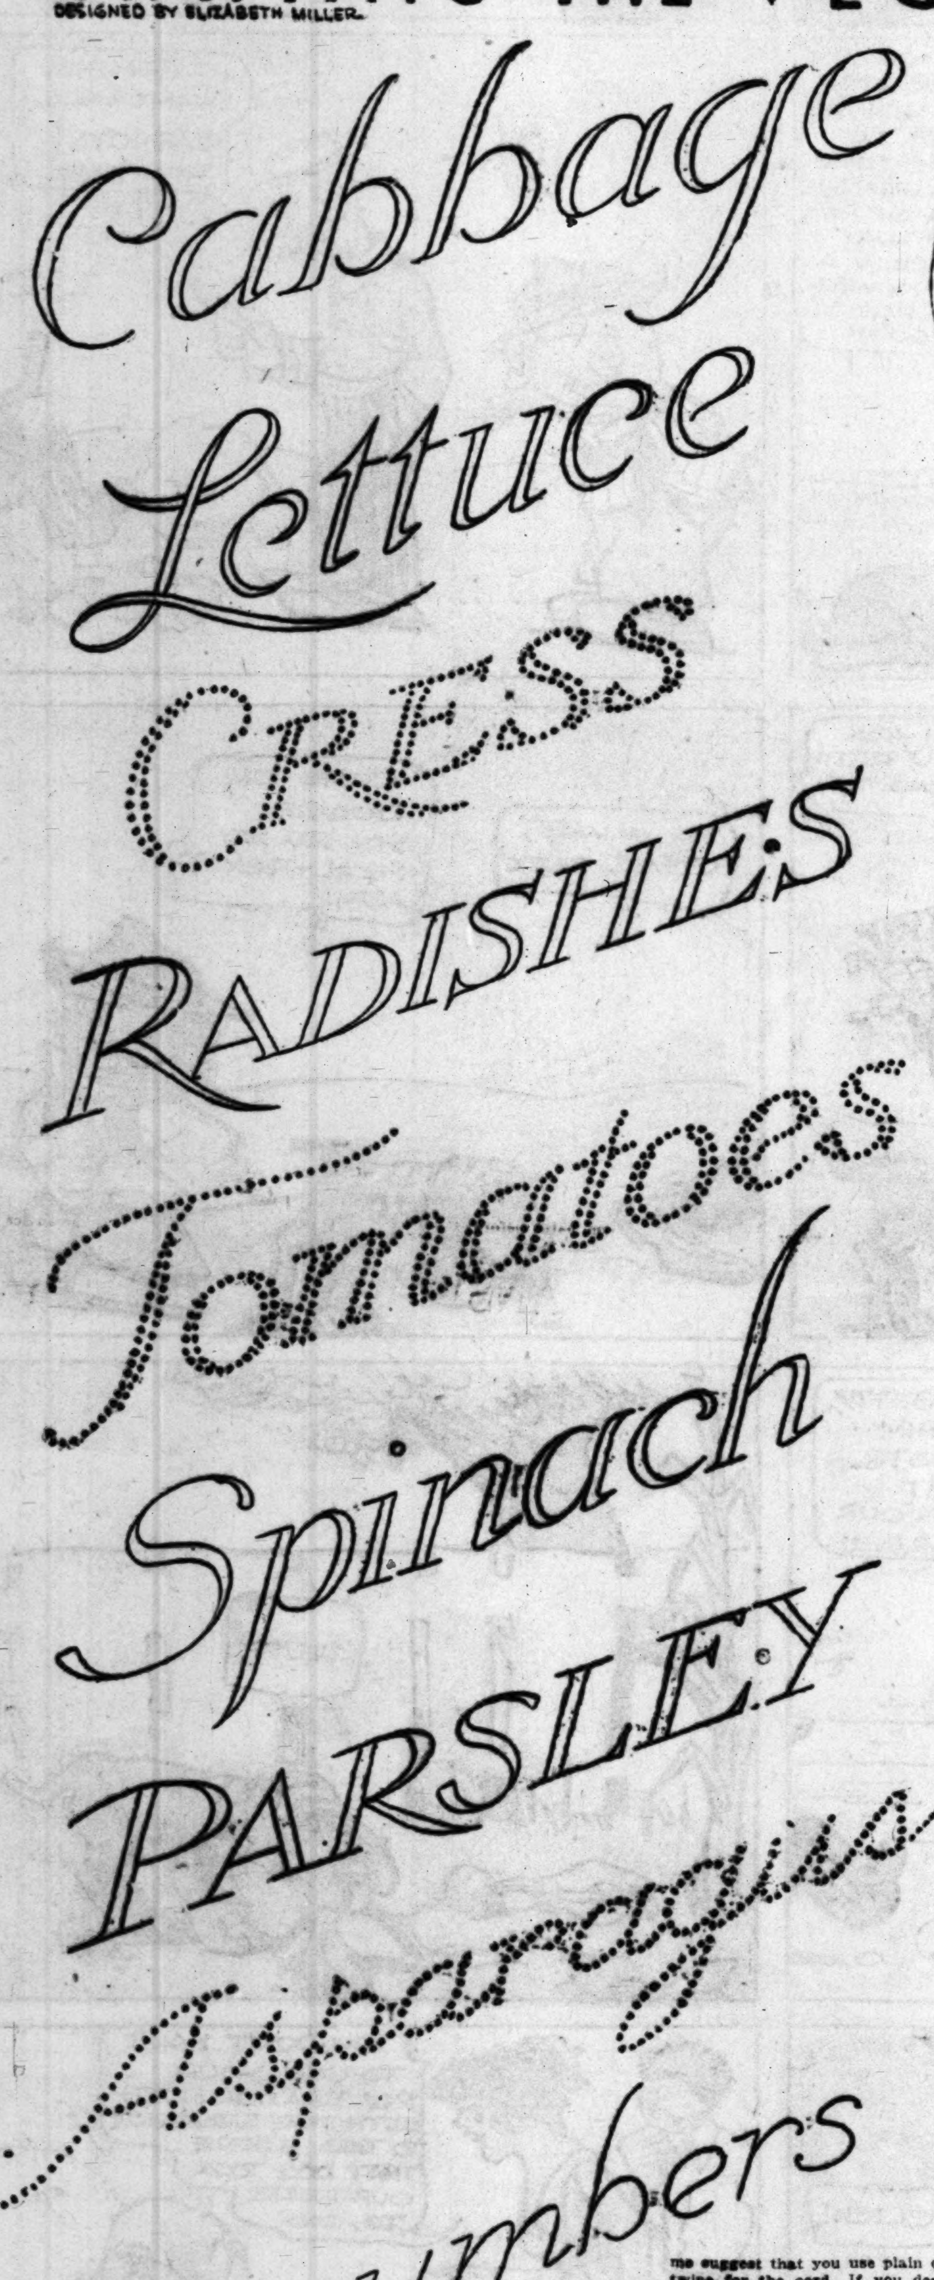
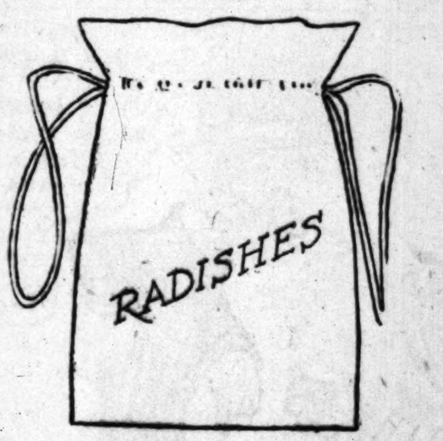
DESIGNED BY ELIZABETH MILLER





FOOD has ever been a necessity, but as many of us realize it has not been valued sufficently in this country, that is not until this last great war of many nations brought to mind the precious asset that food really is to a country. This being the case it is up to every person, but particularly the housewife, to preserve food to the nth degree. That is, there must be no waste. As much food as possible must be dried or canned, and that which is meant for immediate use must be properly cared for. I think it would be interesting to take a refrigerator tour, looking into the refrigerators in homes, say, in a block or two and find out how the food is kept. I'll warrant there would be many surprising revelations. The lack of system would be most evident. To help the housewife of good intentions along I suggest that she make bags for the various vegetables that are to be placed in her refrigerator, so that the food can be kept in a clean and orderly manner. And then to save time I advise that each bag be marked, for it does take time to peer into an unmarked bag to see whether it contains parsely, radishes, cress or salad.

The names given on the page are of vegetables most commonly in use, the individual can supply others to suit her needs. It will be an easy matter to transfer the letters, and it will be equally as easy to embroider them. Outline stitches, French knots, or the popular long stitch can be employed for the purpose. The name and the work will be most effective if it is placed on the bag in a slanting position.

As for the material for the bag I would suggest that muslin, huckaback or cheesecloth be used. Of course, the size of the bag will vary, the one for celery, asparagus or cucumbers, being much longer than the one for parsley, radishes or cress. Each bag can be run up on the sewing machine in the twinkling of an eye, a French seam being employed for the sake of neatness. At the top a casing should be made thru which a cord can be run. And right here let me suggest that you use plain ordinary twine for the cord. If you desire you might dye it to match the color used for embroidering the name. Snap fasteners can be substituted for the cord idea if one prefers.

If the bag idea does not appeal to you for your own use don't let the suggestion get by you, for it might be just the thing you will need for the shower gift.

The letters can be used for other purposes besides labeling the bags. This places another value on the design.

Crochet Him a Bean-bag

THE very small boy who has not quite arrived at the stage of a baseball or handball will find the beanbag a welcome toy. If he doesn't, sister will, so crochet it anyway, and you won't have any trouble getting rid of it.

First of all, make a round pillow of ticking or unbleached muslin and fill it with the regulation soup bean. Then proceed to cover it with two mats crocheted from mercerized cottons in the succeeding shade of blue, pink, green, brown, red, lavender and yellow. A rim of black will set off the colors. Join the two mats with a slip-stitch around the edge of the bean pillow.

Novelty Guest Towels

WITH the present soaring prices of linen and cotton goods and the consequent increased expense of household linen and toweling, the news that ordinary crash toweling in striped and cross-bar patterns is being adapted to toilet and guest room use is welcome. Toweling of this character, which has hitherto been used principally in the capacity of tea towels, may be purchased very reasonably either by the yard or piece. It is a simple matter to cut it into the required length and turn back a narrow quarter inch hem at each end. Instead of hemming this either by machine or hand, a very attractive effect will be procured if a double thread, one white and the other the color of the stripe or plaid in the towel, is used with the long-and-short stitch. This not only adds to the decorative effect, but fastens the hem very securely without the bother of hemming. If the towel is marked in cross-bar pattern it will adapt itself readily to a cross-stitch design or cross-stitched initials. If the pattern is striped any ample design in horizontal and vertical lines done in an outline stitch may be used.

The Shade They Made

THE bride and groom had just moved in. It was a rented house and, of course, could admit of only slight alterations to suit their artistic tastes. The thing which hit them in the face as they stood in the hall with their furniture standing around in confusion was the three-branched hanging electric feature with pink—think of it, pink—glass shades and their living room was to be blue and yellow and brown.

"It can't be," said the little bride. "I can't stand pink shades with these lovely yellow and blue chintzes and reps. I've got to think of something."

Like lots of brides and grooms, money wasn't awfully plentiful, but the little bride found half a yard of yard-wide silk in the upholstery department cost only 38 cents and that two yards of gilt galloon cost only 24. She experimented with samples of silk until she found a yellow which hid the pink glass sufficiently and yet emitted a comfortable yellow glow. From the silk and the braid she covered those glass shades, just shirring on straight pieces of the silk, holding it tight at the bottom with the braid, and hiding the shirring at the top with more braid. It didn't take her more than an hour to cover the three of them, and you should have seen the difference. It was a different room.

YOU'LL NEVER REGRET IT

IF YOU TAKE THE TIME TO MAKE A SET OF VEGETABLE LIKE THOSE SUGGESTED ON THE PAGE. THEY MAKE ORDERLINESS, FOR ECONOMY OF FOOD AND TIME AND STRONG WORDS OF PRAISE.

NOR WILL YOU FEEL SORRY FOR MAKING SOME OF THE TRIMMINGS FOR WHICH PATTERNS ARE GIVEN TO YOU FREE CHARGE WHEN YOU AWAKE TO THE FACT THAT TRIMMING THIS SORT IS THE MODISH KIND JUST NOW.

How to Make a Round Pillow

THOSE lovely new round pillows which have come to stay in the decorative scheme of things seem so easy to make, and are too, once you know how to start them. First of all, it is not necessary to have a round pillow for a foundation, tho it is not a bad idea if you have to buy a new one. A square pillow can have the corners of the lining rounded off and will be just as good under a round cover.

Some of the pillows have a plain piece of material rounded for the back, and the same for the front and are punched in at the middle of the front and held that way with button or bit of stuffed silk fruit.

Others have a shirred front and either a plain or shirred back. To make this kind take two yards of material just a few inches wider than the width of your pillow. Fold this in half and run a casing thru the fold just wide enough for a soft cotton padding cord to run thru. Over halfway to each edge run similar casings, and then gathering strings thru the edges. Hold the gathered strip around the pillow so that the middle cord runs around the edge. Then arrange the gathers so that they radiate evenly from the centers. Join the ends with overcasting, hiding the seam under some gathers.

Now to cover the gatherings at the centers, use a motif of cretonne, some of the silk fruit, a covered button mold or a crocheted motif. attractive pillow of this made of gold color silk shirrings were covered with crocheted from Chinese blue tassel of the silk issued center of the front motif. embellish the pillow, the ring was gone over with stitch or double overcasting blue silk.

The same idea was followed bolster or "prayer pillow," sometimes called. A strip ed pink wool was used center. To this was strips of blue poplin—a low material, by the way. sels and caps to fit over ends of the pillow were from the pink wool. The were run with pink wool.

A Shoestring

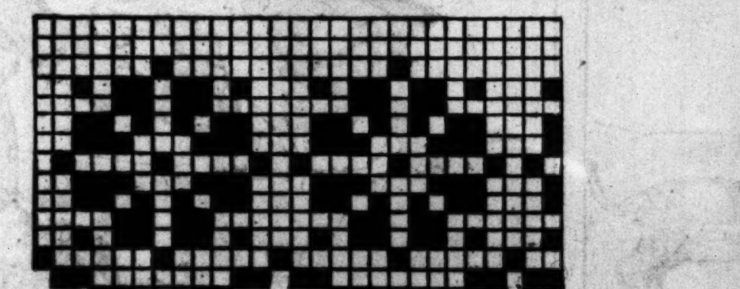
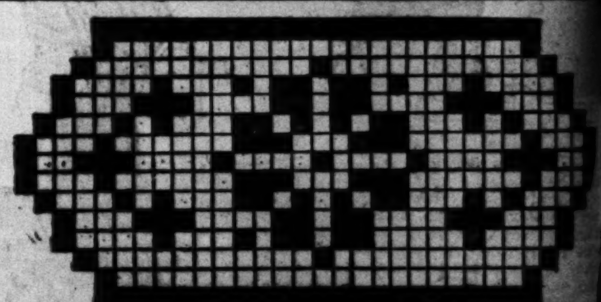
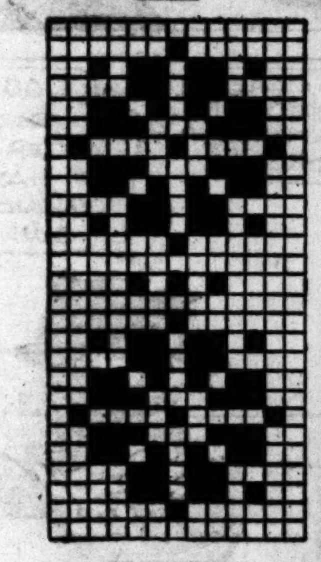
DID you ever lose from your shoestring like swearing as man who loses his collar so, you will appreciate a enable you to put the end of the lace. with tissue paper and whole thing into mucilage to dry and you will have nerve-racking moments force the raveled end lets in the shoe.

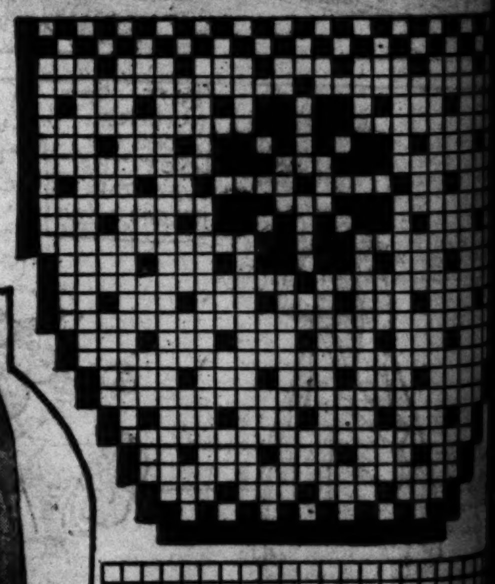
No Prettier Trimming Than Crocheted Filet

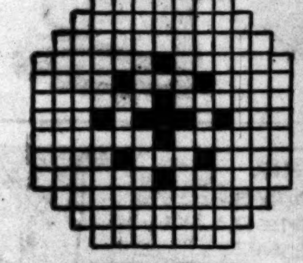


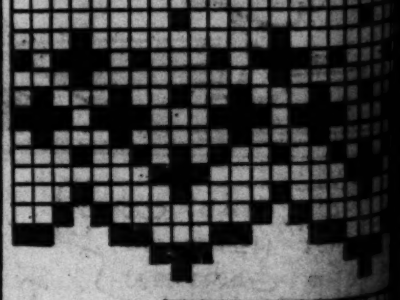


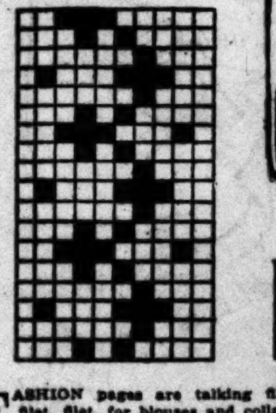


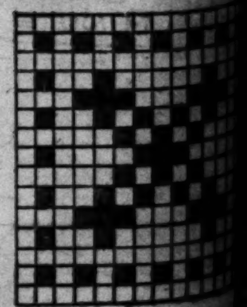
How Filet Is Modishly Used

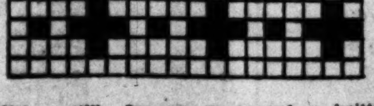


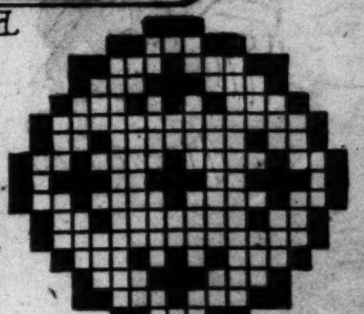












FASHION pages are talking filet, filet, filet, for blouses and collars, whole frocks and undermuslins.

In fact there is no lovelier trimming, nor none more modish, than the filet lace, both the real and the more or less good imitations. There are some people who would never use imitation lace, but this is a notion which is gradually dying out, because of the prohibitive prices of hand-made lace and the fact that until recently women were not making it themselves.

Since filet is again in fashion, and since it is so easy to make, there is no excuse for not having at least one filet-trimmed garmet in the wardrobe. A roll of filet insertion, or edging in one's bag unlike the rolling stone will gather many stitches if it is at hand for odd moments when idle fingers can't keep still. One can go on and on knitting on such a roll and have it in readiness for almost anything from a collar to a guest towel.

Of course, the filet that is used for trimming cotton blouses, neckwear and undergarments must be done very finely or it will not begin to take the place of the real filet lace of which it is a beautiful imitation. Real filet lace is, of course, not crocheted but woven into open meshes and patterns, but a finely crotchted bit of filet will baffle the beholder until a close examination shows the small stitches. Any number of cotton from fifty to 100 will make good dress trimming filet. To follow the designs shown measure your brand of cotton in different numbers until you find one that crochets eight meshes to an inch. Anything heavier will make the designs larger.

Two coverings for buttons are shown which will be welcomed by the woman who likes these little hand touches for her blouse or frock. One shows a center motif which will be just enough for a dainty trimming, while the other is slightly heavier where a more decided pattern is desired. A half dozen buttons covered with the latter design would be sufficient trimming for a handkerchief linen blouse delicate color.

WHY?

WHY SHOULD A WOMAN GIVE THE IMPRESSION THAT SHE IS TEN OR FIFTEEN YEARS OLDER THAN SHE REALLY IS BY WEARING A WOEBEGONE EXPRESSION WHEN ALL SHE NEED DO IS TO GIVE SPECIAL ATTENTION TO HER FEET? IF THE HUMAN FAMILY WERE RATIONAL IN CHOOSING FOOTWEAR AND IN CARING FOR THE FEET, THERE WOULD BE FEWER FOOT AILMENTS AND FEWER CRIMES. FOR PROOF OF THIS STARTLING STATEMENT, READ WHAT MRS. SYMES REVEALS TODAY.

The person the least trouble with the feet to the matter immedi- it is recognized as necessary as well as physical health one should be correctly fitted and that intelligent care the feet from the youngest the oldest person.

the biggest essential is prop- Some persons, especially imagine that feet cannot pos- neat unless they are small. a great mistake, for however a shoe may be, if it is too short or narrow it will be sure to bulge out at the sides and wear into an ugly shape.

Every pair of shoes should be so fitted that they permit the free movement of the foot. The toes should have room to extend and bend. The most room should be over the great toe rather than over the middle toe. The ideal heel for a shoe is the one that is of medium height, has straight sides and extends well forward on the inner side. Such a type of heel gives secure support for the weight of the body and supplies a portion of the power necessary for walking. Of course, the person with foot trouble must have shoes fitted accordingly.

The foot looks far better in a long shoe because it keeps its shape and takes away from the width of the foot.

It is advisable to try on shoes in the evening, when the foot is at its largest. By following this suggestion one is sure to secure comfortable-fitting shoes.

The fit of the stockings is quite as important as the fit of the shoes. Ofttimes a short stocking has caused one to believe that the shoes were too short. On the other hand, the stocking must not be too long or uncomfortable folds will be formed. Did you ever try pulling the stocking forward before putting on your shoe? Get the habit—it's one that makes for foot comfort.

It has been said that ill-fitting footwear has been responsible for many crimes. You may doubt this theory, but you must not fail to realize the dangers of improper fitting footwear to the future health and happiness of mankind.

And now for the treatment of foot troubles.

Hygienically there are three things that the feet need to be healthy. There are exercise, water and rest. People forget that the feet are hard workers and have to bear the burden of the whole body. They should be bathed every night in lukewarm or cold water. A little salt added to the bath water tones the muscles and tissues. An epsom salts bath has a hardening effect on the skin. Never put the feet in very hot water. The extreme heat makes the skin tender. A few drops of toilet water in the rinsing water, which should be cold, is soothing when tired.

To relieve the burning sensation, which is felt more keenly in hot weather than any other time, use a tablespoon of borax to a large basin of lukewarm water.

After using cold water on the feet it is important to dry them thoroly. Failure to do this may result in rheumatism. After drying the skin, massage the feet for a few minutes. Begin at the toes and rub with a firm but gentle pressure, with an upward movement up the leg.

The best exercise for keeping the feet in splendid condition is the heel and toe movement, raising up on the toes and slowly returning to the heels, walking on the toes and bending at the knees.

The benefits of walking to the feet cannot be overestimated. Of course, this exercise must be taken in proper fitting shoes. Take a natural stride, keep the knees bent and slide rather than strike the foot on the ground, the ball of the foot touching first.

Soaping the stocking at the heel and toe will prevent friction and will also prolong the life of the hosiery. If by any chance a shoe has rubbed a blister on the foot, place a piece of adhesive tape over the spot and you will be able to walk with comfort.

Excessive perspiration of the feet is a common ailment. It makes cold feet in the winter, and in warm weather causes the feet to burn and blister. One of the best treatments for this ailment is warm bath before retiring at night.

After thoroly drying the foot, especially between the toes (this is necessary to prevent corns), rub olive oil or cocoa butter into the foot. Do not leave an excessive amount of oil on the surface as it will soil the bedclothing and will not prove of any benefit to the feet. Witch hazel rubs in the morning are also helpful. Before putting on the stocking, sprinkle talcum over the foot and then sprinkle some of the powder in the shoe. Powdered alum is another splendid thing to sprinkle in the shoe. It has proved of great relief to those suffering from callous spots. By the way, these should be rubbed daily with toilet pumice and cocoa butter rubbed into the hardened skin.

There is nothing that will bring old age more quickly than foot troubles. This fact, if nothing else, should urge every reader to follow the advice given.

Incorrect Carriage

My dear Mrs. Symes.

I am a young girl and have a most distressingly awkward walk. I cross my feet in front of me somehow when I take a step, and it makes me look exceedingly funny. What can I do to correct this fault? Thanking you in advance for the good advice which I feel sure you will give me, I am,

AWKWARD.

Bow-legs are sometimes responsible for this peculiar way of walking. One way to correct it is to practice walking with the limbs spread quite far apart and the toes turned out. A physician might be consulted if the home treatment fails.

For Graying Hair

My dear Mrs. Symes.

Please let me know how to use sage tea for coloring the hair, or name some other harmless method.

T. G.

Below I am printing a formula for preparing sage tea with directions for using. I am printing also a walnut stain which is harmless.

Sage Tea

|---|---|
| Alcohol | 3 ounces |
| Green tea | 3 ounces |
| Garden sage | 3 ounces |

To make the liquid, take 1 ounce of tea to 4 ounces of water; 1 ounce of sage to 4 ounces of water.

Let each stand for several hours, then strain and take 3 ounces of the liquid of each, and mix with 3 ounces of alcohol.

Keep the mixture tightly corked, to prevent evaporation.

Walnut Stain for Hair

Four ounces of walnut skins, beaten to a pulp, to which is added pure alcohol, 16 ounces.

Let stand eight days and strain. Then apply to the hair with a small brush.

Various Questions

My dear Mrs. Symes.

I would be greatly obliged if you would tell me how I could get rid of a liver spot right on the front of my neck. It isn't very dark, yet it is noticeable. I have had it about two years. Is there anything that I could rub on it; my liver is in good condition.

Also, what would it cost to have hair removed from the lip with the electric needle? I haven't very much superfluous hair, but I would like to have it removed. I have used peroxide regularly, but it didn't help a bit. Can you tell me how to remove superfluous hair from my arms? I fear it would be too expensive to have it removed by the electric treatment. I would like to have something that would remove the hair for good.

I had the nerve taken from my front tooth, and now it is beginning to get darker than my other teeth. Is there any enamel or anything that I could put on, or must I get a new tooth? My other teeth are very even and white.

What is the cause of swollen veins on the hands? Mine swell so much that I am really ashamed of my hands. Can you tell me of an inexpensive polish to bleach the nails?

I have a scar on my hand. Is there anything I can do to get rid of this unsightly blemish, which has been there since I was 1 year old?

X. Y. Z.

The spot may yield to the freckle lotion which I am printing below; the lotion is recommended for discolorations as well as freckles.

I regret that I can give you no idea of the cost of the electric treatment for the removal of superfluous hair. The peroxide is used for bleaching purposes only; in some few cases it is effectual after constant application in destroying the roots. Below I am printing a depilatory which you might use on your arms; it is effectual but not permanent.

It would be unwise for you to tamper with the troublesome tooth. You had better see your dentist.

Swollen veins may be caused by high blood pressure. Try keeping the hand upraised as much as possible. Diluted peroxide applied with a bit of absorbent cotton on the end of an orangewood stick is excellent for bleaching the nails.

It is most unwise to attempt home treatment with a scar of so long standing. An expert dermatologist might be consulted.

Whitening Paste for Freckles and Brown Spots

|---|---|
| Salicylic acid | 60 grains |
| Bay rum | 4 ounces |

Label. Apply night and morning with a soft cloth or sponge. This lotion soon produces a slight roughness of the skin, which should be subdued by the use of glycerin or starch.

The following may also be tried in cases of obstinate freckles.

|---|---|
| Lactic acid | 3 ounces |
| Glycerin | 4 ounces |
| Rosewater | 1 ounce |

This is to be gently applied by means of a camel's-hair brush. If the skin becomes irritated or sore, omit one or two days' treatment.

A Depilatory

|---|---|
| Sulphide of soda or calcium sulphide | 100 grains |
| Chalk | 100 grains |

Mix thoroly, and keep dry in well-corked bottle until wanted for use. Take enough to cover the part to be denuded and add warm water to it until the proper consistency is secured. Spread over the hairy surface, and allow to remain for from one to five minutes, according to the nature of the growth and the susceptibility of the skin; then scrape off with a blunt blade—a paper knife, for example. It should be removed, as in every case with a depilatory, when the burning sensation is produced. Too long contact with the skin should be avoided, and immediately after the hair has been removed the denuded surface should be gently washed with warm water and a cold cream, or a bland oil applied to prevent irritation.

Coaxing a Curl

My dear Mrs. Symes.

Believing greatly in your recommendations, I would be very thankful if you would advise me regarding one difficulty. I have chestnut-brown hair and wear it down in curls all around. It is extremely curly on the ends, but near my face it is not so very curly. Can you recommend something that I might apply to my hair after curling it with the iron to retain the curl?

BLUE EYES.

I am printing a formula which may help. A wise use of the curling iron is not to be decried, but it is preferable where possible to dispense with it except in emergencies.

Hair-Curling Lotion

|---|---|
| Potassium carbonate | 120 grains |
| Ammonia water | 1 fluid dram |
| Alcohol | 12 fluid drams |

Rosewater enough to make 16 fluid ounces. In using, moisten the hair, adjust it loosely and it will curl upon drying.

Obviously Eye Strain

My dear Mrs. Symes.

I am constantly troubled with little sties and my eyes are bloodshot now and then. I do not care to wear glasses and thought perhaps you could suggest some lotion to take their place. Thanking you for any advice that you may give me, I am,

WORRIED.

If you are a wise little girl you will take advantage of that precious "ounce of prevention" and pay a visit to an oculist. Wearing spectacles may prick your vanity, but going without them will do irreparable damage to your eyes. Below I am printing a lotion which will give you temporary relief from sties.

For a Sty

The best thing to do for a sty is to bathe the eyes frequently with warm boracic lotion (5 grains to 1 ounce of water) and apply at night piece of boracic lint wrung out of boiling water; cover with a piece of jaconet and a pad of cotton-wool on top; fix with a bandage.

Sandwiches with red, white and red, white and blue stick and ices come under the affairs of this kind. One finds the "canteen" at the naval booths. Here is to be found enough lemonade, grape juice, etc., "to float a battleship." Real practicalities in the form of bandages, disinfectants and the whole gamut of household remedies are to be found at the Red Cross tent.

Old Glory is seen floating atop of the various tents, from porch pillars and from stakes; red, white and blue bunting may be wound about posts, draped from porch rails, draped about tables, etc., and there might even be a Maypole if space permits. I it necessary to suggest that this be draped and beribboned with the colors of our national emblem? And so much for the decorative scheme.

Now what would a festival of this kind be without fortune telling and at least one contest? Here is a novel way of telling fortunes, incidentally a sure way of increasing the proceeds. Place a huge wheel on an axle. Number the spokes and raffle a good lengthy fortune off.

Another way is to have long varicolored cords attached to the top of a stake. Give each cord a path or circuit all to itself. The fortune seekers are obliged to follow their respective strings to the end of their course. Here beneath a stone may be found the fortune. As already suggested, contests are a lucrative suggestion, and invariably a hugely entertaining feature as well. One of the very funniest of all is a pickle race. Each of the contestants holding a pickle on a tablespoon enters the footrace. Of course, if the pickle wabbles off the unfortunate owner is "out." A "shooting gallery" with prizes for those who hit the bullseye will be appropriate.

Before leaving the subject entirely, let me suggest that if colorful costumes are in order, what could be so altogether charming and gay as a bevy of aids appearing in the costumes of our allies? Then if you arranged for shadowgraphs, wouldn't they fit in beautifully?

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Several Queries

MY DEAR Mrs. Adams.

Will you please inform me on the following problems? How long before commencement should the invitations be sent out?

Is it proper to wear a gold watch bracelet with an evening gown?

When no olive fork is provided, how should one convey olives to the mouth and the pits therefrom?

A SENIOR.

Invitations to a commencement should be sent out ten or fifteen days in advance of the date set.

A watch bracelet of elaborate design may be worn with an evening dress.

Olives are classified among the finger foods, so called; they are conveyed to the mouth with the fingers, the pits are removed in the same way.

Cause for Debate

My dear Mrs. Adams.

I am a constant reader of your columns. I am 16 years of age and am keeping company with a boy whom I have learned to love. I never asked him his age until a few nights ago, when he told me that he was 14 years old. Do you advise me to continue going with him?

UNHAPPY.

The difference in your ages is certainly not palpable, but in consideration of the fact that both of you are but the merest children, it is better and wiser to leave love out of the question altogether. If both of you are enmeshed I would advise you to separate, if not forever, at least until you are a bit older and more experienced. I have assured my readers many times of the elasticity of one's affections at so tender an age. Therefore, if you can, decide on being just good friends, it would infinitely be wiser for you to discontinue your acquaintance with each other.

Which Shall It Be?

My dear Mrs. Adams.

I am a girl of 16 and I have a young man friend of whom my parents do not approve. They prefer another young man whom I do not like. The one whom I prefer has an automobile, and my parents object to his taking me out.

What would you advise me to do, continue my acquaintance with the young man whom I like or go with the one of my parents' choice?

SORROWFUL.

If you keep in mind the one big fact that your parents, of all people, have your interest at heart, that they are more solicitous of your future happiness than any one else, perhaps you will better appreciate their decision. Remember, too, that you are very young as yet, and that as judges of human nature they have years of experience in their favor. Trust them more, obey them this time, and some time you may be happy that you did their bidding.

A Different Set

My dear Mrs. Adams.

I have read your splendid advice to others, and hope that you will help me.

Until recently we lived in a small town where I associated with schoolmates, but thru my father's business we have been thrown in society where most of the people are better educated than myself. Their conversation is often above me, for instance, their reference to classics and their quotations from famous people. Now what would you suggest in studies and action, besides reading current magazines, as I must continue to associate with these people? Thanking you for your reply, I am,

MARIE L. C.

It is advisable that you begin a course of study in literature under a competent instructor. Your teacher will map out the best books of each period, and those that are standard. My advice to you is read, read, read worthwhile books if you would broaden yourself.

Various Questions

My dear Mrs. Adams.

Please advise me regarding the following:

Should a young lady, accompanied by a young man at church, make her own offering when the collection plate is passed? If so, how much?

After eight months of constant friendship with a young man, may a lady suggest places of amusement which she desires to attend in the young man's company without his asking for the suggestion?

When not ushered should a gentleman precede a lady when entering a church or theater? If there is an usher, should not the lady precede the gentleman?

When leaving a theater, does it make any difference who precedes? For example, if the lady is on the exit side, should she wait for the gentleman to pass and then follow or should she go first?

Should the gentleman hold the lady's hat and gloves during a show?

Upon being introduced to young people, is it not proper to reply: "Mr. X, I am very glad to know you," or "Mr. X, I am glad to meet you"? Does "Miss Y, how do you do?" serve the purpose equally well.

Upon meeting a young lady unattended on the street, is it not proper for the lady with the gentleman to ask her to have refreshments with them, providing that the gentleman is desirous of her company? Or after she has talked to both for several minutes, would it be better just to go on and leave her to her own resources?

Is it proper for a young lady to permit a young man who has been friends with her for eight months to kiss her good night?

Thanking you so much for any information which you may give me, I am, GRATEFUL.

Yes, the lady should make her own offering; it is customary to give a silver offering.

Unless the young man suggests an entertainment of some sort, it would not be quite proper for the lady to express her wishes in that regard. Of course, if it is a question of just where you are to go, the lady might offer a suggestion.

When not being ushered to seats, it is customary for the gentleman to precede. Otherwise the lady takes the precedence.

When leaving seats, it is the gentleman who follows.

No, it is not necessary for the escort to hold the hat and gloves of his companion.

Yes, any one of these expressions may be used when meeting people for the first time.

In consideration of the fact that the gentleman is acting host, the privilege of asking a third party belongs to him. Of course he would not do so, if his own partner were not desirous of the other's company.

Promiscuous familiarity between the sexes is not to be encouraged unless an engagement, or at least an "understanding" warrants it.

Name for Club

My dear Mrs. Adams.

We have read your valuable information in the paper and now we come for some. We, about eight or nine girls, have organized a club, and we do not know what to call it. We are girls from 13 to 16 years of age.

THE JOLLY BUNCH.

Some one of the following names might appeal to you: "Jollity Circle," "The Pleasure Teens," "The Happy Flappers" or "The Merry Seekers."

Of Different Opinion

My dear Mrs. Adams.

I am a married woman, but my parents were forced to take me away from my husband owing to his treatment of me. Now there are various male friends of mine who called on me previous to my marriage and who wish to call again. My mother approves, but my father objects. Won't you please tell me what I should do?

PERPLEXED.

Under the circumstances, I must agree with your father in this matter. You see, if you were divorced the renewed acquaintance with former suitors would not give cause for unkind comment. Otherwise you are open to criticism.

Undue Reticence

My dear Mrs. Adams.

Many girls invite me to accompany them to theaters, but I have to refuse because I cannot speak. I simply lose my speech. The girls act most unfriendly toward me after I refuse them. Will you please tell me what to do to overcome this misfortune?

"N."

Constant mingling with different people, reading, an intense interest in a hobby and constant going about ought to help you forget your shortcomings. Show an interest in your companion; do your "bit" toward entertaining her and seeing to her convenience. Then you will have little time to think about yourself and your inabilities.

Clothes in Which a Kid Can Be Happy

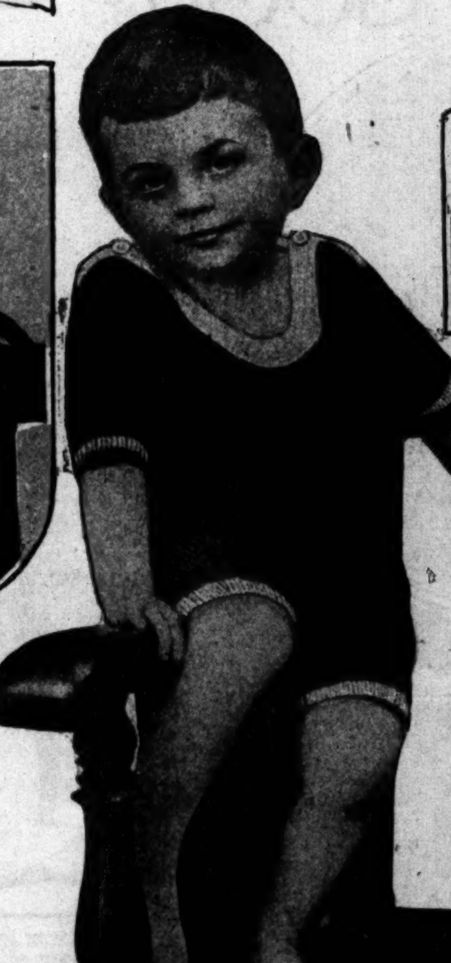
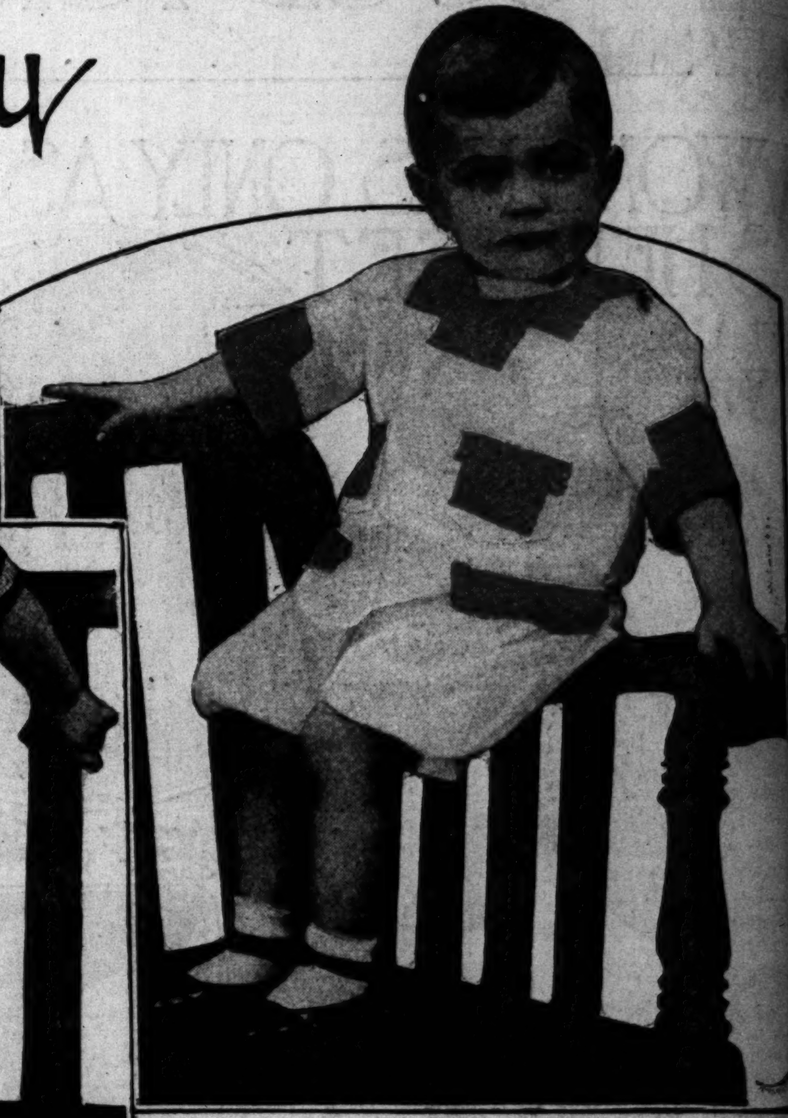
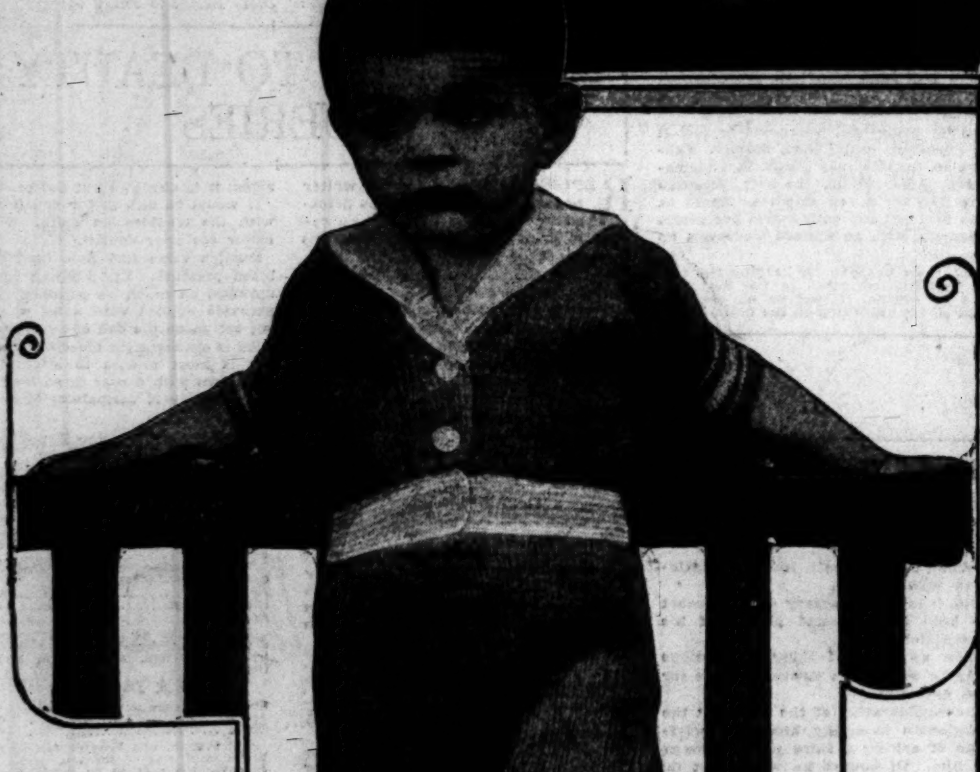
Smocking, the Standard Trimming for Tiny Clothes.



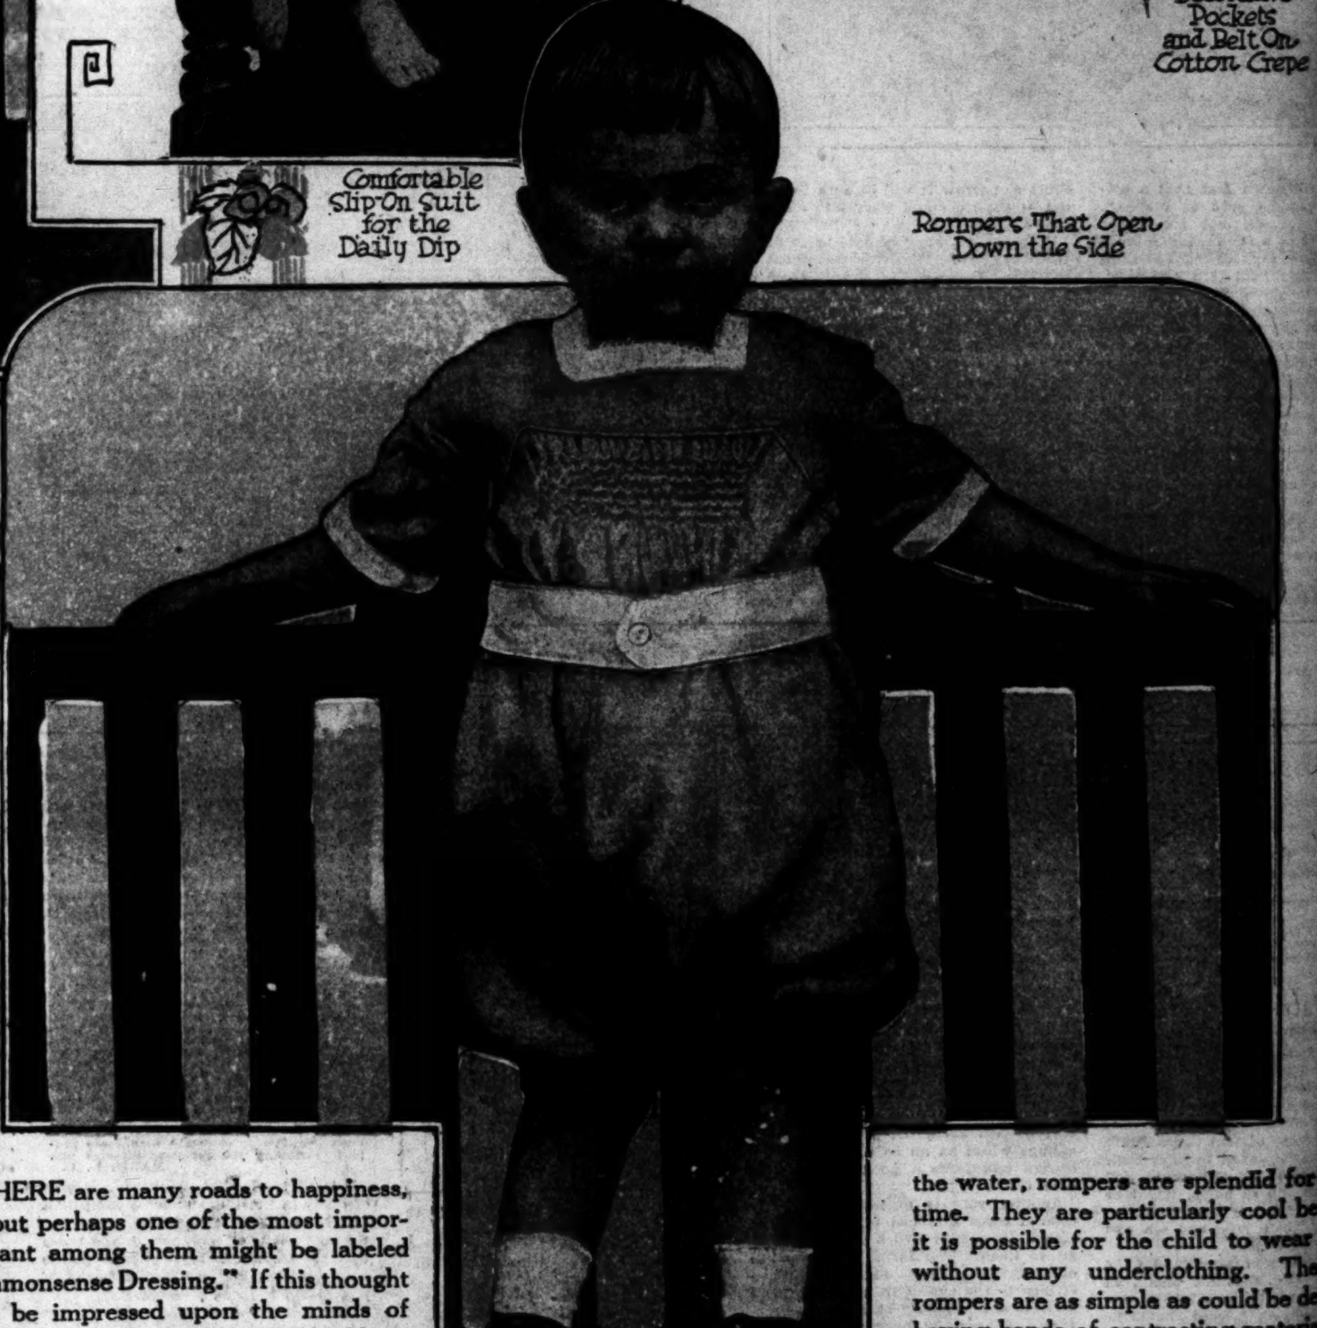
Comfortable Slip-On Suit for the Daily Dip



Decorative Pockets and Belt On Cotton Crepe



A Sailor Collar and a Belt Add Life to This One Piece Beach Suit



Rompers That Open Down the Side

THERE are many roads to happiness, but perhaps one of the most important among them might be labeled "Commonsense Dressing." If this thought could be impressed upon the minds of mothers or women in charge of children, how much happier would thousands of kiddies be. There are many fond mothers who think that the kiddies must be fussed up to look pretty. This is all wrong. The less furbelows, the better will be their dispositions and appearances. And in the hot weather, these words ring truer than ever.

The kid at the shore doesn't care about chemise lines, peg shirts or any of the other fashionable details of the moment. Give him a slip-on bathing suit, with sufficient wool in it to keep his body from being chilled, and he will be contented. The dark blue one illustrated is a good type. Or, the gray suit with the white collar, belt and bands will be to his liking, since there is nothing about it to hinder his progress in fighting the waves or building houses of sand.

For the kiddie who does not get near the water, rompers are splendid for p time. They are particularly cool bec it is possible for the child to wear th without any underclothing. The rompers are as simple as could be des having bands of contrasting material a few lines of smocking as trimming.

The suggestion of white rompers sound extravagant, but when cotton is used for them the idea is really practi since crepe requires no ironing. Blue p ets, belt and bands add a dainty touch color to the chic little rompers ph graphed.

A conspicuous feature of the old rompers is the line of opening down side of the trousers leg. Another im tant detail is the yoke, which is very esting because of its unusual shape.
